Just Garden Talk

By W. H. Lindberg

Last week I promised I would give you more detailed information about roses. To begin with, amateur gardeners should not pick rose varieties that have not been proven through long years of growing. Good thrifty plants of the old standby varieties should be selected.

In selecting the site for the rose bed, pick a spot that will get plenty of sun and definitely early morning sun. Early sun will dry the dew off and lessen a lot of black spot. If the soil does not have natural drainage, then it will have to be provided. This can be done by digging out a pit two and a half to three feet deep and put in at least six inches of large stone with about three inches of smaller stone following before the top soil is replaced, or you may just tile the rose bed.

The soil should be a good garden loam. If it is excessively heavy some sand and humus may be worked in. I definitely prefer to use cow manure generously when preparing the bed.

When planting roses be sure to get the graft node at least one inch below the surface of the soil. This will help prevent sprouting from the root stock. Be sure to firm the soil around the root tip and by all means make sure that all large air pockets are excluded when the other soil is filled in.

There will be more to follow on rose care at a later date.

West To Face First Baseball Contest Fri.

By Dave Miller

West baseball coach, George Williams, last week cut the varsity squad down from its previous 35 members to 20, the number which will probably make up the team in the team's first loop contest this Friday afternoon at East.

From the number, he kept six sophomores, 12 juniors and nine seniors.

Catchers are Bob Birle, Don Nafzger, Paul Thompson, Eugene Morris and Ron Farley, with the first two rounding into shape early. The pitchers include Phil Young, Jim Hamrick, Jim Wilks, Ted Fladt and Paul Ellingsworth. The latter is a left-hander and hits well enough to either pitch or play the outfield. All five will see plenty of service this season.

In the infield, Dick Culbertson, who covered first base all last year, will probably take it this year. However, Jack Winnestaffer, who will be back next year, looks good.

At second base, it's a toss-up between Dave Caton, Jim Burke and Fred Fenneken. All except Burke are juniors, and all are equally capable.

At shortstop it looks like Jack Pickens, who made all-city last year. Ed Easterly is another candidate for the keystone position. At third base Bill Thrush, a returnee from last year, looks good enough to fill the bill, with Russ Friend still in the running for the position.

Dick Kirk is a strong contender for the outfield position. He was a member of the team last year, and on the 1948 all-city team, in center field; Ron McElwee will be left; and Morris Dobbs in right. Others who will see action in the field will be Wade Williams, Jerry Solinger, George Schmidt and Bill South.

On Friday, the Cowboys will trek to Harley field to encounter a tough East nine. The Tigers have six lettermen back from last year's won-6, lost-3 team. They are Ken Mizzele, Ralph Cheney and Ted Georgou, outfielders; Tom Fallon and Phil Linhart, pitchers, and George Powers, catcher.

On the following Tuesday the Cowboys will play host to Linden McKinley. Linden has lettermen such as catcher, Bob Parker; Johnny Hayes and Don Vallmuth, pitchers; infielders, Dan Dover and Don Wickiser.

The West team played a practice game last Tuesday afternoon against Mifflin and won 21-4. Linden McKinley played the same team Friday afternoon in a practice tilt, also, and tied them, 3-3. The game was called in the seventh because of cold weather. Paul Ellingsworth of the Cowboys was the only player of the day to hit for the circuit. However, Dick Kirk and Dick Culbertson of the locals slammed triples, with the latter's blow coming with the bases jammed. The line score:

Mifflin	.....000 112 0—	4	4	5
West	.....533 208 x—21	12	3

Talbert, Moore (2), Yoest (5), and Hanna Tanner (5); Young, Fladt (3), Ellingsworth (5), Hamrick (?), and Birle, Nafzger (3), Farley (4), Morris (5), Thompson (?).

State School Employe Retires After 41 Years

Ina Stiltz, 1739 Sullivant-av, has retired from the Columbus State School, effective Apr. 1, after 41 years of service.

Miss Stiltz came to the school in 1908 from Noble County. Her first position was in the sewing room.

For the past 25 years she has been switchboard operator and information clerk of the institution. As information clerk, it was her duty to interview all guests of the institution and to answer questions concerning the patients and the school.

Miss Stiltz remarks that "there has been quite a change in the institution, since her arrival 41 years ago." Chief change that she has noted has been an increase in the number of patients and employes.

Since her retirement she plans to "remain at home and rest."

Household Hint

If a window is high, a low valance will make it look lower. A flower box on the window sill will also cut the height of the window and make it appear shorter.

Jesus Blesses Little Children — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred A. Knudsen

Scripture—Mark 10

Women brought their little children to Jesus to be blessed, and His disciples rebuked them, but Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

A man ran to Jesus and kneeled before Him, saying, "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" When Jesus told him to sell his goods and give to the poor, he went away, sorrowing, for he was rich.

James and John asked Jesus if, when He was in glory, they might sit one on each side of Him. Jesus said that he who would be great among men must minister, even as He the son of Man served.

A blind beggar, Bartimaeus by name, saw Jesus passing and called to Him, "Thou Son of David have mercy upon me." Jesus heard him, beckoned, and healed the man.

MEMORY VERSE—Mark 10:14.

Sullivant Ave. Mkt. Center To Open Soon

The new Farmers' Market Drive-In Shopping Center is slated for an opening "in the forepart of May," Don M. Casto of Casto Developers, 145 N. High-st, announced last week.

The new shopping center is located at the northeast corner of Sullivant and Huron-avs and will be "one of the largest buildings west of the river," Mr. Casto advised.

The completely modern Casto project will extend 210 feet by 150 feet with wing parking areas on the east and west sides of the building.

Another area, 160 by 150 feet, will be converted to a parking area later, Mr. Casto added. He hopes to be able to serve 750 cars when the proposed area is completed.

Six new stores will comprise the project. Space has been allotted to the Edwards Rexall Drug Department Store, Alber's Super Market, Lang's Dry Cleaners, the Holiday Sweets Bakery Shop, the Miracle 5c to $1 Store and Moore's of Ohio store.

Hilltopper Gets Top Advertising Post

New advertising manager of the Ohio Farmer, Pennsylvania Farmer and the Michigan Farmer is Eugene E. Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Porter, 271 S. Warren-av.

After 33 Years

On Feb. 10, 1916, Fred Hannawalt of Greenfield wrote a note, placed it in a water-tight bottle and tossed it into North Fork of Paint Creek over near Austin. On the outside of the paper he wrote: "Please open and read" this note: "The finder of this please write to Fred Hanawalt, Austin, Ohio. Age 16 years. Don't forget to write." A few days ago, 17-year-old Everett Irvin found the bottle along Paint Creek at Chillicothe. His father took the note to Hannawalt (They both work at the Mead Corp.), who had to go way back into boyhood memories to recall his writing the note and tossing the bottle into the creek.

Attending Evening School After Rearing 3 Children

By Myron T. Seifert

Age is no barrier to education, as is proven by a husband and wife team who are working towards high school degrees, after rearing three children.

becoming the usual thing in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Cox, 98 S. Brinker-av. Both are attending Columbus Evening High School every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights from 6 to 10.

Last term grade-cards released recently find this team high on the scholastic ladder at Evening High School.

Mr. Cox is one of Evening High's enthusiastic supporters. For more than a score of years he has been engaged in construction work, and it has been his desire to further his education so as to enable him to take Burning the midnight oil is up the engineering end of these activities.

For many years he has entertained the idea of additional schooling, but it was not until 1948 fall semester of Evening High got under way that he seriously considered the possibilities of becoming a student there.

So far he has earned for himself a full credit in biology, as well as a half credit each in algebra, and English, maintaining A-B grades.

The other half of the Cox family is Grace E. Cox, wife of Stephen. She entered Evening High with a two-fold purpose in mind: 1. To accompany her husband who wished to take up evening studies, and 2. To complete her credits for graduation.

The strangest part of it all is that the melody is not ending in the same key in which it started, for she has become such an ardent Evening High fan that she is now desirous of securing additional credits in Spanish so as to enroll at Ohio State. If all goes well she hopes to complete the language requirements next semester.

The Cox's have three children; Betty Cox Colmery, 22, wife of Merrill Colmery, West High graduate; Bob, 13, and Tom, 14. Both are students at West High School.

Students Learn Government Policy At West

By Myron T. Seiler

Students at West High School have a part in running their school and its many activities in much the same way that adults have a part in determining the policies of the government. Much of the practical democracy learned by students comes through participation in school government.

During the home room or registration period at the beginning of each term, 1000 senior high students are taught the principles of parliamentary procedure through nominations and elections for home room officers.

Each of the 36 rooms at West selects a slate of nominees and elects by ballot students qualified to hold the offices of home room president, secretary, business manager, civic chairman and welfare chairman.

The president-elect automatically becomes a representative at large to the school's student governing body, the Student Council. The home room secretary carries on the clerical duties incidental to his or her office, and acts as monitor and attendance-checker for the teacher. The business manager handles all financial and business matters affecting those enrolled in his home room and assists the business administration students in soliciting and distributing school publications and tickets. Civic and welfare chairmen lead all projects that mean better citizenship and morale.

MINING CAMPS COME BACK TO LIFE

Even the curious old sign on the side of the building at the extreme left, painted in a fit of anger instead of following copy, by an itinerant sign-painter, was restored along with other historic features of Georgetown, Colo., one of the many of the west's once-famous mining [illegible] recently restored as tourist attractions. The present population is 500—one a 10th of the population of boom times, but the town is due to boom again this summer as news of its novel restoration continues to spread and attract tourists.

THREE years ago Ben Draper of Georgetown, Colo., a research economist professionally, formed a company to recapture some of the glory that was Georgetown in the 1870s when it was the world's most famous silver mining camp.

The company bought up a goodly share of the town's defunct real estate and began mending and otherwise reviving its historic buildings and other remnants of boom times.

Banner Season Ahead.

Today, Georgetown is looking forward to a banner tourist season as news of the novel restoration continues to spread and attract curious visitors from all over.

Among the attractions Draper and his wife have provided for visitors is an old-time vaudeville, silent movies of 30 years ago, a gift shop, small museums, and—the Grubstake, a restaurant they've opened in one of the old buildings to serve mining camp dinners, including cornbread, apple butter, home-made pies and baked meat turnovers of the kind first brought to the mining region by Cornishmen, its earliest residents. (The adjoining St. James Hotel & Bar boasts an original elbow-rail.)

Georgetown is not the only once-famous mining town that is booming again out west. "Ghost" towns in varying states of preservation dot the fabulous Mother Lode county of northern California by the score, according to the National Geographic society, and some of the more famous—or perhaps "notorious" is a better word—have been restored preparatory to California's gold-rush centennial, while others have never really become ghosts at all—like Placerville (once known as Dry Diggins and later as Hangtown), San Andreas, Angels Camp and Sonora.

Columbia Part of State Park.

Then there's Columbia, (once known as Hildreths Diggins and later as American Camp), Cherokee, North San Juan, Hornitos and Volcano. A state law passed in 1945 made Columbia part of a new state park and provided for restoration of gold-rush buildings.

Another attraction is Coloma, where the frenzied rush started in 1848 when John W. Marshall picked up a small nugget in the tailrace of Sutter's Mill.

At Angels Camp, where Mark Twain's leaping wonder, Daniel Webster, met his Waterloo, a jumping frog jubilee is held annually.

Also sharing the stage in the centennial ghost-town scene are Tonopah, Goldfield, Rhyolite and Bullfrog, in southern Nevada.

"Madame Moustache's."

Then there's a Nevada city where "Madame Moustache" operated California's fanciest and highest-stake gambling house and bar, and Virginia City, Nev., where some 30,000 grubbed in the famous Comstock Lode diggings in the 1870s.

Other gold-rush towns, now "ghosts," whose names remind visitors of the days when the west was truly "wild and woolly" are Poker Flat, Roaring Camp, Red Dog, Fiddletown, Simpson's Bar and Second Garrotte—all scenes in Bret Harte stories.

Then there's Rough and Ready, You Bet, Grizzly Flats, Last Chance, Whiskey Slide, Jackass Hill, Squabble Town and Paradise (originally Pair-O-Dice).

Central Ave. Woman Has Narrow Escape

Mrs. Mabel Edwards, 463 S. Central-av, narrowly escaped death Mar. 28, when she became ill from gas fumes caused by a faulty hot water heater.

Mrs. Edwards felt faint and called her daughter, Dr. Alberta Turner, a psychologist at the Bureau of Juvenile Research, 2280 W. Broad-st.

Dr. Turner called the emergency squad and applied artificial respiration until squadmen arrived. Mrs. Edwards told reporters she believed the squad had saved her life.

Spring Means Return of Rats; Problem of Exterminating

Spring may mean flowers, sunny days, and the return of the robin to most people, but to Frank Carson, of the Vernost Products Co., 3482 Sullivant-av, it means a return of the deadly rat season.

Mr. Carson, who has been waging war on rats for the past 12 years, is distributor and formulator of the Vernost "Antu" rat-killer product, tested and proven to be one of the most effective exterminators on the market today.

He was the first to formulate the product in Ohio and at present is the only Columbus distributor. Here are some facts about the rat that Mr. Carson has learned while in this business.

The rat, one of the world's most deadly creatures, originated somewhere in the Orient and was introduced into the United States at the time of the Revolutionary War, being carried here by trading vessels. It now infests every state in the Union.

The present rat population of the United States is conservatively estimated at 123,000,000 or just a little less than this country's population of human beings.

The average rat weighs three-quarters of a pound and may be any color from brown to black.

A female rat will give birth to from three to 12 litters a year and the young in a litter number from six to 22. The young are ready to breed at the age of three to four months.

Damaging and destructive, rats cause thousands of dollars of damage in the U. S. each year and have caused more deaths than all the wars in history. The rat flea, which is transported by the animal, transmits bubonic plague, the most dreaded of all diseases.

The greatest number of rats Mr. Carson remembers killing was in South Charleston, when he cleared an elevator of 4000 rats.

Proper applications of ANTU will rid areas of rats, but cleanliness should go with extermination. Alleys, yards and places where rubbish and waste accumulate should be cleaned up and kept clean.

In any community the rat is a constant menace to public health. The only way for a community to be safe is to institute regular periodical campaigns against this menace. Residents should begin in their own home to wipe out this deadly disease carrier.

TWO—YOU AND I

Car Blows Own Horn To Warn of Fire

The Marshall Hall family, 235 Buena Vista-av, were awakened at 3 a. m. Saturday by the sound of their car horn blowing loudly.

Looking out the window, they discovered their 1939 Chevrolet a mass of flames. Fire was believed to have been caused by a short in the wires, which also caused the horn to blow.

Bill Lamb, 275 Buena Vista-av, next door neighbor to the Halls, helped move the car to the street and away from the house. He then sought aid from the Prairie Township Fire Department, who extinguished the fire.

Mrs. Hall reported that the fire completely destroyed the body and interior of the 1939 Chevrolet, leaving the engine in a fair condition.

YMCA Organizes New Softball League

Representatives from various local organizations met Apr. 4 at the YMCA to make plans for the coming summer softball program. At the meeting, plans were made to have one softball league for boys 18 years of age and under.

Westgate Park has been secured for one night a week for the league games. The eligibility lists are being filled out at the present time and are to be returned to the Hilltop YMCA by Apr. 18. Any groups that would like to enter a team in this league should contact the Hilltop YMCA for an eligibility sheet and a set of the rules to be followed.

Play will start the second week in May and will continue into part of August.

Suffers Injuries In Auto Accident

Ruth Wyatt, 26, 779 S. Wall-st, was treated for cuts about the head and wrists Wednesday at Mt. Carmel Hospital after the auto in which she was riding skidded 100 feet and struck a utility pole, on W. Broad-st.

The car was driven by James Creamens, 805 Stanley-av, who said he lost control of his car when it struck slippery railroad tracks on W. Broad-st west of Central-av.

It's Wise To Repeat! HERE'S PROOF:

John H. Kirkpatrick, 29 N. Huron-av, decided to sell his 14-inch Delta band saw, and advertised it in the March 17 edition of the Record.

It seemed no one wanted a band saw badly enough to come over and look at it, although several telephone callers inquired about it.

Mr. Kirkpatrick repeated his ad in the March 24 issue. Result: A man from Linworth, Ohio, bought the saw. This is one of the many examples which prove the wisdom of repeating ads if they fail to "click" the first time. Record Want Ads may be placed by dialing RA. 1125.

Columbus Police Force To Watch Speedsters Closely

By Myron T. Seifert

Columbus speeding motorists who violate the traffic laws, especially in school zones, including those of Hilltop schools, will be spotted by the scrutinizing eyes of the Police Traffic Bureau, Captain Clem Owens said last week.

"The public is not complying with speed laws," said Capt. Owens. "Schools have been complaining through their principals and PTA groups and something is going to be done."

The new program, aimed at slashing a rising number of traffic accidents, will be aided by:

1. A second radar speed detection unit to be in operation within the next two weeks.

2. Portable speed zone signs which will allow the units to be set up any place in the city.

In addition to school zones, 11 permanent speed zones have been set up. One radar unit has been operating in these zones since last May.

In 17 school zones during March, 21 motorists were arrested, eight were warned about speeding. While school zones' speed is 20 miles per hour, no motorist was arrested driving under 30.

Clocked speeds up to 58 miles an hour in school zones brought grim warning from Capt. Owens for motorists to ease up on the accelerator.

Use of the radar units to tag motorists who speed will be strict but not ruthless, Capt. Owens said. From May 10, 1948, to Apr. 1, this year, the one radar made 332 arrests.

However, during this same time radar operators stopped 1115 drivers and warned them about excessive speed without arresting them. Last month 128 drivers were arrested and 90 were warned.

Traffic court has taken a serious attitude toward speeders.

Tuesday, Apr. 5, 39 speeders were apprehended by radar and appeared before Judge Charles R. Petree. Twelve of the 39 were apprehended in school zones. Their fines varied.

"Speeds must be greatly reduced in school zones," said Judge Charles R. Petree. "I am satisfied radar apprehension is a fair measuring of speed."

Judge Petree and the other four municipal judges are continuing the firm policy of handling speeders with proper fines in traffic court.

Not one case of a motorist apprehended by radar has been lost by traffic officers in court.

The traffic bureau is greatly alarmed about the marked rise in accidents. In March, 1948, there were 523 accidents. Last month there were 680.

Traffic officials consider speed the greatest element in accidents. That is the reason for the present drive.

"We shall concentrate our forces in areas where excessive speed has caused a number of accidents," said Capt. Owens. "Selective enforcement will rule where traffic officers will be placed. Those intersections and stretches of road where the most accidents occur will get more supervision."

Capt. Owens said traffic in Columbus has increased 22 per cent in the past year, but traffic accidents, in percentage, have gained much more.

Along with Capt Owens' warning of more stringent enforcement of speed laws came this opinion from Police Chief Frank L. Harrison: Supervised drivers' courses should be initiated in the high schools.

"The students of today are the drivers of tomorrow," the chief said.

Behind the radar units used to apprehend speeders is a story of inter-departmental co operation. The units were actually purchased by the traffic engineer.

When the engineer wants to learn the average speed on any street, traffic officers gather the information while keeping tab on speedsters.

Local Church Is Celebrating 14th Anniversary

The Hilltop Community Church, 179 N. Huron-av, will celebrate its 14th anniversary on Easter Sunday.

As a 14th anniversary project the church is attempting to dedicate its building, started in 1940, free of debt this year.

Rev. J. L. Dean, pastor since 1940, reported that between three and four thousand dollars would be needed to attain this goal.

The church began its building program in 1940 and completed its basement unit in 1941. At the outbreak of the war, building was halted until 1947, when the C. P. A. granted permission to continue construction, allowing $12,000 to be used.

Rev. Dean reports that it has never been necessary to borrow money for the church, and that contributions from members and friends have been liberal.

Body of Sgt. Stump Returned To U. S.

Funeral services will be held within a few weeks for M/Sgt. James H. Stump, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Stump, 15 S. Sylvan-av. His body was returned recently from the Pacific theater aboard the Army Transport Sgt. Jack Pendleton. Burial is expected to be in New Lexington, O.

M/Sgt. Stump lost his life in a prison camp. He was captured when Bataan fell.

Story reported in The Hilltop Record, Apr. 7, that services were held for Sgt. Stump was in error.

Ask Business Firms to Close Fri. Afternoon

The church support committee of the Hilltop Kiwanis Club is requesting that Hilltop merchants close their offices on Good Friday from 12 to 3 p. m. to allow employes to attend Good Friday services.

Posters were placed in Hilltop business offices last week by members of the committee announcing the special services and requesting that businesses close.

Also placed in 500 stores, business places and tourist homes last week were new church directories, listing the name, location, name of pastor and times of services of every church on the Hilltop. One thousand of these directories were given to the Welcome Wagon, Inc., to be presented to all new Hilltop residents. Paul Rausch, a member of the church support committee, was chairman of the project.

Betty Walker Is New Head Of Y-Teens

Betty Walker, 20 N. Huron-av, junior at West High School, was last week elected president of Y-Teehs at that school, to serve as its presiding officer for the school year 1949-50, Mrs. Mary Murphy, adviser, announced today.

Y-Teens is the high school girls' organization and corresponds to the ideals and activities of the Hi-Y for boys.

Both are branches of the general YWCA and YMCA.

Other students elected to key posts in the Y-Teens were Frances Smith, 721 Wiltshire-rd, vice-president; Marilyn Valentine,, 476 S. Richardson-av, secretary; and Shirley Cline, 33 Powhatan-av, treasurer.

Five cabinet members were also elected by the girls, including Joan Deyo, 2715 Fremont-st; Mary Ann Ross, 376 S. Powell-av; Sharon Clarkin, 135 N. Chase-av; Betty Roederer, 452 Belvidere-av, and Jo Grisso, 2102 Sullivant-av.

Boy, 6, Injured By School Bus

Six-year-old Daniel Pennington suffered a possible fractured skull and head cuts Apr. 7 when he ran into the side of the school bus he was to board at Brown-rd and Hopkins-av.

Daniel, the son of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Pennington, 1511 Littleav, had just left a confectionery and was running to catch the bus when the mishap occurred.

Driver of the bus was Clarence Lott, 1675 Brown-rd, who was traveling south on Brown-rd. The boy was taken to the Children's Hospital for treatment.

Highland Ave. Man Is Shot In Jaw

Orlie Phillips, 274 Highland-av, was in fair condition Apr. 8, St. Francis Hospital attendants reported. Phillips suffered a gunshot wound in h's jaw, inflicted by a person whom police identified as Delmas Bailey. The shooting occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harris, 1247 Market-st.

Fridley Distributes Rotary Lawn Mowers

Ted Fridley, manager of the Fleet Wing Service Station, Sullivant-av and Binns-blvd, will be the sole distributor west of the Scioto River of the new Mow-Master rotary lawn mower, it was revealed Wednesday.

The new Mow-Master is easy starting, operates forward or backward and is ideal for pulverizing leaves.

The latest addition to the Hilltop YMCA program is the Gra-Y Club for boys nine to 12 years of age. At present these clubs have been organized at Highland Avenue and West Broad Street Schools. The Gra-Y program offers this age boy an opportunity to participate in club activities such as hobby and craft work, gym and swim at the Central YMCA, occasional movies dealing with educational and recreational topics and athletics.

Saturday mornings find many of the boys working in the Hilltop Y hobby shop making plastic rings and beaver and other interesting items. Any boy or group of boys in this age range who are interested in participating in this program should contact the Hilltop YMCA.

In view of the coming summer program, the boys are organizing into softball teams which will play one another in a regular Gra-Y League here on the Hilltop.

As part of the club activity, many of the youths will soon sell plastic clothes pins to the Hilltop housewives in order to earn money to help pay their way to the YMCA summer camp.

The YMCA Camp Alfred Willson at Bellefontaine is open from June through August for boys nine years of age and up. A two-week period at camp affords boys opportunities for swimming, fishing, hiking and learning nature lore. Housewives are requested to purchase a box or two of clothes pins to help the boys earn their way through camp.

Is Cynthia Lee Woodland Nation's Prettiest Baby?

Dark-haired, brown-eyed Cynthia Lee Woodland is vying for the title of the nation's prettiest baby in a contest sponsored by Modern Romances magazine.

The enchanting little girl is one of 16 finalists in the national baby contest. She was the only Ohio baby chosen from hundreds of pictures submitted from this state.

Her mother, Mrs. James Woodland, was notified that her daughter had won the first step in the contest, on April Fool's Day, and according to Mrs. Woodland, she didn't believe the news. "I was sure someone was playing an April Fool's joke on me."

Cynthia is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Woodland, 2429½ W. Broad-st. Her proud grandparents are Leo McComb, 351 N. Burgess-av, and Mrs. Marie Woodland, 183 S. Harris-av. Her grandfather, Leo McComb, is known to Hilltoppers as the owner of the Rosebud Floral Co.

The little girl is two years old and is "just as sweet as she is pretty," according to her mother, who confesses she may be prejudiced.

Cynthia has already been awarded a $25 cash prize for being one of 16 finalists. If she wins the contest she will be awarded the grand prize and a host of others in June.

Prizes include a $500 U. S. Savings bond, an eight-piece place setting of 1881 Rogers silver, an Joe Wolf of the Lee Wolf Bros., Dayton, thought himself "a pretty lucky" fellow Friday when he lost and recovered his billfold in the space of a few short hours.

The billfold, "containing a considerable sum of money," was found on Broad-st near Wayne-av, by Bob Nowell, of the Nowell Bros. Grocery, 154 N. Harris-av.

Identification papers indicated that the wallet was the property of Joe Wolf of Dayton. Our honest grocer immediately put through a long distance call to the firm and learned that Mr. Wolf, a salesman, was in Columbus, visiting the Mike Sheskey Five and Dime Store.

The party was notified and the salesman returned to Dayton with the lost billfold.

Cub Scout News

The April Pack meeting was held Tuesday evening, Apr. 5, in the auditorium of John Burroughs School, and was one of the outstanding meetings of the year.

Cliff Matthews, field scout executive of the southwest district, spoke briefly of the six years of cubbing in Pack 43 and presented the Charter to Mrs. Ralph Strickler, president of the John Burroughs PTA, who in turn placed it in the keeping of Mr. Haney, institutional representative.

Mr. Matthews gave an inspiring talk on the crusade to strengthen the arm of liberty. At the close of his talk he lit a torch and with his torch ignited the one held by the cubmaster, Harry Keller, who in turn lighted the torches held by the den mothers, and they then lit the torches held by the cubs.

The ceiling lights were extinguished and the pledge to strengthen the arm of liberty was given by all. Then, standing in a living circle, the cub promise was given.

The speaker then presented the cubmaster and den mothers and Mrs. Strickler with a lapel pin showing liberty's torch held high and the inscription "Strengthen the arm of liberty" at the base of the torch. Each cub in pack 43 made his own torch during March to be used in this impressive ceremony.

During the evening, Mrs. Steece, who was for more than a year a den mother in the pack was presented with a pin and appreciation card.

Two Den Chiefs from Pack 178 were presented with Den Chief cords. They were Rex Snedaker and Richard Miller. Garry Walters was accepted into the pack.

The following awards and advancements were given: George Lamneck, Webelo; Ronald Knipp, gold and silver arrows; David Nice, gold and silver arrows; Larry Steece, silver arrow; Clare Bailey, buckskinner; Ronald Stilwell, denner; Bill Rector, gold and silver arrows; Edward Lilly, wolf and gold arrow; Jack Kamer, buckskinner, wolf, gold and silver arrows; Robert Krieg, wolf, gold and silver arrows; Ralph Williams, buckskinner and gold arrow; Tommy Hill, denner and silver arrow; Jim Graham, two silver arrows, Paul Pennell, gold and silver arrows; Robert Chesser, bear; Tommy Lewis, wolf, gold and silver arrows; Trey Doersam, wolf.

At the close of the meeing, refreshments were served.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

Copyright, 1948 by Margaret Gorman Nichols. Published by Messner-Smith Company. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

CHAPTER ONE

BEFORE Beatrice Farish opened her eyes she heard those mutinous inner voices again, softly terrifying, sweeping down the corridor of her mind. Was she to have another of those days when she lived with a sense of drift and insecurity in a solitude and a wilderness? Perhaps it was only "mental." If only it were! Though that observation seemed to cover everything people thought wrong with them these days, it could not mitigate her fear that her marriage was coming to an end. To make love a reality, she thought. Not a souvenir.

It was time to get up and live. The full schedule of the day began to form vaguely in her mind as she arose from her bed and went to the opened windows. She had always loved October not only for its capricious and colorful loveliness but also because it was a portent of the winter she had always loved most. Why winter more than summer, she asked herself? Because the house was a cocoon, safe and warm and insulated against the bitter alien drafts?

Beatrice thought, "For as long as I can remember I have prayed not to be like my mother. Once widowed and twice divorced, she who has never at one moment of her life lost herself in a greater love."

As she looked out and up and down the as yet unpeopled suburban street where the large brick and stone houses had an indisputable dignity, she knew again the shame that came to her every morning now. Because in rising and bathing and dressing before she called Porter, she knew that she was deliberately avoiding him. The scarcely credible part of it was that while she executed perfectly her plan to elude him, she had also taken to wearing her most becoming lounging clothes in the morning—a protective front for her deepest uncertainty and humility.

When she had lowered the windows and drawn the rose-colored curtains, she turned slowly and looked at Porter asleep in his own bed. She could not quell her rising resentment and anxiety. To love him for all that was precious in the past, to feel his presence passionately, but not to know him anymore. When, in gaining everything they had desired, had they lost each other? Dear head, dear dark head, once beloved, still beloved . . . No. She must not cry. Marianne must not say she looked as if she'd been crying.

Marianne always looked smaller lying under the ruffled white canopy, because her bed was so huge for a little girl of seven. Beatrice had never told her daughter that she had given her the room that she herself had dreamed of when she had awakened on the cot in her mother's New York apartment and on the sagging mattress at boarding school. She had not told Marianne because the information would immediately have released a niagara of questions, and Beatrice would have to explain divorce. Divorce—that word that was like surgery.

She pushed back Marianne's straight dark hair that was cut in a bang across her forehead, kissed her pink warm cheek, and then stood up to play the game they always played in the morning—Marianne pretending to be still asleep while her long, slim little body quivered with suppressed giggles. Finally, with curiosity out of bounds, Marianne rolled over on her back and opened her brown eyes.

Beatrice smiled. "Good morning, darling."

"Do I have to get up?"

"It's Friday, the last day of school this week. You can sleep tomorrow." Marianne always pretended to dislike school.

"But I don't like to sleep on Saturdays!"

"I know. Only on school days."

Marianne sat up, crossed her legs and looked at her mother with disconcerting candor. She contemplated not only the soft gray housegown but also the young woman who wore it—small-boned and slender, the exquisite shape of her head revealed by the casual upsweep of mahogany-colored hair, the fair skin so fine and clear as to seem almost transparent, the deep-set dark blue eyes and the full-lipped mouth bright and brave, yet uncertain of its dusky voice and laughter.

Marianne asked soberly, "Are you very old, Mother?"

"Old enough, I hope, to make important decisions and young enough to live by them." She smiled again at the bright-eyed little figure in flowered pajamas. There's a good feeling between Marianne and me, she thought. And it isn't because we're alike because she's really more like Porter than she is like me. Does he know that? He wants her to be perfect. I want her to be simply, warmly human. Another source of tension. She said, "Come along now, dear."

"Must I dress myself?" Marianne asked plaintively. "Will you dress me this morning, just this one morning? Oh, please! I won't ask you any other morning." At Beatrice's look of mock severity Marianne laughed out. "Okay. I'm seven years old and I dress myself—okay?"

Turning away, Beatrice went into the hall again. At the door of her bedroom she stopped, feeling her nerves tighten. She knocked and called Porter and when he didn't answer, she called again.

"All right," he said crossly.

"It's past eight, Porter."

"I said all right." Words given like an angry blow.

She went down the steps, feeling her heart beating fast. If only you didn't have to pretend that everything was all right before your child, your friends, Frances, the cook and full-time girl, Octavia, who came to do the cleaning and laundry and Charley, the yard boy, and, oh, everyone.

Pausing in the hall, she saw Frances walking around the dining room table.

"Good morning, Mrs. Farish."

"Good morning, Frances."

The light-skinned Frances of Amazonian proportions and strength had come to Beatrice from a war plant. She was quiet, meticulous, punctual, and she loved Marianne as only a woman can who is herself deeply maternal and childless.

"There's no need to hurry," Beatrice said to her. "Did you bring in the paper as you came in?"

Presently Frances brought the morning paper and a cup of very hot coffee to the living room.

The article Beatrice scanned—something about a woman having her husband arrested for bigamy—was not of itself important. It was not the article but the place from which the story had come that plucked at the sensitive chord of memory. Atlantic City. She and Porter had spent their honeymoon there.

She could see them now walking up the Boardwalk, their faces turned toward the sun—she and Porter and pigeons in flight over the glistening, great-hearted sea. Odd, that she should still recall those luminous small images and even the sound of their living wings. Yet it was Porter, on whose arm she had clung with wonder and enchantment, who came to her now in a picture so penetratingly lucid that she felt transported to those half-forgotten golden moments, so richly theirs, on a three day honeymoon ten years ago.

She had looked up at him as they had walked because it was not only the charm of his face that had thrilled her almost unbearably but something else, too, something that she at eighteen had been too young, too inexperienced and too deeply in love to define. It was more than tenseness in his black brooding eyes, more than tenseness in his resolute step and the forward movement of his fine body. It was more like a fierce inner drive that would never let his eyes be cool or his body still, or his sleep dreamless. Wait, Beatrice had wanted to say. Wait, oh, darling, wait . . . We are so young. We have so much time . . . But she knew if she said it that he would only laugh at her and not understand.

You Can Hear Strange Things About Catholics

Yes, you can hear some strange things about Catholics.

You hear it said that Catholics believe all non-Catholics are headed for Hell . . . that they believe non-Catholic marriages are invalid.

Some think Catholics believe the Pope is God . . . that he can do no wrong . . . that they owe him civil allegiance and that he should have the political power to rule America.

It is said that Catholics want religious freedom only for themselves . . . that they oppose public schools and separation of Church and State as evils which should be destroyed.

The claim is made that Catholics pay the priest for forgiveness of their sins . . . that they must buy their departed relatives and friends out of Purgatory . . . that they adore statues . . . are forbidden to read the Bible . . . use medals, candles and holy water as sure-fire protection against the loss of a job, lightning or being run down by an automobile.

But what is worse, some say, Catholics corrupt the true teachings of Jesus Christ with the addition of pagan superstitions and practices that are nothing less than the inventions of the devil.

If all these things — or any of them — were true, it would be a pity. For at least one out of every six Americans is a Catholic — and it would be a national tragedy if one-sixth of all Americans entertained such erroneous ideas.

The Knights of Columbus is an organization of 700,000 Catholic men of reason and intelligence. In our ranks will be found statesmen, scientists, historians, physicians, movie stars, lawyers, educators and others representing every cross-section of American life. And for each and every one of them loyalty to the Catholic Faith is the act of a reasonable man.

We are deeply interested in the welfare of our Church and our Country. And we believe the interests of both will be served best when fair-minded people know the Catholic Church as it is—not as it is sometimes mistaken to be.

If you have heard and believed any of these false claims, and want the truth, we will gladly send you a free booklet which explains many aspects of Catholic belief and practice concerning which people are commonly misinformed. Write and ask for Pamphlet No. 1-N.

Ball Club Takes Opener From East

By Dave Miller

West High's baseballers started their 1949 diamond campaign by trouncing a stubborn East High nine, 6 to 2, Friday afternoon on the Harley Field diamond.

The co-defending champions put together two 3-run frames, going ahead 3-0 in the first frame on two hits, a duo of miscues, a free pass and a fielder's choice. In the fifth frame, the Cowboys tallied three more runs, and more or less sewed up the ball game on two hits, two hit batters and another fielder's choice. East, previous to this three-run inning, had pulled the Cowboys lead to 3-2, but this final outburst was all the Hilltoppers needed.

Phil Young, in his junior year, pitched an effective game. Last year, at East, he was called upon to pitch, and twirled a neat one-hitter.

All four returning lettermen were in the lineup. They include Young, shortstop, Jack Pickens, center fielder, and Dick Kirk, and first baseman, Dick Culbertson. The third base spot, which was expected to be filled by Bill Thrush this year, had Jim Burke. Thrush broke his ankle in the practice game with Grandview last Thursday evening and will probably be out of action at least six weeks. Bill was coming in to the plate, started to slide, and then changed his mind, causing the injury.

The Cowboys scored three in the opening round, when Jack Pickens, the lead-off batter, was safe on first baseman, Dick Linson's, error. Dave Caton laid down a bunt, but the throw was to second base, where Pickens was safe. This made it two men on, with none down. Morris Dobbs, sophomore outfielder, was safe on Pitcher Phil Linhart's bad throw to first, plating Pickens with the first run.

Dick Culbertson and Dick Kirk made outs, but catcher Bob Birle plated Caton with a single past third baseman, George Powers. Wade Williams, Cowboy left-fielder, then sent a smash to third again that Powers couldn't handle, and Dobbs scored, giving West a 3-0 first inning lead.

East started their half of the first with two singles, a walk and a passed ball, but Young struck out Powers and Harry Kauffman to quiet the uprising. Men reached base against Young every inning except the sixth.

In the second frame, Bill Thompson, East outfielder, walked and catcher Bill Marcum sacrificed him to second. When Thompson attempted to steal third, catcher Bob Birle tossed the ball in left field, plating East's first run.

The Tigers narrowed the lead down to just one run in the fourth when Harry Kauffman and Thompson both met Young with singles. Kauffman stole third, and scored on a wild pitch. However, with the tying run on third for East, Young struck out Marcum, Linhart and Linson in quick fashion, and never afterwards did the Tigers get past second.

In the Cowboys' fifth inning, after two were away, Dobbs was hit by a pitched ball and Dick Culbertson singled him to third. Dick Kirk was also hit, loading the bases. Again Bob Birle came through for the Cowboys with a single past the shortstop.

Culbertson made it 5-2 by going in and out of attempted tags down the third base line. Williams, the hitter, hit a low roller down the third base line, and Culbertson had to come home. Pitcher Linhart tried to tag him coming down the basepaths, but missed every time, and finally threw to home, but was too late.

After that, a passed ball by East's catcher, Bill Marcum, plated Kirk with the final tally of the game.

Ken Mizelle, East all-round athlete and shortstop on the baseball nine, robbed Jack Pickens, Cowboy shortstop, twice of well-tagged balls. In the fifth, he speared a line over his head, and in the following frame, grabbed one far to the left of him—which seemed like an impossible catch. Mizelle also got a double and two singles in four trips to the plate.

This Tuesday the Cowboys are scheduled to play host to Linden McKinley at 4 p. m. The Panthers were rained out in their game with Aquinas Friday afternoon.

Before the East game, officials of East had called the game. The West team had already dressed and were ready to go. Then, after some of the boys had already left for home, East called back and said the game was on. Most of the players were rounded up, and they all dressed again, and this time took off for East. One outfielder, Ron McElwee, couldn't be contacted.

The line score:

West	300 030 0—6	6	1
East	010 100 0—2	7	2

Young and Birle, Nafzger (7); Linhart, Komadina (7) and Marcum.

Track Team Drops First Of Season

By Dave Miller

West's track team suffered its 1949 cinder opener by dropping to a tough East team, 77 to 41, at East, Apr. 6. It was the initial meet of the season for both teams.

It was a poor day for track, with very cold weather prevailing, and the track was wet. West took only four first places. Don Eitle, stellar Cowboy cinder man, won two of them with firsts in the 220 yard dash and the 100 yard dash. Ronnie Coup, a sophomore, won the mile and Gregory Burke was the other West winner, copping the 440 yard dash. All other events were won by the Tigers.

The summaries and positions in which the participants finished are as follows:

120 yard high hurdles—won by Sowards (E); 2—Cockfield (W); 3—Woods (W). Time—16.6.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

CHAPTER ONE

BEFORE Beatrice Farish opened her eyes she heard those mutinous inner voices again, softly terrifying, sweeping down the corridor of her mind. Was she to have another of those days when she lived with a sense of drift and insecurity in a solitude and a wilderness? Perhaps it was only "mental." If only it were! Though that observation seemed to cover everything people thought wrong with them these days, it could not mitigate her fear that her marriage was coming to an end. To make love a reality, she thought. Not a souvenir.

It was time to get up and live. The full schedule of the day began to form vaguely in her mind as she arose from her bed and went to the opened windows. She had always loved October not only for its capricious and colorful loveliness but also because it was a portent of the winter she had always loved most. Why winter more than summer, she asked herself? Because the house was a cocoon, safe and warm and insulated against the bitter alien drafts?

Beatrice thought, "For as long as I can remember I have prayed not to be like my mother. Once widowed and twice divorced, she who has never at one moment of her life lost herself in a greater love."

As she looked out and up and down the as yet unpeopled suburban street where the large brick and stone houses had an indisputable dignity, she knew again the shame that came to her every morning now. Because in rising and bathing and dressing before she called Porter, she knew that she was deliberately avoiding him. The scarcely credible part of it was that while she executed perfectly her plan to elude him, she had also taken to wearing her most becoming lounging clothes in the morning—a protective front for her deepest uncertainty and humility.

When she had lowered the windows and drawn the rose-colored curtains, she turned slowly and looked at Porter asleep in his own bed. She could not quell her rising resentment and anxiety. To love him for all that was precious in the past, to feel his presence passionately, yet not to know him anymore. When, in gaining everything they had desired, had they lost each other? Dear head, dear dark head, once beloved, still beloved . . . No. She must not cry. Marianne must not say she looked as if she'd been crying.

Marianne always looked smaller lying under the ruffled white canopy, because her bed was so huge for a little girl of seven. Beatrice had never told her daughter that she had given her the room that she herself had dreamed of when she had awakened on the cot in her mother's New York apartment and on the nagging mattress at boarding school. She had not told Marianne because the information would immediately have released a niagara of questions, and Beatrice would have to explain divorce. Divorce—that word that was like surgery.

She pushed back Marianne's straight dark hair that was cut in a bang across her forehead, kissed her pink warm cheek, and then stood up to play the game they always played in the morning—Marianne pretending to be still asleep while her long, slim little body quivered with suppressed giggles. Finally, with curiosity out of bounds, Marianne rolled over on her back and opened her brown eyes.

Beatrice smiled. "Good morning, darling."

"Do I have to get up?"

"It's Friday, the last day of school this week. You can sleep tomorrow." Marianne always pretended to dislike school.

"But I don't like to sleep on Saturdays!"

"I know. Only on school days."

Marianne sat up, crossed her legs and looked at her mother with disconcerting candor. She contemplated not only the soft gray housegown but also the young woman who wore it—small-boned and slender, the exquisite shape of her head revealed by the casual upsweep of mahogany-colored hair, the fair skin so fine and clear as to seem almost transparent, the deep-set dark blue eyes and the full-lipped mouth bright and brave, yet uncertain as its dusky voice and laughter.

Marianne asked soberly, "Are you very old, Mother?"

"Old enough, I hope, to make important decisions and young enough to live by them." She smiled again at the bright-eyed little figure in flowered pajamas. There's a good feeling between Marianne and me, she thought. And it isn't because we're alike because she's really more like Porter than she is like me. Does he know that? He wants her to be perfect. I want her to be simply, warmly human. Another source of tension. She said, "Come along now, dear."

"Must I dress myself?" Marianne asked plaintively. "Will you dress me this morning, just this one morning? Oh, please! I won't ask you any other morning." At Beatrice's look of mock severity Marianne laughed out. "Okay. I'm seven years old and I dread myself. Okay!"

Turning away, Beatrice went into the hall again. At the door of her bedroom she stopped, feeling her nerves tighten. She knocked and called Porter and when he didn't answer, she called again.

"All right," he said crossly.

"It's past eight, Porter."

"I said all right." Words given like an angry blow.

She went down the steps, feeling her heart beating fast. If only you didn't have to pretend that everything was all right before your child, your friends, Frances, the cook and full-time girl, Octavia, who came to do the cleaning and laundry and Charley, the yard boy, and, oh, everyone.

Pausing in the hall, she saw Frances walking around the dining room table.

"Good morning, Mrs. Farish."

"Good morning, Frances."

The light-skinned Frances of Amasonian proportions and strength had come to Beatrice from a war plant. She was quiet, meticulous, punctual, and she loved Marianne as only a woman can who is herself deeply maternal and childless.

"There's no need to hurry," Beatrice said to her. "Did you bring in the paper as you came in?"

Presently Frances brought the morning paper and a cup of very hot coffee to the living room.

The article Beatrice scanned—something about a woman having her husband arrested for bigamy—was not of itself important. It was not the article but the place from which the story had come that plucked at the sensitive chord of memory. Atlantic City. She and Porter had spent their honeymoon there.

She could see them now walking up the Boardwalk, their faces turned toward the sun—she and Porter and pigeons in flight over the glistening, great-hearted sea. Odd, that she should still recall those luminous small images and even the sound of their living wings. Yet it was Porter, on whose arm she had clung with wonder and enchantment, who came to her now in a picture so penetratingly lucid that she felt transported to those half-forgotten golden moments, so richly theirs, on a three day honeymoon ten years ago.

She had looked up at him as they had walked because it was not only the charm of his face that had thrilled her almost unbearably but something else, too, something that she at eighteen had been too young, too inexperienced and too deeply in love to define. It was more than tenseness in his black brooding eyes, more than tenseness in his resolute step and the forward movement of his fine body. It was more like a fierce inner drive that would never let his eyes be cool or his body still, or his sleep dreamless. Wait, Beatrice had wanted to say. Wait, oh, darling, wait . . . We are so young. We have so much time . . . But she knew if she said it that he would only laugh at her and not understand.

You Can Hear Strange Things About Catholics

Yes, you can hear some strange things about Catholics.

You hear it said that Catholics believe all non-Catholics are headed for Hell . . . that they believe non-Catholic marriages are invalid.

Some think Catholics believe the Pope is God . . . that he can do no wrong . . . that they owe him civil allegiance and that he should have the political power to rule America.

It is said that Catholics want religious freedom only for themselves . . . that they oppose public schools and separation of Church and State as evils which should be destroyed.

The claim is made that Catholics pay the priest for forgiveness of their sins . . . that they must buy their departed relatives and friends out of Purgatory . . . that they adore statues . . . are forbidden to read the Bible . . . use medals, candles and holy water as sure-fire protection against the loss of a job, lightning or being run down by an automobile.

But what is worse, some say, Catholics corrupt the true teachings of Jesus Christ with the addition of pagan superstitions and practices that are nothing less than the inventions of the devil.

If all these things — or any of them — were true, it would be a pity. For at least one out of every six Americans is a Catholic — and it would be a national tragedy if one-sixth of all Americans entertained such erroneous ideas.

The Knights of Columbus is an organization of 700,000 Catholic men of reason and intelligence. In our ranks will be found statesmen, scientists, historians, physicians, movie stars, lawyers, educators and others representing every cross-section of American life. And for each and every one of them loyalty to the Catholic Faith is the act of a reasonable man.

We are deeply interested in the welfare of our Church and our Country. And we believe the interests of both will be served best when fair-minded people know the Catholic Church as it is—not as it is sometimes mistaken to be.

If you have heard and believed any of these false claims, and want the truth, we will gladly send you a free booklet which explains many aspects of Catholic belief and practice concerning which people are commonly misinformed. Write and ask for Pamphlet No. 1-N.

Ball Club Takes Opener From East

By Dave Miller

West High's baseballers started their 1949 diamond campaign by trouncing a stubborn East High nine, 6 to 2, Friday afternoon on the Harley Field diamond.

The co-defending champions put together two 3-run frames, going ahead 3-0 in the first frame on two hits, a duo of miscues, a free pass and a fielder's choice. In the fifth frame, the Cowboys tallied three more runs, and more or less sewed up the ball game on two hits, two hit batters and another fielder's choice. East, previous to this three-run inning, had pulled the Cowboys lead to 3-2, but this final outburst was all the Hilltoppers needed.

Phil Young, in his junior year, pitched an effective game. Last year, at East, he was called upon to pitch, and twirled a neat one-hitter.

All four returning lettermen were in the lineup. They include Young, shortstop, Jack Pickens, center fielder, and Dick Kirk, and first baseman, Dick Culbertson. The third base spot, which was expected to be filled by Bill Thrush this year, had Jim Burke. Thrush broke his ankle in the practice game with Grandview last Thursday evening and will probably be out of action at least six weeks. Bill was coming in to the plate, started to slide, and then changed his mind, causing the injury.

The Cowboys scored three in the opening round, when Jack Pickens, the lead-off batter, was safe on first baseman, Dick Linson's, error. Dave Caton laid down a bunt, but the throw was to second base, where Pickens was safe. This made it two men on, with none down. Morris Dobbs, sophomore outfielder, was safe on Pitcher Phil Linhart's bad throw to first, plating Pickens with the first run.

Dick Culbertson and Dick Kirk made outs, but catcher Bob Birle plated Caton with a single past third baseman, George Powers. Wade Williams, Cowboy leftfielder, then sent a smash to third again that Powers couldn't handle, and Dobbs scored, giving West a 3-0 first inning lead.

East started their half of the first with two singles, a walk and a passed ball, but Young struck out Powers and Harry Kauffman to quiet the uprising. Men reached base against Young every inning except the sixth.

In the second frame, Bill Thompson, East outfielder, walked and catcher Bill Marcum sacrificed him to second. When Thompson attempted to steal third, catcher Bob Birle tossed the ball in left field, plating East's first run.

The Tigers narrowed the lead down to just one run in the fourth when Harry Kauffman and Thompson both met Young with singles. Kauffman stole third, and scored on a wild pitch. However, with the tying run on third for East, Young struck out Marcum, Linhart and Linson in quick fashion, and never afterwards did the Tigers get past second.

In the Cowboys' fifth inning, after two were away, Dobbs was hit by a pitched ball and Dick Culbertson singled him to third. Dick Kirk was also hit, loading the bases. Again Bob Birle came through for the Cowboys with a single past the shortstop.

Culbertson made it 5-2 by going in and out of attempted tags down the third base line. Williams, the hitter, hit a low roller down the third base line, and Culbertson had to come home. Pitcher Linhart tried to tag him coming down the basepaths, but missed every time, and finally threw to home, but was too late.

After that, a passed ball by East's catcher, Bill Marcum, plated Kirk with the final tally of the game.

Ken Mizelle, East all-round athlete and shortstop on the baseball nine, robbed Jack Pickens, Cowboy shortstop, twice of well-tagged balls. In the fifth, he speared a line over his head, and in the following frame, grabbed one far to the left of him—which seemed like an impossible catch. Mizelle also got a double and two singles in four trips to the plate.

This Tuesday the Cowboys are scheduled to play host to Linden McKinley at 4 p. m. The Panthers were rained out in their game with Aquinas Friday afternoon.

Before the East game, officials of East had called the game. The West team had already dressed and were ready to go. Then, after some of the boys had already left for home, East called back and said the game was on. Most of the players were rounded up, and they all dressed again, and this time took off for East. One outfielder, Ron McElwee, couldn't be contacted.

The line score:

West	300 030 0—6	6	4
East	010 100 0—2	7	2

Young and Birle, Nafzger (7); Linhart, Komadina (7) and Marcum.

Track Team Drops First Of Season

By Dave Miller

West's track team suffered its 1949 cinder opener by dropping to a tough East team, 77 to 41, at East, Apr. 9. It was the initial meet of the season for both teams.

It was a poor day for track, with very cold weather prevailing, and the track was wet. West took only four first places. Don Eitle, stellar Cowboy cinder man, won two of them with firsts in the 220 yard dash and the 100 yard dash. Ronnie Coup, a sophomore, won the mile and Gregory Burke was the other West winner, copping the 440 yard dash. All other events were won by the Tigers.

Thinclads Drop Close One To South

By Dave Miller

West's track team lost out in the mile relay Friday afternoon, missing a chance to make the final score a tie. South High's thinclads copped the meet on this event to win, 64 to 54, at Magly Field.

Had the Cowboys won the last event, the meet would have been a tie. Gib Winebar, former West student, paced South by winning the 120 yard high hurdles and the 220 low hurdles, while placing close up in two other events.

The summaries:

120 yard high hurdles—won by Winebar (S); 2—Stoia (S); 3—Cockfield (W). Time—17.0.

100 yard dash—won by Eitle (W); 2—Thomas (S); 3—Benedetto (W) Time 10.4.

Across The HILLTOP ALLEYS

By Dick Ardie

Kent Bros. In First Place

Kent Bros., who have been trying since the first of the season to reach the top of the Recreation League, finally gained the top spot as they had one of their best nights of bowling. They rolled the best single game and totals of 976-2868. Their other two games were 941 and 949. Hube Seitz was top man on the team with 237-622. Lloyd Leasure, also of Kent's, had a good series as he put together games of 207, 227 and 180 for a 614. Kenny Shaw of Seiller's had an even 600 series on games of 202, 212 and 186.

Dick Ardie

Kent Bros. now have a record of 64 wins and 32 defeats while Schroeck's Service Station, who lost two games to Grottos, dropped one game off pace and now has a record of 63 and 34.

Allen Milk, who were rolling in the ABC at Atlanta, have one more defeat than Schroeck's but must make up the three games they couldn't roll against Wayer Impactors this week. Should they top Wayer all three games the league will be a three team race and with 12 games still remaining anything can happen. Should the other extreme happen and Wayer win all three, Allen will then be five games off the pace which would be rather hard to pick up at this late date.

Although beaten for individual honors, Gene Urban, who entered the second game in place of Al Sherman of Grottos, rolled 220 for top scores of Schroeck's and the Grotto.

Urban won the game by six pins. In the last game, even though his score didn't show it, he was again the big cog in Schroeck's wheel as in the 10th frame he doubled and got eight pins as Grotto won by 14 pins.

Here's the way Kent Bros. rolled:

Kent Bros.
G. Phillips	140	146	186	472
H. Seitz	218	237	170	622
L. Leasure	207	227	180	614
K. Morris	182	178	213	573
T. Borowski	197	190	200	587
	941	978	949	2868

In the earlier league it was Vic Rudolph with 232-669, Shroyer's 941 and Fox Cafe's 2832 topped the teams.

In the Girl's Teen Agers League Pat Overmire scored 162 and Geneva Emrick 402 as Berkshire hit 881 and Eastern Isles 1634.

"Life of Riley" To Old Trail

WHO SAYS William Bendix doesn't like the "finer things"? He is sniffing the bouquet while his daughter, Meg Randall, and her sweetheart, Richard Long, look on, in the film "The Life of Riley". Jimmy Gleason co-stars with Bendix in the engaging comedy hit, opening Sunday at the Old Trail Theater. "High Fury", starring Madeleine Carroll and Ian Hunter, will be co-featured.

West Junior's track team copped a 38 2-3 to 34 1-3 win over Everett Junior High in a track meet at Magly Field Apr. 6.

Douglas Clark, West Junior eighth grader, did the high jump in senior high style, jumping 5 feet, 7½ inches. Jim Kimball, Jim Thomas and Doug Clark were the other first place winners. Besides the broad jump, Clark won the 120 yard low hurdles.

The summaries:

Ohio Seeks To Encourage Laziness

The Unemployment Bill that has passed the Ohio Senate and is now in the house would make it possible for a person to work 14 weeks on a job, then take a 26 week period off and draw unemployment compensation up to $30 a week.

To many persons this would be a lot more satisfactory than working.

The bill would also make it possible for a man and wife who are eligible for top benefits to draw $55 a week for 26 weeks while claiming they seek suitable work. They could seek it in Florida or anywhere they choose to vacation.

These are but two of the points of the proposed law that would tend to encourage laziness.

The time may be coming, and not too far away, when it would be a real inducement to take a 26 week vacation at the expense of the former employer.

If you are one who feels that laziness should not be encouraged why not contact your state representative or state senators right away and express your feelings?

We have no desire to cripple a piece of legislation that is meant to be a help to needy people but we are not of the opinion that this bill will do the most good for those needing it.

Easter Services Listed

By Doris McGill

In large cities, in the great out of doors, and in small communities throughout the land, Americans each year in great numbers attend Easter sunrise services to commemorate the feast of the Resurrection.

These ceremonies are solemn with meaning, yet their spirit is one of joyful expression. This note of cheer is reflected in the fact that spring has returned. An uplift of spirit is felt by people in all lands and particularly in the Midwest, where a new greenery carpets the earth.

As in other sections of the nation Hilltoppers will turn towards their churches with the dawn on Easter Sunday for solemn worship. Many of the Hilltop churches will conduct these services and a great number will serve a special Easter morning breakfast at the end of the service.

Sunrise Services

Some of the churches which will conduct sunrise services are Community Christian Church, Hilltop Church of Christ, Immanuel Baptist Church, St. Paul Lutheran Church, Hilltop Community Church, Hilltop Evangelical Church, Burgess Avenue EUB Church, Westgate Methodist Church, Hillcrest Baptist Church, Westgate EUB Church and Hilltonia EUB Church.

Sunrise Programs

Many of the churches are planning special programs in connection with the early morning services.

Westgate EUB Church will feature a talk by James Todd, a student of Otterbein College, at 6:30 a. m.

Rhoda Guild of the St. Paul Lutheran Church, New Rome, is sponsoring the sunrise service at that church. Young women of the guild will prepare a special program and breakfast to be served after the service. Pastoral speaker will be Rev. Erwin Krebs, commissioner of Negro Missions for the American Lutheran Church.

The young people of three churches are sponsoring special early morning services. At the Hilltop Church of Christ, the young people will present a one-act play entitled "The Challenge of the Cross".

At Immanuel Baptist Church and at the Westgate Methodist Church, early services were arranged by the youth of the church.

Nearly all Hilltop churches will conduct either one, two or three morning services. Pastors will devote their Easter messages to thoughts of Christ and the Resurrection. A complete schedule of services for Hilltop churches can be found on the church page.

Evening Services

In addition to the regular morning services, many churches will be open for evening Easter services.

At 7:30 p. m. the adult choir of Westgate EUB Church, led by Mrs. Mignon Ferry, will sing an Easter cantata, "Calvary".

Members of the Hillcrest Baptist Church will meet at 7:30 p. m. for a baptismal ceremony and an Easter film, "Journey Into Faith."

Bethlehem Lutheran Church is planning a special evening service for children of the church. Songs, Scripture reading and movies will be featured on the program.

At Glenwood Methodist Church an Easter pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross" will be presented by Intermediate members of the church at the evening session at 7:30. Taking part in the pageant are Donna Theisen, Sally Kendall, Joyce Arbaugh, Phyllis Phillips, Barbara Lee Harlow, Elaine Cristee and Mary Smith.

Rev. J. B. Shellhaas will baptize at the evening service, and singing will be by the Junior Choir. Chorus selections will be presented by Peggy Jhensen, Patty Thompson, Barbara Bigler, Mary Cummings, Nila Grabill and Jane Lloyd.

Guest speaker at the Warren Avenue Church of the Nazarene at the evening service at 7:30 will be Dr. C. Warren Jones of Kansas City, Mo., executive secretary of the Department of Foreign Missions.

The combined choirs of the Fourth Avenue and the Hilltop Churches of God will present an Easter cantata, "Rise, Glorious Conqueror" at 7:30 p. m. Easter Sunday at the Hilltop Church of God.

The choir is under the direction of D. E. Morman. Solo parts will be sung by Mrs. Lucille Martindale, Mrs. Chrystal Gugganeter, Jerry Plank and Garl Williams. Mrs. D. E. Morman is pianist and Mrs. Earl Ball, organist.

The Community Christian Church will feature a Bible picture at 7:30 p. m. Easter Sunday. As part of their general Easter program, members of the church have planned an Easter egg hunt Saturday at 2 p. m. at the church. The public is invited.

The Immanuel Baptist Church will hold a special service at 7:30 p. m. Featured at the service will be a baptismal ceremony and the reception of new members. Special music will be presented by the choir. Shirley Mercer and Shirley Osborn will give an organ and piano duet; Frances and Joyce Heskett, a vocal duet; Joseph Aleshire, violin solo; Mrs. Herschel Osborn, vocal solo; and James Osborn and Rev. Howard Schoof, a trombone duet.

The Westgate Methodist Church choir will present the cantata, "The First Easter", by Ira B. Wilson, on Sunday, Apr. 17, at 8 p. m. The choir is under the direction of Harry Decker. Charles Hoover is organist. Soloists will be Mrs. N. L. Schreiber, Mrs. Harry Decker, Mrs. Joseph Price, Thomas Siddle, Charles Moody and Jack Lauss.

Fidelis Class Sets Goal At 300 For Easter

Fidelis Class of Hoge Memorial Gets Write-Up In Lookout Magazine

An interesting article appeared in the Mar. 27 issue of "Lookout" a Christian Education magazine, concerning Hoge Memorial's Fidelis Class and its versatile teacher, M. E. Sensenbrenner. Following is a brief summary of the article.

One of the largest Sunday School Classes on the Hilltop is attributing its large following to the "everyday" teachings of M. E. Sensenbrenner, teacher of the class.

Calling themselves the "Fidelis Class" of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church, the group grew from a meeting of eight young people, in 1938, to the class, which today numbers 288.

The small group of young homemakers met in the beginning to discuss home affairs, babies, politics and religion.

All were interested in religion and regretted they could not attend Bible classes and church services because of their small children. The idea occurred to one of them to form a Bible class to which parents could bring their children. The idea appealed to the others and Jack Sensenbrenner was prevailed upon to become the teacher.

"At first we started with the discussion type of lesson, but as the class grew, it was voted to eliminate discussion and have a lecture type, inasmuch as the class was growing and too much time was being used up with discussions," Mr. Sensenbrenner said in the article.

One policy of the class is to assign definite responsibility to as many members as possible. Harry McKeever is assistant teacher and there are the usual officers including a class historian. A membership committee of six couples or 12 persons contact absentees, welcomes visitors, and calls on prospects. A "Sick and Shut-in" committee, a "Visiting and Greeting" committee and a program committee are only a few features of this unique class.

The class members themselves come from every walk of life, doctors, lawyers, laborers, salesmen, clerks, government workers, bankers and others.

Jack Sensenbrenner is the spark-plug of the group. In addition to his role as teacher of the Fidelis Class, he is president of the Hilltop Kiwanis Club, trustee in the Bible Meditation League, chairman of the Southwest District Boy Scouts, elder at the church, and between times makes a living for his family.

Drama Group Will Produce 3-Act Comedy

Marion McMahan

Marion McMahan is the unselfish wife, Irene, who picks out a wife for her husband to marry after her death, in the three-act comedy to be presented by the Hilltop Little Theater, May 8, at John Burroughs School auditorium.

Picking out a wife for your husband can lead to numerous complications, especially if the woman chosen turns out to be beautiful, and with a glamorous personality.

A hypochondriac, Irene believes that she will shortly die. The numerous and humorous situations which arise from this belief keep the three-act comedy rolling comically to its ludicrous ending.

"Her Husband's Wife" is the fourth production of the Hilltop drama group, which will celebrate its one year anniversary next month. Members of the cast are Bob Spohn, Joe Hague, Marie Wilkins, Barbara Donovan and D. K. Finley.

Previous productions of the group were "The Youngest," "Outward Bound", and "The Night of January 16".

Phillips, Tonti May Run For City Council

Leo L. Phillips

With terms of three present city councilmen expiring this year it was evident this week that a considerable interest in these jobs is being shown by Hilltoppers.

Perhaps most prominently mentioned for the post is Leo Phillips, 617 S. Ogden-av.

Several friends of Phillips this week stated that he had been approached to run for city council. He is a Republican and a past city chief of detectives, now retired. He is active in the Hilltop Kiwanis Club and other Hilltop groups.

When contacted this week by the Record, Phillips said, "It is true that I have been asked to be a candidate but as yet I have not made up my mind. I have plenty of time I could devote to the position and am well acquainted throughout the city."

Also mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate is Al Tonti, local builder and contractor. He has indicated an interest in the job and some of his friends feel that he could be induced to run for council if requested by enough people.

Henry Koontz, now a member of city council, has represented the Hilltop in that body for several years.

Present members of council whose terms expire this year are Joe Jones, Koontz and Dr. L. Fillinger, all Republicans. In all probability they will be candidates to succeed themselves and will receive the party endorsement.

Scarlet Fever Breaks Out At Briggsdale

Two new cases of scarlet fever broke out early yesterday at Briggsdale School. According to Bronson Farmer, principal, the number of cases is now eleven.

Dr. H. L. Mitchell, of the Franklin County Board of Health, advised The Hilltop Record that "the situation is well in hand." Dr. Mitchell believes there is no danger of an epidemic.

In his opinion, "This sort of thing is not unusual. Cases break out intermittently throughout the country." It is his advice that parents should continue to send their children to school, where a board of health nurse is keeping close watch on the children.

Of the 269 children enrolled at Briggsdale, 117 were absent Tuesday and 160 were absent Wednesday. Mr. Farmer declined to comment whether parents should send their children to school.

It is his advice that parents refuse to allow the children to mingle with crowds while at home during the week-end. He advises them to keep the children away from movie theaters.

Dr. Mitchell reported that in addition to the scarlet fever cases, one diphtheria case was found. After examination of school children, nine children were found to be carriers. These have all been quarantined.

Rumors were circulating Wednesday, placing the number of scarlet fever and diphtheria cases at 100. These are false, Dr. Mitchell and Mr. Farmer assert.

Parents should watch for these symptoms in their children. Scarlet fever begins with a sore throat and fever. A rash follows.

Two new cases of diphtheria were noted on the Hilltop Thursday morning. John Burroughs reported one absent with diphtheria and West Junior also one. Two cases reported are within the same family.

Hilltop Girls Are Capped

Three Hilltop girls were among 63 Ohio State University students who were honored at formal capping ceremonies in Campbell Hall auditorium Sunday.

Girls who received their caps were Patricia Louise Cozad, Jean Eleanor Henderson, 661 S. Harris-av, and Roberta Johnson, 237 S. Wayne-av.

Dr. Bland L. Stradley, vice-president of Ohio State University, was the principal speaker. The girls accepted the Florence Nightingale pledge in the impressive candlelight services, which followed the charge to the class by Frances M. McKenna, director of the Nursing School and the presentation of caps and bands.

Sunday's opening of the West Broad will present a double feature, starring Celeste Holm and Dan Dailey in "Chicken Every Sunday, and Ida Lupino and Cornell Wilde in "Road House." Along with these is a brand new

Yes! NO TRICK-PACKAGE COST TACKED ONTO NUCOA . . . YOU PAY ONLY FOR QUALITY . . .

(And you can "bowl-mix" two pounds together almost as quickly as one!)

Experienced housewives from Maine to California tell us:

The way to save money and time is to let one trip to the store, one quick "bowl-mix," give you four pounds of delicious Nucoa ready to serve. This way you do the coloring half as often, and it's almost twice as quick as "squeeze mixing" one at a time!

Of course, what you—and we—hope, is that SOON the law will let you buy Nucoa already colored, and with no extra tax.

Until then, we promise that not one penny of trick-package cost will be added to Nucoa. Your grocer will continue to have this top-quality margarine at a modest price, ready for you to "bowl-mix", the shade of yellow you like and mold as you please for attractive servings.

Kent Bros., Schroeck's Tied

Schroeck's swept their three game series with Shank and Saunders while Kent Bros. were losing one to Wayer Impactor to throw the Recreation League into a tie for first place. Allen Milk, who were only two games off the pace, were eliminated as they dropped three games to Seiller's Department Store.

The league will probably be decided the last night as Schroeck's and Kent's will roll against each other.

Next week Schroeck's will meet Ben Brew while Kent's will be taking on the ever dangerous Allen Milk.

The wide acceptance of detergents is reflected in the wholesale price of tallow, a major ingredient in soap. From a record 1947 high of 27 cents a pound, it has dropped to about 5 cents after having been double that price in January, '49.

Baseball Nine Suffers Loss To Panthers

Linden McKinley's Panthers showed mid-season diamond form by trouncing the local Cowboy baseballers, 9 to 3, at West Tuesday evening. It was Linden's second straight win in as many days and like number of outings, while West was suffering its first setback of the '49 season.

It was pitcher Johnny Hayes, Linden right-hander, that spelled the biggest difference, striking out eight men and walking only one while allowing only five West hits.

It looked like a tight ball game for two innings, and then the Panthers strode to the plate in the top half of the third to knock across four valuable runs at a sizzling pace. West narrowed the margin a little in their half of the fifth by coming through with two runs, but Hayes and Co. came back in the fifth to put things on "ice" with five runs.

Phil Young started the game for the Cowboys, but with only four days rest from his win over East last Friday he was in hot water with the slugging Panthers. Midway of the Linden five run uprising in the big sixth frame, Phil was relieved by "Lefty" Paul Ellingsworth, who toiled the remainder, allowing a couple of hits.

In the third inning, after Young had pulled out of a spot in the second frame, Don Wickiser of Linden bashed a triple to left and Bill Schwab was hit by a pitched ball. Then slugging Bob Parker, Linden's big catcher, smacked a four-master over Morris Dobbs' head in right field. Big Don Paolini, Linden's lanky initial corner man, slapped another over outfielder Dick Kirk's head. Kirk sped back with the ball, managed to get hold of it, but couldn't hold on.

Previous to this, Dick made a beautiful one-hand stab of Jim Birkhead's liner into deep center in the second frame, and then tossed a strike into the plate, holding Linden from scoring.

However, Paolini managed to get a homer out of his, the second consecutive, of this fashion.

In the Cowboy fifth, Jack Pickens led off by singling and Dave Caton walked, and Morris Dobbs was also issued a free pass, filling the sacks.

Dick Culbertson hit a hot roller to Sam Massara at third, bringing home Pickens, but forcing Caton at the hot corner. Then Dick Kirk plated Dobbs with a clean single over shortstop.

Linden came back in their half of the sixth for five tallies, thereby sewing up the game. Massara led it off by singling to right, and the next two hitters, Birkhead and John Weber attempted sacrifices, but both of them beat them out for hits, loading the sacks with none away.

Johnny Hayes then slammed a long triple to left center, plating three tallies and Danny Dover, Panther shortstop, walked, bringing Ellingsworth to Young's rescue. Wickiser grounded out, but singles by Schwab and Parker plated runs No. 8 and 9 for Linden.

West started a belated rally in the bottom of the seventh, with only one run resulting. Caton walked, and Culbertson forced him at second, with the latter plating on a single by Kirk and Dover's error.

The Cowboys will visit Chillicothe Thursday afternoon, with an City League schedule prevailing Friday because of the holiday. Next Tuesday they visit Central and on Friday they play host to North.

Georgiton's Makes 15,000 Easter Eggs

ADMIRING THE EASTER EGGS in the window of Georgiton's Restaurant, 2763 W. Broad-st, are Helen Howard, a waitress, Carol Ann Jones, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones, 33 N. Hague-av, and George Georgiton, owner. (Photo by J. Curtis Allen)

Hilltop's only candy-making firm, Georgiton's, is a popular spot around Easter time. For 12 years Hilltoppers have ordered and bought Georgiton's famous chocolate fruit and nut Easter eggs. Hundreds of eggs are sent to many parts of Ohio and to the United States each year. This year, George Georgiton, owner, reports that already 15 to 20 thousand eggs are on order and will be delivered in time for Easter.

The candy business is almost a tradition with George Georgiton. He and his brother, John, started making Easter eggs as far back as 1925 in Bellefontaine, their home town.

In 1932 they moved to Columbus and started a small business in the north end. In 1937 they moved to the Hilltop and the [illegible] has been booming ever since.

Since his brother's death in 1946 George has had complete charge of making candy for his two candy outlets, 2429 W. Broad-st, and 2763 W. Broad-st. Specialty of the two candy stores are the famous hand-dipped, hand-rolled chocolates.

According to Mr. Georgiton, each chocolate requires individual attention, and each is perfect according to the high standards set up by the firm.

A veteran, Mr. Georgiton, served three years in the service, being stationed in Wyoming. During this period, his wife Mildred, was in charge of the company. The Georgitons have three children.

West Jr. Ball Club Takes 16-2 Win

By Dave Miller

West Junior's baseball squad started the 1949 City Junior High season off on the right foot Tuesday afternoon by trouncing Champion, 16 to 2, at East's Harley Field.

Big Bob Thornton, eighth grader at the Powell Avenue school was a big reason for the success of the team's first game.

His battery mate, Walt Meredith, who is one of the better catchers in the Junior High circuit, came through in the clutch, smacking a two-run double with bases loaded. The other extra base blow by the locals was a triple to center by seventh-grader Jim Kimball. The remainder of the West ten hits were singles.

The Broncos scored in every inning, getting seven in the first, and one each in the second, third and fourth frames and settling for four in the fifth and a pair in the final.

Eddie Gliebe held down first; Dick Hutchison, second; Ellis Easterly, shortstop; and Dickie Orr, third base.

In the outfield, Jim Kimball, Wayne Groce and Jim Murray started with Durwood Vinston filling in later. A regular outfielder, Glenn Hays, quit the team on the eve of Tuesday's fray.

Last Saturday, the Juniors visited Linden Junior, and emerged winners, 6 to 2, over the Northsiders. Lefty Fred Ladrer twirled a two-hitter for the locals, one an infield pop fly, and another infielder roller beat out.

The next game for the Red Lehman-coached locals will be with Roosevelt, also at East next Tuesday afternoon.

It takes two to make a bargain, but only one to get stuck.

In insurance you get just what you pay for. Don't try to buy "bargain" insurance. Be sure in advance of the service and protection you'll get, as well as the cost. We handle only the best. See Joe Briggs at 2596 Sullivant Ave. RA. 3194.

Girls' State Candidates Are Chosen

By Myron T. Seibert

Honors came this week to two West High girls, Lavonne Beard and Sue Glass, who merited appointment to "Buckeye Girls' State," an organization sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, to be held at Capital University, 2199 E. Main-st, Columbus, for one week from June 19 to June 26, inclusive, Principal I. F. Young announced this week.

"Chosen by virtue of their outstanding grades (both had four point perfect scores in scholarship) and service record at West High, both girls represent the finest in character and citizenship," Mr. Young said.

The purpose of Girls' State is to educate young women in duties, privileges, rights and responsibilities of American citizenship; to give to them an opportunity to learn the problems of government with special emphasis upon the contribution women can make to the welfare of the city, county, state and nation.

The Buckeye Girls' State this year will be supervised by a board consisting of a director, an assistant director, the dean of government, assistant dean of government, a director of counselors, a director of health, and a director of public relations. In addition these is a social and government counselor for each 40 girls, and a variety of speakers who are experts in their respective offices of government.

Girls are sponsored through the American Legion Auxiliary Units, either directly by the Unit itself, or by any interested organization in the community.

Lavonne is sponsored locally by the Hilltop Camp Chase Post of the American Legion, and Sue by the Blue Star Mothers.

Both are 16, and juniors at the Hilltop school.

Sue is identified with and holds membership in Stella Becker corps de Ballet (Beckerettes), Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church Choir, West High groups including G.A.A., Photoplay, Spanish Club, Y-Teens, "L" Society.

Planning to enter Miami University after graduation from high school, she plans to spend her summers with the famed "Rockettes" at Radio City Music Hall, New York.

Lavonne is interested in music and is a member of the Columbus Girl Choir, the West Hi Trio, the West Hi advanced choir; she is also treasurer of the school Latin Club, belongs to Y-Teens and "L" Society.

Upon graduation from high school she plans to enter OSU Law College or the Arts College to qualify to become an author.

She holds a part-time job at the Hilltop Branch Library.

Sue is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Glass, 172 Guernsey-ave. She resides with her parents and sister, Kay, age 12, and brother, Dick, nine.

Lavonne lives at 3050 Steele-av with her mother, Mrs. Raymond A. Beard. Her sister Bettirae now a sophomore at Ohio State, was West High class speaker in 1948.

Property Owners To Meet Apr. 15
The Property Owners Association of Franklin County will meet Friday, Apr. 15, at City Hall, second floor Council Chamber, at 8 p. m. All property owners should be present.

New York Radio Script Writer Visits West

By Myron T. Seifert

Jack Seymour, West High graduate, '42, and a student in radio at Columbia University, New York City, visited the journalism department at West recently, where he had served as Occident editor seven years ago.

The only student from Columbus enrolled in this work at Columbia, Jack pointed out to the would-be journalists who interviewed him, the unlimited possibilities of radio and television.

Admitted to the school several years ago, Jack admits that requirements now are somewhat more rigid (requiring a bachelor's degree) than when he matriculated.

Following his discharge from service, Jack made application at Columbia and was accepted. Recently he has been writing radio scripts and directing shows in New York over Station WEBD.

Jack's Columbus address is 156 S. Burgess-av.

Hilltopana

1914

Booster club, Hilltop Business Association, YMCA, Kiwanis were organizations unheard of 35 to 40 years ago on the Hilltop. However there was a civic organization that might have been the progenitor of the above mentioned groups in name called the "Hilltop Improvement Association" which accomplished much for the young, growing community in that day. Meetings were generally held at the West Broad Street School.

Early officers included Dr. L. B. Turner, president; M. W. Westlake, vice president; C. J. Randall, recording secretary; W. E. Dolby, financial treasurer; W. L. Millikin, treasurer, with Fred Postle and Dr. Martindale, trustees.

This group influenced the city of Columbus in providing many improvements at the present day Glenwood Park.

In the year 1914 Charles W. Walton resigned his work with the Boggs Co. and accepted a position with the F. C. & A. Howald Co. in March.

Dr. Martindale was championship speller at West Broad Street School in a spelling bee sponsored by the Evangelical Church.

Dr. Compton of Wooster college occupied the pulpit at the Hoge Memorial Church . . . winter picnic held at Hoge.

Seiler's sold pianos and sewing machines . . . West Side Lumber Co. at same location; two phones, Citizen 6277 and Hilltop phone 177 . . . R. Bair, jeweler and optician, 2345 W. Broad-st.

William L. Dunn, 2327 W. Broad-st, coal, feed and expressing . . . Spence & Rawn, 2275 W. Broad-st, were dealers in groceries, fresh and cured meats, feeds and notions . . . W. L. Millikin, hardware . . . T. C. Mitchell, union barber.

Hilltop undertaker was F. L. Sifrit, 2573 W. Broad with "Auto funerals and lady assistant" . . . Draper & Cumins, dry goods, notions, 2350-2 W. Broad-st.

Remarked a Hilltopper, "Of course we freely admit there is a profusion of everything desirable in the bottoms, but during March (flood month) we prefer to live on the Hilltop, above the thick river water."

The Hilltop had four churches . . . Hilltop Band of 16 pieces rendered service gratis at all local entertainments.

Said another Hilltopper, "The pool room formerly located next to the Empire picture theatre has been removed to parts unknown, which goes to show that we are growing better each day."

Estella Burnside, local realtor, once was one of editors of Hilltop Weekly News and also had millinery establishment at 2402 W. Broad-st.

Just Garden Talk

By W. H. Lindberg

It is the time of year now that just about everybody is thinking about yards or gardens. If you happen to be one of those individuals who is contemplating doing over a foundation planting, starting one or are just plain planning to add a few plants to what you have, you will be interested in this.

Have you ever thought of your grounds development as an investment in landscape beauty? You may answer this question with another when you say, "How can it be when evergreens and shrubbery are strictly a luxury."

When you invest in large, well developed plants you are buying a luxury because as that plant grows most of the new growth will be pruned off to make it retain its place in the landscape. On the other hand, when using the smaller plants and giving them the proper care as they come along you will have a plant of increased value. When this is done you have an investment in landscape beauty.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

SYNOPSIS

Marriage for the Farishes had begun frugally and happily. After ten years Beatrice Farish and her successful husband, Porter, find themselves at an impasse. Porter has become morose, disgruntled as caretaker-ous old Mr. Ramsey, the rich industrialist who employs him. Beatrice fears that their marriage is headed for the rocks.

CHAPTER TWO

THE HOTEL where Beatrice and Porter stayed on their honeymoon was four blocks from the beach. It was the best he could afford. A nondescript room like thousands of others across the land. The radiator whistled, and the bed was lumpy, and there were not enough towels, and the only light was a veritable beacon in the ceiling. The view from the window was the brick wall of a garage.

When they came in she began to do little things to tidy the room. Porter stood by the window with his arms folded and with a look of hidden suffering in his eyes.

"Bee, the next time we come to Atlantic City we're going to have a suite. Carpets three inches thick and flowers for you every day."

She had stood and looked at him, knowing him to be extraordinarily handsome and knowing, too, that his unhappiness was of himself, not of her.

"But that will be the second time, dearest, not the first. We can't have this ever again."

A muscle in his square jaw moved. "You're right, Bee, I'm going to tell you something I've never told you or anyone . . ."

A long buried wish, she wondered? But it seemed to her from his tone that she was about to hear a long concealed threat uncovered.

"Yes, Porter? My darling, what is it?"

"I'm good. I know I'm good, Bee! I'm going places. I can't be satisfied with a mean, grubby little existence. You can't let yourself become satisfied and complacent if you want to get somewhere. You can't stand still. You can't stop!"

"And I'll do everything to help you. I'll be the most perfect wife in the world. . . ." I am so ignorant, she thought. I know so little. I don't know how nice, conventional people live. How do you learn how to be the wife of a successful man? Oh, the surety in his face!

They came together in the center of the little room.

When she was close to him, Beatrice thought she was not wholly herself. She was a part of him.

"Bee."

"I love you, Porter. Oh, I love you. . . ."

"Bee, I've got to tell you something else."

"Yes?" Just tell me the same things all over again . . . the things you said last night and the night before. See how selfish I am. I just want to hear those wonderful things about me again. And then kiss me and caress me and love me.

His body stiffened. "You should know, Bee, I'm going to be either a millionaire—or a bum."

Beatrice arose quickly from the elegant little love seat covered with lemon-colored satin. Her slightly flushed face indicated only mildly the excessive warmth she felt inside. It's queer, she thought, but I'm as embarrassed as though it's indecent to look into the past.

She heard Marianne's steps upon the stairs.

She and Marianne were in the dining room, the room of the stately antique mahogany pieces that Beatrice with bursting pride had bought at an auction, when Porter came in. Beatrice took a deep breath and then a furtive glance at him. The lines in his tanned forehead had cut deeper. Soon they would be permanent. Though he did not lift his eyes, she knew the inexplicable pain and anger in them that robbed them of their natural beauty. It seemed to her, too, that his breath had quickened perceptibly with the years, thus permitting him the barest of pauses between heartbeat and heartbeat. His brown suit fitted his long-limbed compact body as most men wistfully wished their clothes fitted them. Porter had not had to learn to wear expensive tweeds casually. It had been only the cheap clothing that he had worn with acute self-consciousness.

Suddenly Beatrice wanted nothing to eat at all. All her feelings seemed to be in her throat.

Presently Porter lifted his eyes to his daughter.

"How is your arithmetic coming along?" he asked.

Not asked, Beatrice thought. Demanded. And he didn't want to hear that Marianne was doing well. He wanted to hear that she was doing badly, because that would be another excuse for his [illegible].

Beatrice looked appealingly at her child. But Marianne, she knew, was unpredictable.

"I'm terrible," Marianne replied blithely, shrugging. "I hate arithmetic."

"What marks have you been getting?" Porter asked.

"Oh, forty."

"Forty!" His glance locked with Beatrice's. "Did you hear that? She gets forty in arithmetic. What do you do about it? Don't you help her?"

It would be futile to tell him that this was the first she had heard of the low mark, that indeed Marianne had brought no papers home. The private school she attended did not give homework to second graders. She had, however, inquired daily of Marianne how school was going, and had always been given the cheerful reply that everything was fine.

Appeasement, she thought. Always appeasement. Think of Marianne, and of Frances, and of Porter, too. Don't let him say something for which he'll be sorry.

"Forty," Porter was saying. "Don't you know anything? Doesn't your mother ever help you?"

He must, Beatrice thought, chew on it like a dog on the only bone he can dig up from the garden.

"Forty," he repeated. "Can't you learn simple arithmetic? Why can't you?"

Marianne turned her proud, flushed little face to her mother.

Pressing down on her own anger Beatrice asked, "When did you get this mark, dear?"

"The first day I went to school after I had the chicken pox," Marianne declared.

"That was a month ago," Beatrice said. She could now relieve the valve of tension.

"Yes," Marianne said. She drew herself up and confronted Porter. "I missed the work because I was absent. Since then I've been getting seventies and eighties in all my arithmetic. And that's not all! I'm the best reader in the class. So there!"

But he was neither amused nor [illegible]. He lit a cigarette and said, "I'm late," and arose. Marianne's napkin dropped to the floor as she pushed back her chair and ran for his reluctant kiss. "You didn't kiss Mother good-bye," she reminded him. He mumbled something Beatrice couldn't hear. In a few moments she heard his car as if it were being torn from the garage. She hoped the garage wall wasn't damaged again from his temper.

Marianne came back. "What's the matter with Daddy?"

Beatrice reached for a cigarette. "He's tired, dear. I think he needs a holiday."

"Another one?"

"Yes, another one."

"You always say that."

"There's nothing else to say now."

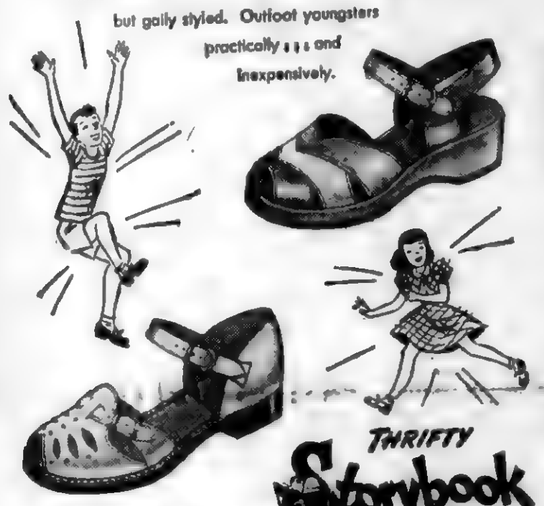
As, a few minutes later, she stood before the broad window of the living room and watched Marianne go down the path to the waiting station wagon, she feared that the time would come when there would be something else to say. She did not know how you explained to a child that word that was like surgery—divorce.

At ten thirty she was ready to leave.

"What will I tell Mrs. Ramsey if she calls?" Frances asked in her soft drawl. She turned down the radio in the kitchen in order to hear.

Beatrice stopped. It seemed that her heart stopped, too. Mrs. Ramsey. I won't think of her now, she thought. I'll push her back, way back into a crevice of my mind.

"Ask her to call me tonight, Frances."



"Yes, Mrs. Farish, I will."

West Improving And Landscaping School Grounds

By Myron T. Seifert

Clarence Bateman, faculty manager in charge of maintenance and landscaping at West High School, and his crew of Hilltop youth, made "hay" while the sun shone last week by preparing the soil for the newly fenced section, west and to the rear of the building, for use by the girls' physical education department.

Every piece of equipment known to the modern gardener was put into use by scores of West High students as they "dressed" the soil with grass seed and fertilizer.

In the past, the terrain on this field has been rough and uneven, with a limestone foundation, forming a myriad of lakes after each rain.

Also completed under Mr. Bateman's supervision last fall were the erection of 1100 new steel bleacher seats; preparations for the blacktop sidewalk to the stadium; the painting of the scoreboard, bandstand and goal posts; and the new side-line markers for the football field.

When Irvin F. Young was appointed to the position of West High principal, three years ago, he immediately launched a movement to landscape and make exterior improvements.

Mr. Bateman, also industrial arts instructor, was delegated three years ago by Mr. Young to see what additional improvements could be made on the outside of the building.

This past winter Bateman directed and aided in the removal of four dead elms from the school plot. The dead trees were replaced with sturdy pin oaks in front of the building, maples at the north and south sides, and a variety of trees at the rear of the building.

To prepare the baseball field for early spring play and practice, Mr. Bateman's crew brought 15 tons of clay from an adjoining excavation, screened it, and mixed it with sand to form a foundation along the baselines, along which the runners could race.

Last fall a planting and replanting program for the flower beds was completed. Tulips, crocus, hyacinths and mums were planted in beds about the school yard.

Country rats do more real damage than their city cousins. In the country they destroy grain but in town they live chiefly on garbage — the leftovers of the garbage can.

Rhoda Guild Plans Easter Service And Breakfast

The annual Easter sunrise service and breakfast will be held this year in St. Paul Lutheran Church, 86 Pasadena-av, New Rome, Arthur P. Ramuller, pastor.

This service is sponsored by the Rhoda Guild, young women's organization of the church, and will begin at 6:30 a. m. The Easter message will be brought by Rev. Erwin Krebs, commissioner of Negro Missions for the American Lutheran Church. The Scripture lesson, prayer and responsive reading will be given by Mrs. Melvin Kuhn, Mrs. Howard Anderson and Mrs. Melvin Dutton, members of the Rhoda Guild.

Mrs. Maurice Rosebury and Mrs. Carl Bradley, also members, will present a vocal duet. Following the services, breakfast will be served in the basement of the church by the Rhoda Guild. The public is invited to attend. The regular Sunday School and church services will follow.

Organist for the services will be Mrs. David Haudesen, another Guild member.

Hilltopper Tours Ohio With Wesley Student Choir

Wanda Archer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hiermer, 1982 Fairmont-av, is spending five days of Holy Week touring southeastern and central Ohio with the Wesley Foundation Student Choir of Ohio University. Miss Archer, a freshman studying home economics, is librarian for the choir and a member of the soprano section.

Wesley Foundation at Athens, one of the six Methodist student foundations in Ohio, sponsors the choir. The Holy Week tour is unique, being the first one an Ohio group of this kind has made. Most of the programs will be presented in Methodist churches, but at 3 p. m. on Good Friday the Wesley Choir will broadcast over Station WRFD, Worthington.

Miss Archer, besides being a member of the Wesley Choir, was recently elected recording secretary of Kappa Phi, national club for university women of Methodist preference. She is also active in the campus YWCA chapter, the Home Economics Club, and the Women's Independent Association.

While Miss Archer attended West High School, she was a member of the National Honor Society and the Y-Teens, as well as the French, Drama, Chemistry, and Latin Clubs. She also sang in the advanced choir.

Landlady — I don't allow any games of chance here.

Student — This isn't that sort of game. My friend here hasn't a chance.

Harry — Tell me a story, Uncle.

Uncle — What about?

Harry — About a little boy who had an uncle that gave him a bat and ball.

Just Garden Talk

By W. H. Lindberg

It is the time of year now that just about everybody is thinking about yards or gardens. If you happen to be one of those individuals who is contemplating doing over a foundation planting, starting one or are just plain planning to add a few plants to what you have, you will be interested in this.

Have you ever thought of your grounds development as an investment in landscape beauty? You may answer this question with another when you say, "How can it be when evergreens and shrubbery are strictly a luxury."

When you invest in large, well developed plants you are buying a luxury because as that plant grows most of the new growth will be pruned off to make it retain its place in the landscape. On the other hand, when using the smaller plants and giving them the proper care as they come along you will have a plant of increased value. When this is done you have an investment in landscape beauty.

In selecting nursery stock for the yard, there are several things that should be kept in mind. The most important one of these is to always select quality in variety rather than size in an inferior or unsuitable type of plant. Purchase your plants from a nurseryman so that you may know that the plants are freshly dug. Deal with a person in whom you can place your confidence and trust his judgment in selecting the best plants for your location. Your nurseryman may make a mistake now and then but his mistake won't be as big as yours can be if you are one of the definitely amateur gardeners.

"I love you, Porter. Oh, I love you. . . ."

"Bee, I've got to tell you something else."

"Yes?" Just tell me the same things all over again . . . the things you said last night and the night before. See how selfish I am. I just want to hear those wonderful things about me again. And then kiss me and caress me and love me.

His body stiffened. "You should know, Bee, I'm going to be either a millionaire—or a bum."

Beatrice arose quickly from the elegant little love seat covered with lemon-colored satin. Her slightly flushed face indicated only mildly the excessive warmth she felt inside. It's queer, she thought, but I'm as embarrassed as though it's indecent to look into the past.

She heard Marianne's steps upon the stairs.

She and Marianne were in the dining room, the room of the stately antique mahogany pieces that Beatrice with bursting pride had bought at an auction, when Porter came in. Beatrice took a deep breath and then a furtive glance at him. The lines in his tanned forehead had cut deeper. Soon they would be permanent. Though he did not lift his eyes, she knew the inexplicable pain and anger in them that robbed them of their natural beauty. It seemed to her, too, that his breath had quickened perceptibly with the years, thus permitting him the barest of pauses between heartbeat and heartbeat. His brown suit fitted his long-limbed compact body as most men wistfully wished their clothes fitted them. Porter had not had to learn to wear expensive tweeds casually. It had been only the cheap clothing that he had worn with acute self-consciousness.

Suddenly Beatrice wanted nothing to eat at all. All her feelings seemed to be in her throat.

Presently Porter lifted his eyes to his daughter.

"How is your arithmetic coming along?" he asked.

Not asked, Beatrice thought. Demanded. And he didn't want to hear that Marianne was doing well. He wanted to hear that she was doing badly, because that would be another excuse for his own.

Beatrice looked appealingly at her child. But Marianne, she knew, was unpredictable.

"I'm terrible," Marianne replied blithely, shrugging. "I hate arithmetic."

"What marks have you been getting?" Porter asked.

"Oh, forty."

"Forty!" His glance locked with Beatrice's. "Did you hear that? She gets forty in arithmetic. What do you do about it? Don't you help her?"

It would be futile to tell him that this was the first she had heard of the low mark, that indeed Marianne had brought no papers home. The private school she attended did not give homework to second graders. She had, however, inquired daily of Marianne how school was going, and had always been given the cheerful reply that everything was fine.

Appeasement, she thought. Always appeasement. Think of Marianne, and of Frances, and of Porter, too. Don't let him say something for which he'll be sorry.

"Forty," Porter was saying. "Don't you know anything? Doesn't your mother ever help you?"

He must, Beatrice thought, chew on it like a dog on the only bone he can dig up from the garden.

"Forty," he repeated. "Can't you learn simple arithmetic? Why can't you?"

Marianne turned her proud, flushed little face to her mother.

Pressing down on her own anger Beatrice asked, "When did you get this mark, dear?"

"The first day I went to school after I had the chicken pox," Marianne declared.

"That was a month ago," Beatrice said. She could now relieve the valve of tension.

"Yes," Marianne said. She drew herself up and confronted Porter. "I missed the work because I was absent. Since then I've been getting seventies and eighties in all my arithmetic. And that's not all! I'm the best reader in the class. So there!"

But he was neither amused nor shocked. He lit a cigarette, and said, "I'm late," and arose. Marianne's napkin dropped to the floor as she pushed back her chair and ran for his reluctant kiss. "You didn't kiss Mother good-bye," she reminded him. He mumbled something Beatrice couldn't hear. In a few moments she heard his car as if it were being torn from the garage. She hoped the garage wall wasn't damaged again from his temper.

Marianne came back. "What's the matter with Daddy?"

Beatrice reached for a cigarette. "He's tired, dear. I think he needs a holiday."

"Another one?"

"Yes, another one."

"You always say that."

"There's nothing else to say now."

As, a few minutes later, she stood before the broad window of the living room and watched Marianne go down the path to the waiting station wagon, she feared that the time would come when there would be something else to say. She did not know how you explained to a child that word that was like surgery—divorce.

At ten thirty she was ready to leave.

"What will I tell Mrs. Ramey if she calls?" Frances asked in her soft drawl. She turned down the radio in the kitchen in order to hear.

Beatrice stopped. It seemed that her heart stopped, too. Mrs. Ramey. I won't think of her now, she thought. I'll push her back, way back into a crevice of my mind.

"Ask her to call me tonight, Frances."

"Yes, Mrs. Farish, I will."

West Improving And Landscaping School Grounds

By Myron T. Seifert

Clarence Bateman, faculty manager in charge of maintenance and landscaping at West High School, and his crew of Hilltop youth, made "hay" while the sun shone last week by preparing the soil for the newly fenced section, west and to the rear of the building, for use by the girls' physical education department.

Every piece of equipment known to the modern gardener was put into use by scores of West High students as they "dressed" the soil with grass seed and fertilizer.

In the past, the terrain on this field has been rough and uneven, with a limestone foundation, forming a myriad of lakes after each rain.

Also completed under Mr. Bateman's supervision last fall were the erection of 1100 new steel bleacher seats; preparations for the blacktop sidewalk to the stadium; the painting of the scoreboard, bandstand and goal posts; and the new side-line markers for the football field.

When Irvin F. Young was appointed to the position of West High principal, three years ago, he immediately launched a movement to landscape and make exterior improvements.

Mr. Bateman, also industrial arts instructor, was delegated three years ago by Mr. Young to see what additional improvements could be made on the outside of the building.

This past winter Bateman directed and aided in the removal of four dead elms from the school plot. The dead trees were replaced with sturdy pin oaks in front of the building, maples at the north and south sides, and a variety of trees at the rear of the building.

To prepare the baseball field for early spring play and practice, Mr. Bateman's crew brought 15 tons of clay from an adjoining excavation, screened it, and mixed it with sand to form a foundation along the baselines, along which the runners could race.

Last fall a planting and replanting program for the flower beds was completed. Tulips, crocus, hyacinths and mums were planted in beds about the school yard.

Country rats do more real damage than their city cousins. In the country they destroy grain but in town they live chiefly on garbage — the leftovers of the garbage can.

Hilltopper Tours Ohio With Wesley Student Choir

Wanda Archer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Biegner, 1982 Fairmont-av., is spending five days of Holy Week touring southeastern and central Ohio with the Wesley Foundation Student Choir of Ohio University. Miss Archer, a freshman studying home economics, is librarian for the choir and a member of the soprano section.

Wesley Foundation at Athens, one of the six Methodist student foundations in Ohio, sponsors the choir. The Holy Week tour is unique, being the first one an Ohio group of this kind has made. Most of the programs will be presented in Methodist churches, but at 3 p. m. on Good Friday the Wesley Choir will broadcast over Station WRFD, Worthington.

Miss Archer, besides being a member of the Wesley Choir, was recently elected recording secretary of Kappa Phi, national club for university women of Methodist preference. She is also active in the campus YWCA chapter, the Home Economics Club, and the Women's Independent Association.

While Miss Archer attended West High School, she was a member of the National Honor Society and the Y-Teens, as well as the French, Drama, Chemistry, and Latin Clubs. She also sang in the advanced choir.

Landlady—I don't allow any games of chance here.

Adventists Seek Funds For Projects

Once a year Seventh-Day Adventists have a drive for funds to help carry on their world-wide humanitarian work of medical, educational and missionary projects. The members of the local Eastwood Seventh-Day Adventist Church launched their 41st Ingathering campaign Saturday. It will continue through April. Their goal is $4000. Goal for North America is $2,500,000.

Seventh-Day Adventists sent out 359 new missionary doctors, nurses, teachers and evangelists last year. They spend nearly $30,000,000 yearly on their world-wide medical, educational and evangelistic work. They have aided 40 countries with relief shipments of 3,000,000 pounds of clothing and $10,000,000 in food and clothing.

It takes $18.80 to support this full program of mercy one minute. Many members are "Minute-men" every year by donating this sum to the Ingathering fund.

Easter—Jesus Tells of Life Immortal — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—John 5:28-29; 14:1-6; I Corinthians 15:1-8, 20-26; II Corinthians 4:16-5:10.

Jesus, knowing His earthly life was near its end, told His disciples "In My Father's house are many mansions . . . I go to prepare a place for you."

Jesus also told the disciples, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Paul, in his first epistle to the Corinthians, wrote of how the disciples saw Jesus after His resurrection, and that many others saw Him, as many as 500.

Paul wrote the Corinthians that, although he was born too late to see the Lord, He came to him and saved him.

MEMORY VERSE—John 14:1.

"Camel's hair" brushes are made from the fur of a species of squirrel.

Primitive man believed that liver was the seat of life.

St. Aloysius Cub Pack 250 To Celebrate Anniversary

"In this day and age everything possible should be done to teach young people the ways and means to a better and brighter future. Both their spiritual and material welfare should be of the utmost concern.

With these thoughts in mind, a small group of men and women met Apr. 1, 1948, to organize Cub Pack 250 of St. Aloysius Church.

A pack committee was formed, the members of which are as follows: Jack McAndrews, chairman; Pat Martin, secretary; Kenneth Martindale, treasurer; E. S. Ferguson, cubmaster; Louis Noble, Harold Davis and E. Schroeder, cubmaster assistants; Ted J. Roberts, program director and outdoor man, and Mrs. Fred Courtade, publicity.

This committee meets once a month, to plan and direct the Cub Pack activities.

Starting with only a few members, the Pack has increased to 50 members, with six dens or subdivisions. All Cubs are between the ages of nine and 12. In addition to the Cub members, in each den, a den mother, a den dad and a den chief are needed. Each den chief is a registered Boy Scout.

Their duties are to supervise the work, training and achievement of the Cubs. At the age of 12 these Cubs will be ready for their graduation and enrollment in the Boy Scouts of America.

Den Mothers are Mrs. Ted Roberts, Mrs. Kenneth Martindale, Mrs. E. S. Ferguson, Mrs. Thomas Kenney, Mrs. Gladys McAndrews and Mrs. Fred Courtade.

Den chiefs are Robert Morgan, Kenneth Martindale, Jr., Paul McCourt, Pat Martindale, Jack McAndrews, Jr., and Dwight Barrett.

After initial training and completion of required achievements, a Cub receives his Bobcat pin. In turn, as he progresses he is awarded a Wolf pin, the nine to 10 age group; a Bear pin, 10 to 11 group; and a Lion pin, 11 to 12 group. In the intervention, he is awarded one gold and as many as 10 silver arrows, each significant of an achievement.

During the past year, 44 Bobcat pins have been awarded. In the Wolf class 25 pins were awarded, 21 in the Bear class and eight in the Lion class. For individual achievements gold arrows and silver arrows were awarded.

A Cub is justly proud of his pins and arrow awards since they denote the individual's progress.

Monthly projects are planned, and awards are made on a competitive basis. Three ribbons are awarded for each of the Wolf, Bear and Lion categories. A blue ribbon is first prize, a Red is second and a White is third. After six Blue ribbons are won by the boys in any one Den, a Den prize is given. In like manner, nine Red ribbons or 12 White ribbons entitle the Den to a prize.

In this manner, the age and ability of the Cub is taken into consideration, and the competition is strong.

During the past months, the projects of Pack 250 have been a series of Indian lore. Each Cub made a tomahawk, tom tom, head dress, moccasins and loin cloth or breech clout. Other projects included bird houses, necker slides, Den doodles, specialty project, kite and free hand art work.

Besides learning to work with his hands, a Cub is taught other essentials so vital in character building. Respect for law and order, consideration for the rights of others, fulfillment of moral obligations, cleanliness in body and mind are but a few of the subjects included in the training.

Being a Cub in Pack 250 is not all work and no play. Movies, parties, outings and numerous other activities are carefully planned. At each Pack meeting, the Cubs entertain with comic acts, magic and minstrel shows.

Through the help and encouragement of the Cub Committee, Den Mothers and Chiefs, six boys of Cub Pack 250 have completed their Cub training and have graduated to the Boy Scouts of America.

The Pack has been awarded a buckskin pennant for organization in the Region 4 roundup, which includes the states of Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia. Also for more than doubling its membership in the past year the Pack received the Fred J. Milligan pennant award.

With continued efforts, many more will attain the realization for which the pack was organized. Those responsible for the progress made within the first anniversary of the pack can well be proud of the results and look forward to even better things.

Pa—Yes, son.

On days when I am not around.
But when I'm home and want some rest
You seem to be a little pest.

The Spectator By C.C. Hartley

Cuff Notes: Pre-Easter buying on Friday and Saturday resembled that of Christmas. Stores were crowded and traffic took its toll of dented fenders and radiators and everyone rushed hither and yon . . . April showers may bring May flowers but April snow brought frowns to many a lady with a flowery bonnet in the Easter parade . . . Dr. E. J. Miller reports talking with his son in Maine on Sunday, the latter reporting a balmy temperature of 72 degrees . . . Understand that the city has given an order that the old garage building just east of the Hilltop YMCA be torn down. This old brick structure is really a danger trap and could very easily be the scene of a terrible tragedy should a few more bricks fall in, possibly on some youngsters playing thereabouts . . . One sure way to cure all our economic ills is to spend. That is the theory of certain men in Congress who advocated government spending to curb inflation and are now setting up machinery to spend even more if the country starts toward a recession . . . That paving job on Sullivant Ave. west of Hague will be a welcome relief to people in that vicinity who have been traveling this wash board for a number of years now . . . Hilltop Kiwanians will put on the program when this club visits the Circleville Club on May 9 . . . Farmer Cunningham thinks the Hilltop Kiwanis should sponsor another horse show this year. He has a new colt that Bill Coon took the first ride on last week only to find he had some muscles that hadn't been used lately . . . While corsages were the sign of the day one local choir boy had a place of prominence in a Sunday church program wearing a bright black shiner over one eye. And you guessed it, planted there by a girl . . . That recent survey on store hours revealed that about 40% of the people are not in accord with Wednesday afternoon closing and it now appears likely that more stores will start staying open Wednesday afternoons comes September . . . If you haven't yet seen a Hilltop Little Theatre production, we highly recommend your attendance at "Her Husband's Wife" at the Burgess School auditorium, Sunday evening, May 8.

Notes and Nubbins: Understand that Russell Ryerson has a new Kaiser and has washed it 11 times in three weeks . . . Reliable reports have it that Ray Anderson, postal employee, writes his wife letters and leaves the postage off so she has to pay the mailman . . . Mrs. Mary Clark is a patient at Mt. Carmel Hospital . . . Bob Ferguson has been an army flyer for eight years and last week he took his mother for a ride from Dayton to Columbus and back, her first with her son as pilot.

President Jack Sensenbrenner announced that the Hilltop Kiwanis will participate in an inter-club meeting with Circleville in that city on Monday, May 2.

Thousands Brave Foul Weather For Easter Services

Rain, snow and sleet didn't dampen the spirits of the several thousand Hilltoppers who attended local churches on Easter Sunday. Pert straw bonnets and handsome Easter outfits got an after-church soaking when Hilltoppers emerged from 10:30 services. Rain, which later turned to snow, came a few minutes before the end of the services.

A record attendance was experienced by most churches. Those, which were contacted reported the following: Hillcrest Baptist Church, 1136; Glenwood Methodist, 1200; Warren Avenue Church of the Nazarene, 425; St. John Lutheran Church, 797. Westgate Methodist, 663; Hilltop Community Church, 281; Concordia Lutheran Church, 111; Sullivant Avenue Friends Church, 634; Wheatland Avenue Methodist, 225; Whitethorne Church of Christ in Christian Union, 150; Highland Avenue Friends, 623; Westgate EUB, 756, and Hoge Memorial, 1350.

The above figures are an approximate total attendance as recorded by the churches.

On the whole many of the large churches were forced to turn away church-goers at the regular 10:30 services. Attendance at Sunrise Services averaged from 50 to 100 at most of the local churches. Those in attendance were the only fortunate church-goers to see the sun.

Easter breakfasts as scheduled by various churches had an expected large attendance.

Sunday Schools of the various churches contacted reported larger attendance than most had had in some time.

Easter Sunday's low temperature was 27 at 4 a. m., the high was 45 at 11 a. m. Easter weather was rainy and snowy in Ohio, but other parts of the nation reported fair weather.

Political Pot Still Boils, Nearly 'Jells'

Hilltop's political pot continued to simmer this week, but at the moment the brew has not yet "jelled."

Chief topics of conversation among the politically conscious were the prospective candidacy of Leo Phillips, retired chief of Columbus detectives, for a seat in City Council, and whether Henry J. Koontz, now representing this section of the city in Council, would seek reelection.

Phillips, who lives at 617 S. Ogden-av, told the Record Monday evening that he "definitely" would make up his mind about entering the race sometime this week. He is a Republican.

Deadline for filing of petitions for the Aug. 9 primary is June 10.

Koontz has not yet clarified his position in regard to seeking reelection. His term in office, together with those of Council President Joseph R. Jones and Dr. O. J. Fillinger, both Republicans, expires in January. It is probable that all three will seek to be returned to Council.

Don Nafzger Is Elected By West Council

Don Nafzger, 222 N. Harris-av, was elected last week, president of West High School's student council, the student governing body at the Hilltop school, Mrs. Mary Dugan, faculty advisor, announces.

Primary election nominating a slate of candidates was held Apr. 4; an elimination poll was taken Monday, Apr. 11, and the final election, resulting in Nafzger's selection, was held Wednesday, Apr. 13.

Ahhhh-Choooo! Dairy Salesman Down for Count!

The weather being what it has been the last week, sneezes have been commonplace, but not the gargantuan type which laid low a Hilltopper of 25 years' standing.

Last Thursday, John Schneider of 143 N. Westmoor-av let loose with a sneeze so violent that a blood vessel in his stomach was ruptured. Now, on doctor's orders, he is flat on his back for three weeks hoping for the best.

Long-Awaited Paving Job Is Started In Sullivant Ave.

40-Foot Asphalt Street West Of Hague Ave. Due

Sullivant-av's long-awaited improvement program in the stretch west of Hague-av finally got under way this week.

The improvement, which was approved by the voters of Columbus in the blanket bond issue program in November, 1945, will give the street, between Hague-av and Derrer-rd, the same 40-foot width which it boasts east of Hague-av.

The 40-foot width between curbs will furnish almost twice the paved surface that the street now has. An asphalt surface is provided in the paving contract, according to City Engineer Paul W. Maetzel.

The contract for the improvement was let to the Complete General Construction Co., 1221 E. Fifth-av, last October, Mr. Maetzel said, but work was postponed until the spring. The contract was let for a total cost of $156,632 and the tentative completion date, depending on the weather, is July 1.

Mr. Maetzel said a great deal of drainage work, especially in the area west of Binns-blvd, will be required before actual construction can be started.

Sullivant-av is closed to traffic because of construction work, Mr. Maetzel said. Trolley coach service is terminated at Harris-av and tripper service at Binns-blvd by gasoline bus is provided by the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

Thatchers To Sail For England And Continent In May

How would you like to spend a three months' summer vacation abroad? It can't happen to all of us, but it will happen to the Newton Thatchers of 2966 Crescent-dr. Mr. Thatcher, the county treasurer-elect, will take office in September, after his return from England and the Continent.

Leaving May 19 from New York on the new Cunard cruise ship, the Caronia, the first liner to have been built since the war, the Thatchers expect to dock in Southhampton, England on May 25, six days later.

Mrs. Thatcher, a native of England, is looking forward to their visiting several of her relatives including two sisters. One lives in South Woodford, a suburb of London, and the other in Sussex.

After a short stay in England, they plan to visit western Ireland and Dublin accompanied by several cousins of Mrs. Thatcher.

After their return to London, they will meet Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cooke, formerly of Columbus and now of Dayton, who will arrive in London from the States. The Thatchers plan to celebrate their 10th wedding anniversary in London on June 21.

This might be enough of a vacation for most people, but not the Thatchers, who will embark for the continent the latter part of June.

In Paris, France, they plan to spend two or three days visiting Mr. and Mrs. Solon Gilmore. Mrs. Gilmore is the former Jean Ett, a Hilltop girl, who formerly served as secretary to the pastor of the Hilltop Lutheran Church. Mr. Gilmore is also from Columbus. He is at the present time associated with the civilian branch of the Army in Paris.

After Paris, the couple will leave for a motor coach conducted tour through the Chateau country of France to northern Italy, including Milan and Venice, and through the Tyrol mountains and the Dolomites in Southern Austria.

After their tour they will return to Paris and England, where they will visit in Liverpool, Wales, Scotland, Devon and Cornwall, until they embark for the States on Aug. 2.

In the States they will spend a week near Vergennes, Vt. with Mr. and Mrs. George Knoeshow. Mrs. Kneeshaw is the former Martha Ann Brown of 64 N. Powell-av.

Windstorm Leaves Hilltop In Darkness

The violent wind and electrical storm that swept Columbus Apr. 14, left more than half the Hilltop without lights.

A break at Sylvan and Palmetto-avs darkened the Hilltop west of Warren-av. Ten crews were put to work repairing widespread damage.

The Port Columbus weather station said the short 15-minute storm developed winds up to 45 miles an hour.

The storm was the forerunner of cooler weather, which moved into Columbus for the next few days, following the high on Apr. 14 of 75 degrees at 4 p. m.

New Faces Greet Trade At Robinson Appliance Store

SERVING ROBINSON CUSTOMERS are (left to right) Jack C. Boyer, salesman; M. E. Van Atta, new manager; M. L. Reichard, salesman, and Mrs. Louise Balzer, saleslady and secretary.

There are several new faces greeting the trade at the C. C. Robinson Co. Appliance Store at 2403 W. Broad-st—faces new in the store, but by no means strangers to the Hilltop.

M. E. Van Atta, Delaware County resident, who gets his mail through Route 1, Galena, is the new manager. He has replaced Russ Henry, for many years manager of the Hilltop branch, who has been transferred to the downtown store.

Mr. Van Atta is returning to the appliance business after seven years with the Johns-Manville Co. His experience in the electrical appliance business dates back to 1924. He was with the Robinson Co. before the war and some years ago gained a wide acquaintance in the Hilltop area through his business connections.

Jack C. Boyer, 288 S. Roys-av, has joined the Robinson firm as a salesman. He is a lifelong Hilltop resident, is a graduate of West High School and is a veteran of three years' service with the navy. He was married six months ago to Helen Louise Colley.

M. L. Reichard, formerly with the J. Fred Schmidt Packing Co., also has joined the Robinson Co. as a salesman. He lives at 29 S. Wayne-av. His wife is Mrs. Vivian Reichard, owner of the Vivian Beauty Shop on S. Wayne-av.

Mrs. Louise Balzer, 212 N. Terrace-av, another lifelong Hilltop resident, is in charge of the small appliance sales and also is serving as Mr. Van Atta's secretary. Mrs. Balzer is former deputy registrar for the Kiwanis Club's Hilltop license bureau.

Hilltop Groups Help Vets See Red Birds' Opener

The Glenwood unit of the Blue Star Mothers has provided patients at the Chillicothe Veterans Administration Hospital 40 tickets for the Columbus-St. Paul baseball opener tonight at Red Bird Stadium.

The purchase of the tickets from Fred D. Wile, Columbus sportsman, was made by Carl W. Rucker, 110 Whitethorne-av, as chairman of the Glenwood unit. Mrs. Rucker presented the tickets to Mrs. Harold C. Kay, 91 Schultz-av, who is chairman of the Red Cross entertainment and instruction service of the Franklin County Chapter and secretary of the Central Buckeye Council for volunteer services of the Red Cross.

Mr. Wile is a past president of the Agonis Club, which also bought 10 tickets to the game for the Chillicothe Hospital patients.

The Paul D. Robinson Post No. 565 of the fire department is furnishing a chartered bus to transport the ailing veterans from the Chillicothe Hospital to the game and return.

Mrs. Kay's committee was instrumental in interesting the organizations in providing supplementary entertainment for the veterans at the Chillicothe facility.

Many Letters Are Sent By Ritthem Folks

Mrs. J. G. Bowser, secretary of the committee for aid to Ritthem, reported last week that many letters are being received on the Hilltop from correspondents in the Dutch town.

Some Hilltop families are having trouble translating the native Dutch tongue, she advised, but added that Arie Demonye, 2158 Johnstown-rd, would be happy to translate the letters and return them to the reader. He asks only that individuals enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for their speedy return.

Mayor Danielse of Ritthem advised Mrs. Bowser in a letter that steps were being taken by the Dutch inhabitants to send only letters translated to English.

Hilltoppers wishing to send small packages to special Ritthem families may send them duty free to Holland, Mrs. Bowser advised. Packages should be marked "USA Unsolicited Gift Parcel." There is a reduced postal rate of six cents a pound, applying to these packages, which may contain food, shoes, clothing, books, health and medical supplies.

Those wishing to contribute to the large bundles can still do so by contacting Mrs. Bowser, 35 N. Hague-av.

West Nine Smothers Chillicothe

By Dave Miller

West's baseballers, paced by Jim Hamrick's pitching arm and capable bats of First Baseman Dick Culbertson and Centerfielder Dick Kirk, ran rough-shod over Chillicothe, 15 to 5, last Thursday afternoon at Chillicothe.

Hamrick, displaying a nice-breaking curve, struck out five, walked only two, and allowed only three hits in the six full innings he twirled. Hamrick had retired the first 12 men to face him in the game until Bob Summers, husky Chillicothe first sacker, was safe on Shortstop Jack Pickens' error. Phil Young came in the seventh inning and was tagged for two unearned runs.

At the plate Kirk, Cowboy outfielder, slammed a terrific drive into a creek beyond left field with one on in the first, walked in the second and slammed another four-master with the bases jammed in the seven-run third frame, this one going over the creek. Kirk doubled in the fifth, giving him a perfect day at the bat of 3 for 3.

Pops One In Creek

Dick Culbertson, all-round athlete at the Powell Ave. school, also hit one in the creek with the bases full in the second inning. All this offensive and defensive strength combined to give the Cowboys their most convincing win of the year. In comparison, the Chillicothe team shut out the South Bulldogs the previous Saturday afternoon, 10-1, after losing the first game of the doubleheader to the South Siders, 13-2.

The Hilltoppers slammed Chillicothe's flinger, Howard Greisheimer, who recently hurled a two-hitter against South, all over the lot for two innings. In the first inning, Jack Pickens was safe on Shortstop Dick Long's error and Dick Culbertson forced him at the keystone bag. Then Kirk tied into one of Greisheimer's deliveries for a home run, putting the Cowboys ahead, 2-0, very early in the game.

Opening the second frame, Catcher Bob Birle was safe on Long's second miscue and Tommy Wright, Cowboy left-fielder, starting his first game, received a free pass. Hamrick forced Birle at third, but Jack Pickens walked to load the hassocks. Then Second Baseman Dave Caton laid one to left center for a double, scoring three tallies. Then Culbertson laid one out into left field for another homer, putting the Hilltoppers way ahead, 7-0. Meanwhile, Hamrick was setting Chillicothe down in regulation order and the game looked pretty much in the bag even in the second inning.

In the third inning, Birle led off with a single to left and stole second and third in two pitches. Wright again walked and Third Baseman Ed Easterly tripled to center, bringing home two more runs. Pickens scored Easterly with a single past second base, and Dave Caton walked and Culbertson was safe through a fielder's choice when Third Baseman Jim Heise of Chillicothe was attempting to get Pickens at the hot corner, but failed, loading the sacks. Then the roof fell in on Billy Cousins, Chillicothe relief pitcher, when Kirk again slammed a drive to left field, plating four more runs.

Coach George Williams and Junior High Baseball Coach Red Lehman both agreed that the last drive by Kirk probably would have cleared the stadium at West's Magly Field, a feat that has been achieved only once in the history of West baseball. That was in 1939.

The Cowboys picked up another run in the fifth frame when Kirk came through with a double to center, advanced to third on a passed ball, and scored on Wade Williams' left to center field.

Chillicothe picked up its first run in its half of the fifth after trailing by 15-0. Bob Summers was safe through an error, the first batsman to reach base against Hamrick. Summers stole second, advanced to third on Catcher Birle's error in an effort to get Jimmy Burnstine, and scored on Right Fielder Jim Bryant's single to center. Burnstine scored later on a passed ball.

Another run came in the sixth when Heise walked, stole second and scored on Jim Hockenberry's single to left field. Chillicothe picked up two more unearned runs in the seventh on three walks, two passed balls and two stolen bases, and one hit.

The Cowboys made their hits go for extra bases in an unusual manner. Of their nine hits, three were doubles, one was a triple and three were homers. Kirk and Birle are, at present, leading the Cowboys in hitting, each with .500 marks. Kirk has 5 for 10, Birle 4 for 8.

The locals were to play Central on the downtown diamond this evening and play host to North on Friday afternoon.

Broken Fluorescent Light Tubes Unsafe

A warning to housewives and business men about the danger of breaking burnt-out fluorescent light tubes was issued today by Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe, City Health Commissioner.

"These tubes contain a phosphor powder to which small amounts of beryllium have been added," Goodloe said. "If the powder gets into cuts, a chronic inflammation known as granuloma may develop. This may not heal."

The best way for housewives and owners of stores to dispose of fluorescent tubes is to pack them in cartons and have them hauled away, Goodloe advised. If the tubes are broken, there is danger of getting the powder into cuts or even breathing the dust, which may cause a serious lung disease.

Goodloe also emphasized that mothers should be extremely careful that children do not pick up old fluorescent light tubes from a trash heap. He pointed out that injury from such tubes might go undiscovered until serious consequences had already developed.

First-aid for cuts by fluorescent tubes should be similar to that for poisonous snake bites. Induce the wound to bleed freely and see a doctor at once. Delay may be serious.

Frocks Designed, Made by Girls For Style Show

Hollywood's celebrated Adrian has nothing on 265 West High girls who designed, made their own frocks and gowns, and modeled them on the stage at the Hilltop school last Tuesday, before an audience of interested local PTA members.

Dramatically presented, the style show was termed "Turn for the Teens" and featured a radio broadcast motif, with Dick Davis and Jack Helman commentators and commercial announcers respectively.

"Round the clock" settings showing an early "matin" sidewalk cafe scene, closing with a night slumber scene and embellished with the 265 lovelies in appropriate colorful, gorgeous wearing apparel, commanded the attention of the mothers who witnessed the show in which their daughters appeared.

Girls appearing in the style extravaganza are enrolled in classes taught by Rhoda O'Hara and and Lola Forbes.

The school dance band, under the direction of Clair Barnard, furnished melodies in keeping with the styles exhibited. Mrs. Evelyn Hall and her stage crew arranged the physical properties for this show in an attractive manner.

He said the Sun Life Agent when he delivered my son Bill's Junior Adjustable policy — but he didn't have to tell me that. I know what a help it would have been to me if, when I was twenty-one, I had been given a life assurance policy that could be continued as Whole Life, Life Paid-up at 65, or Endowment at the same age, for as much as five times the original amount without increasing the premium. Especially when that premium was based on rates for a child. I didn't have this great advantage, but I'm making sure my son has it. How about you?

DOWN MEMORY LANE

WHO REMEMBERS . . .

. . . when the medicine shows came to town? You could have a tooth or two extracted free if you'd go up on the stage to be a guinea pig for a demonstration of painless dentistry. You could have corns or bunions removed painlessly, too. Between acts they sold snake oil, tooth powder and other patented medicines and drugs.

. . . when the right and left shoes were made identical and could be worn on either foot? This made it possible to wear down the heels evenly.

. . . when the American Boy magazine featured photographs of Cromwell Dixon experimenting with a bicycle-operated bi-plane? In those times aeroplanes were still pipe dreams and we were sufficiently elated over such wonders as the telephone, electric lights that replaced gas mantles and door bells that we could make by using salammoniac wet batteries in glass jars. When mother was talking on the old wall-type telephone (perhaps standing on tip-toe) we would hold the green receiver wire—and pinch it and wonder why it didn't stop the conversation.

. . . when women wore Merry Widow hats with big, broad brims and long hat pins sticking out? No masher ever dared to molest a girl in those days. In a crowded street car the hat pin stuck out farther than the lady's bustle.

. . . when some boy's marbles got on the loose and clattered all over the floor of the classroom, causing a terrible racket? Severe disciplinary measures always followed. Or, how the girls in the class would snicker, swallow their chewing gum and then ask to be excused from the room?

. . . when the ferris wheel on the midway of the 1893 World Columbian exposition in Chicago was dismantled and later removed to the St. Louis fair where it was reassembled? The wheel was 250 feet in diameter and had 36 cars with a capacity of six persons each. It revolved on an axle 33 inches in diameter and 45 feet long and weighed 56 tons. After the St. Louis fair it was wrecked and sold as scrap metal.

Modern Poetry

Edited by Esther Weakley

RHYMES OF A RAILROAD MAN, by DeVon G. Hough (The Orange Press, Winter Park, Fla.) $2.00, 56 pp.

Charles E. Mounts, of the University of Florida, writes in the preface of "Rhymes of a Railroad Man," "The Railroad Rhymer," "Poet Laureate of the Seaboard," or whatever you may wish to call him, is more than merely a prolific and facile writer of amusing verses; he possesses a genial and homely wisdom that shines clearly through every poem he writes. Salty humor, wry wit and good sound common sense are offered to the reader."

Mr. Hough's first book of verse is being well received by critics of poetry. Poems in the book are divided into four sections, appropriately titled "The High Rail," "In The Smoker," "From Red To Green" and "Home Terminal." Poems in the "In The Smoker" section might not get the green light at a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, but men who do not care for tender moon-June verse will enjoy these slightly raucous poems. In his "Home Terminal" division, the author has his moments of eloquence and heart-appeal, particularly in his poem, Meet My Dad." Last stanza of this poem:

"No epitaph could grace my tomb,
No greater homage could be had,
Than for my sons to say to friends—
'I wish that you had known my Dad'."

Another poem worthy of special note is titled "Father And Son":

"He was afraid—
So, he placed his tiny hand in mine;
And his fear was gone.
I am afraid—
So, my Father in Heaven, I place my hand in thine,
And fearlessly go on."

AS CLOTHES GO, so do undergarments, especially bras and slips. Comes the off-shoulder neckline, the backless sun-dress, the filmy chiffon dress top, and here we have a good answer to the strap problem in the form of a new strapless combined bra and slip. This neat design has the top lightly boned and elasticized, and a side zipper assures an absolutely snug fit. The skirt is slightly flared.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

Copyright, 1948 by Margaret Gorman Nichols. Published by Macrae-Smith Company. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

SYNOPSIS

Marriage for the Parishes had begun frugally and happily. After ten years Beatrice Parish and her successful husband, Porter, find themselves at an impasse. Porter has become autocrat, disgruntled as cantankerous old Mr. Ramsey, the rich industrialist who employs him. Beatrice fears their marriage is headed for the rocks. At breakfast Porter growls an ugly scene with Marianne, their little school-girl daughter. Angrily he slams out of the room.

CHAPTER THREE

BEATRICE went out the kitchen door and walked down the flagstone path. The autumn flowers were lovely, untouched by frost, and the grass, new from the September planting, was greener than it had been in the summer. The little pond flanked by moss-covered stones shimmered under the mild morning sun. Porter had built that, and also the stone fireplace too. He had laid the flagstone terrace. He didn't do anything now.

The garage wall was not damaged.

She did not start her car, a maroon-colored convertible, at once. She sat at the wheel looking foolish—a slight figure in a gray wool suit shot through with a fine yellow check. Just sitting there trying to remember what it was she had to do today, and where precisely she was going. Oh, to see life fresh in the old simple eternal lines, to return to the days of full consciousness where she had had mastery over the cleanly cut pattern of her life.

Her life. While now it seemed to have been so brief, so swift paced, there had been a time when she had thought she would never grow up. Those slow, crawling years of childhood with Cecily, her mother. Years when she, shy and eager, a child possessing affection no one could use, a child of troubled perceptions, had wanted desperately to give shape to her shapeless little life. She had never known her father, John Holden, who had died when Beatrice was a baby. In the soft dulcet tones of the southern town from which both Cecily and John had sprung, and to which Cecily could not return after two exciting years in New York, Cecily had later explained, "I was alone and with a tiny baby. And I was so young! And of course I had never done anything!"

The New York apartment high above the street, with a view, the large living room beautifully furnished had been a perfect setting for Cecily. Beatrice had often visualized the various men who must have walked across the thick beige carpet to Cecily's tiny figure and golden hair and huge, helpless, beautiful eyes. They had all wanted to help her, the fragile, appealing young widow with her baby. Not a few had been men of good will, for they had made sound investments for her with the money from John's insurance, and thus had enabled her to remain in New York increasing her circle of friends, and becoming one of those idle, pretty, unattached women who go their restless brilliant little way incapable of more than a brief illusion of love.

Though Cecily had been a sweet gay parson, quick to laugh, sentimental, articulate, charmingly thoughtless, frivolously extravagant and notoriously unpunctual, Beatrice had never felt that she was really her mother, for she had never been on the inside of Cecily's life. She had lived only on the fringe of it, a lonely little girl abandoned to a room into which seeped through the keyhole and under the door the voices of her mother's friends and the music that invariably surrounded them because they had no music in themselves. To Beatrice her mother's kiss was as vague as it was fragrant, her conversation as empty as her eyes, as indeed it seemed to the child, often were. Glimpses into the homes of her school friends, homes in which there was order and routine and orthodox family living, only increased Beatrice's silent despair. She would never forget her unspeakable agony the Christmas Cecily bought her a coat and hat made of white rabbits' fur, and insisted she wear it to the carol singing assembly where all the other little girls had worn plain tailored tweeds.

Then Cecily went to Bermuda. On the morning that her ship was due in New York, Henry, one of Cecily's friends, stopped at the apartment and asked if Beatrice would like to go to meet her mother. An hour later standing on the pier, Beatrice felt her excitement die several poignant little deaths. The last passenger had disembarked and Cecily was not there. The letter Beatrice found when she reached the apartment told her that Cecily had married a man named Lester Cornwall in Bermuda.

Yet Cecily's marriage, when she and Lester returned, altered Beatrice's life not at all. Lester was a tall young man with dull eyes, a positive antipathy for work, and an overwhelming fondness for moving from one golf course to another. He had some obscure association with a real estate company of which his uncle was president. Later it was obvious to Beatrice that Lester's uncle paid him for not coming to work. His kindness to Beatrice had an almost childlike quality, and it amused him that she was quicker at games than he was. That he and Cecily were so much alike was the nemesis of their marriage. It ended after three years when Cecily met Edward Sutherland. Beatrice was as sorry to see Lester go as she was sorry for him. Only one remark of his remained with her. Of Beatrice he had said to Cecily, "The kid lives deep."

Eddie was different altogether. To Beatrice he was very old. He was small and silvery-haired and walked with short, staccato steps. Of his background Beatrice knew only that he had made his money in Detroit, and that his married daughter wouldn't speak to him anymore. His efforts to be youthfully jovial fell far short of their intended goal. Indeed, he never seemed to get over being both pleased and embarrassed that anyone should call him "Eddie." He did not work. Thus he and Cecily traveled a good deal, their itinerary explained to Beatrice only by the postcards they sent her. Though Beatrice never really knew Eddie, and only later wondered if his imprudent marriage to Cecily had been worth the strain on his physical energy and the drain on his material resources, she was eternally grateful to him for suggesting to Cecily that Beatrice should go away to school. If he had not, she would never have known Clara and Libby, and she would never have married Porter. Though Eddie did not live long after the divorce and his subsequent return to Detroit, he nevertheless generously remembered Cecily in his will. And Cecily continued to live as she was living this very moment, Beatrice thought, in a beautifully decorated apartment high above the street with a view, and with men still going to her hearing gifts. Tangible gifts, for it was only the things she could possess and hold in her small hands that she desired and understood. The imperishables, the gifts of the human spirit—of love and tenderness and charity and humility—were not of her knowing.

Her first appointment was with Hilde, her hairdresser.

As she started the car, Beatrice thought how gimly appropriate it was that she was seeing Hilde this morning. For, from the incoherent whisperings of the other girls in the shop, she had gathered that Hilde was having 'trouble with her husband.' Beatrice's friends didn't understand why she drove all the way across town to an unpretentious little shop where the operators had no reputation, and where she didn't know anyone to talk to. They went to Andre or Roberto or Karl. Beatrice had told them that she had found Hilde in the shop when she and Porter had been living in a tiny apartment on the wrong side of town, and that Hilde was not only a good operator but she she liked her. That lifting the girl who did your hair and nails was incomprehensible to them only strengthened Beatrice's growing suspicions that her friendships, with the exception of Libby, had extension rather than depth.

UNION OF CANADA, NEWFOUNDLAND BIG NORTH AMERICAN MILESTONE IN THE LIGHT OF ATLANTIC SECURITY

PARLIAMENT—Ottawa, not London, to be Newfoundland federal seat.

TOURIST HAVEN—Humber river area, Newfoundland, tourist magnet.

By H. D. CRAWFORD
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Political union of two democratic peoples of North America on March 31 is a continental milestone of great historic importance.

Canada, already largest nation in area in the Western Hemisphere, is adding 152,000 square miles and 330,000 people as Newfoundland, oldest colony of Great Britain, and Labrador become Canada's tenth province.

This union takes place 83 years after royal assent was given to the British North America Act which created the original Confederation of Canada.

Never before has all British North America been under one central government situated on this continent. Never before has strategic Newfoundland in the Northwest Atlantic looked westward to Ottawa for federal leadership and guidance instead of eastward to London.

Numerous American citizens today trace their ancestry to the sturdy fishermen of Newfoundland. Since its discovery, the island has been one of the great fishing centers of the world.

Today its fish, its mines, and pulp and paper products from its forests are its major resources—although many predict that its beauty spots will attract many tourists.

NEWFOUNDLAND has played an important role throughout the development of the United States. In the Revolutionary war it was a strategic base for the British fleet. In the War of 1812 a Newfoundland regiment joined British and Canadian forces in the capture of Detroit and other encounters of that unfortunate war.

During World War II Newfoundland was a strategic site of important United States and Canadian bases for the Battle of the Atlantic and the struggle to get supplies to Britain for the invasion of Europe.

United States-Newfoundland affairs henceforth will be handled through the United States embassy at Ottawa.

THE UNION of Canada and Newfoundland may have far-reaching effects among other nations in their efforts to maintain peace and human freedom, in the opinion of W. L. Mackenzie King, who is still a member of the Canadian House of Commons although he resigned as prime minister. He believes it will have particular advantage to British Commonwealth nations and to the United States.

"It marks one of the significant milestones in Canada's development," Mackenzie King asserted recently. "The more that can be brought about these days by way of effective maintenance of peace, the better it is going to be for mankind.

"It is true that sometimes it takes the small things of the world to confound the strong. It may be that out of this union of two democracies on the North American continent, this union of forces in no way comparable to some of the great forces, there may nevertheless be imparted to other communities some of that strength which will help to preserve the freedom of mankind."

Canadian-Newfoundland negotiations have been carried on at the same time that nearly a dozen nations, including Canada and the United States, have been discussing at Washington the provisions of the Atlantic Security Pact.

THESE EVENTS are coincidental, for the Newfoundland negotiations have been under way for nearly three years. The fact remains, however, that Newfoundland is one of the most significant strategic areas in the Atlantic.

The United States and Canada both have military bases there and Newfoundland is likely to remain one of the best fortified areas in the Western Hemisphere. Newfoundland, among other things, virtually spans the mouth of the St. Lawrence river, vital 2,000-mile inland waterway that links the Atlantic with the Great Lakes.

Voluntary union of two nations is rare in human history. Our generation has seen examples of union by force: Hitler's goose-stepping Nazis taking over Vienna and Prague, or the deceptive political cudgeling that in 1948 brought Czechoslovakia into the Soviet Union.

WE HAVE HEARD much talk of a European Union; recently proposals have been made of a federal union of free nations of the west; other proposals have suggested an eventual union of Britain, Canada and the United States—but all these are only talk.

Newfoundland and Canada, however, have made a reality of voluntary union. The atmosphere of negotiations has been aptly described by Brooke Claxton, Canada's Minister of Defense:

"There was no bickering; there was no backbiting; there were no recriminations; there were no leaks, either accidental or inspired; there were no occasions when there was a lack of frankness; there were no charges.

"There was the steady and competent effort by well-meaning people to see if they could not arrive at a fair and equitable basis upon which our two countries could enter into union and partnership."

Americans who visit Canada after April 1 will send letters back home with a new four-cent Canadian stamp commemorating Newfoundland's entry into confederation. John Cabot's famous ship, Matthew, in which the British explorer sailed from Bristol, England, in 1497, sighted a "New Found Land," and proclaimed it in the name of King Henry VII, will be reproduced on this new green stamp.

This medieval ship with sails filled is shown approaching the forested coast of Newfoundland.

Magistrate: "What gave you the impression that the prisoner was the worse for drink?"

Cop: "Well, sir, he engaged in a heated argument with a bus-driver."

Magistrate: "But that doesn't prove anything."

Cop: "Well, sir, there was no bus driver there at all!"

"How do you boarders find your meals?"

"With a magnifying glass."

Cols. Boychoir School To Hold Tryouts Apr. 30

Tryouts for the Columbus Boychoir School will be held, by appointment, Saturday, Apr. 23, and Saturday, Apr. 30, at the school, 788 E. Broad-st. Boys who will be in any grade, from the fifth through the ninth, next fall, of good character and with average or better grades, are eligible to try out.

The school offers many advantages to boys with musical ability. In addition to the opportunity to sing in the choir, under the direction of Herbert Hoffman, well-known director and founder of the Boychoir School, there are classes in music theory, individual instruction in piano and a well-trained staff of teachers for regular classroom work. The school is undenominational and tuition free.

The concert choir sings for many out of town concerts, being away about six weeks out of the school year. This year they have sung 45 concerts out of town. They travel in their own bus under the supervision of members of the school staff. An opportunity to hear them will be offered to Columbus when they sing their annual concert here May 11 in Memorial Hall.

RCA Victor Develops New Record Player

An evolutionary change in the field of phonograph record changers was recently put on the market by the RCA Victor Corp. The new record changer offers a record and phonograph that are especially made for each other.

The new RCA Victor record changer, which is sold on the Hilltop by the Westgate Electric Co., the Better Homes Center and the C. C. Robinson Co., is a radical departure from the conventional phonograph that consumers are accustomed to seeing.

It is about one-third smaller than conventional phonographs and has a new high speed record changer, which drops each succeeding record into playing position in less than two seconds. Five or six seconds are required by conventional changers.

The new record player has a lightweight tone arm, which exerts only five grams of pressure on the record and is equipped with RCA's "Silent Sapphire" pickup, which eliminates needle-changing.

Another outstanding feature is the new type of records that the machine uses. The new small records are made of translucent Vinyl plastic in a range of seven bright colors, each color identifying a different musical category. To achieve optimum quality and convenient, economical size, the records were designed to play at 45 revolutions per minute, compared to the 78 revolutions per minute of conventional records. Instead of the ¼-inch spindle hole of standard records, the new disc has a one and one-half inch hole to fit over the strikingly different spindle of the new instruments.

The label area is thicker than the rest of the record, forming a raised collar around the center hole and leaving protective air cushion between playing surfaces of stacked records and air spaces between the inner edges. The latter feature prevents the changer blades from touching the records as they emerge from the spindle.

The new record, which plays up to five and one-third minutes, provides a single disc size for all classifications of music from popular to classical, and holds the promise of standardization for the record industry, with resulting benefits to consumers.

Although prices of the new records and players have not yet been announced, company spokesmen said that they will be "at least competitive" in price with present-day conventional merchandise, and are conducive to eventual cost-savings because of their small size, leading to economy in shipping, handling and warehousing.

With 16 million conventional phonographs now in American homes, company spokesmen also revealed that conventional 78 rpm records will continue to be produced by RCA Victor. The new system, it was pointed out, represents "evolutionary" — not "revolutionary"—progress and all musical selections recorded at 45 rpm will also be available on the conventional 78 rpm discs for as long as may be necessary to satisfy demand. New combination-console models will also feature both types of turntables to effect as smooth a transition as possible from the conventional to the new.

An important feature of the new RCA Victor system is its suitability for both the short playing time to popular and children's music and the longer playing time of symphonies and other classical selections. Up to 10 of the new records may be placed on the new player to provide more than 40 minutes of virtually uninterrupted music.

Another important feature is that damage to records is practically eliminated by the new system. Not only do the design of the changer blades and the unbreakable plastic material of the new records contribute to this end, but damage to record center holes caused by groping to fit conventional records on the spindle is ended by the large hole in the center of the new records. A handful of the new records may easily be placed on the new player without painstaking alignment of center holes.

An outstanding feature of the new RCA Victor system is the striking improvement in brilliance and clarity of tone achieved by the new record and player.

A boon for the housewife and home decorator are the small size and color scheme of the new records, which virtually end the storage problem and make for attractive record libraries. Eighteen complete symphonies on 150 single records occupy only one foot of bookshelf space. The new records are being made in seven gem-like translucent colors. Distinctive colors will be used to identify the different classifications of music: ruby red for classical, midnight blue for semi-classical, jet black for popular, lemon drop yellow for children's records, grass green for western, sky blue for international, and cerise for folk music.

Immediate and enthusiastic consumer acceptance of the new record and player when they are introduced in the spring has been forecast by industry leaders. More than 18 instrument and changer equipment manufacturers have indicated that they will incorporate RCA Victor's new system in their products.

SUFFERS SHOCK AND INJURY

Mrs. Elizabeth Mahr, 60, 64 W. North Broadway, suffered a bruised hip and shock, when she was struck by an auto driven by Albert Bechtel, 2377 W. Broadst, Apr. 15, as she crossed High st at North Broadway. Bechtel took her home, where she was treated by a physician.

The expression "Uncle Sam" probably originated during the War of 1812, when all government property was stamped "U. S."

Moulting is a severe strain on the bird because of the great amount of blood needed by the skin for the growth of new feathers.

'Bunny' Prince Charlie Has His Easter Photo Taken

Well, what's this? | Need a closer look | Wonder if it tastes good? | A little royal dignity

UNAWARE OF HIS ROYAL BLOOD and the complications it will bring into his life later, Britain's Prince Charles, now 19 weeks old, exhibits just the traits common to all babies. The heir presumptive, son of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, was photographed by a friend of the duke as the infant investigated a toy bunny given to him for Easter. (International Soundphotos)

Rev. Ashburn Likens Christians To Actors In Message To Hilltop Ministerial Assn.

Editor's Note: The following message, delivered by Rev. Jacob Ashburn at the Mar. 21 meeting of the Hilltop Ministerial Association, is reprinted in The Hilltop Record by special request of the association.

We are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men. I Corinthians 4:9.

The Greek word from which the word spectacle is translated also means actor, showman. The writer of these words is saying that the followers of Jesus are made actors or showmen unto the world, unto angels and unto men.

Actors draw and attract attention. It is said that ninety million people attend the theatres of this country each week and another ninety million listen to actors each week over the radio. These actors are not only heard and seen by these millions, but they have a very definite effect upon their lives for good or ill.

In a similar way Paul is saying that Christians are actors, because from the very beginning they have drawn the attention of the world to themselves. They have attracted attention because they are different from the world. Their character is different, conduct is different, aims, hopes, desires and purposes are different. They worship a different God They draw their strength from a different source. The Greeks trusted in material things, Paul's hope was in things spiritual. Such a contrast made them spectacular and the object of attention.

To be really born of God is to inherit a different type of life. No one can truly follow Christ without attracting attention. You cannot live a surrendered life without becoming a showman. Multitudes were drawn to Jesus because he was so different from the world. The world cannot remain the same where Jesus abides. While the world goes all out for hate when one knows Christ he goes all out for love, a love that knows no limits and transcends all barriers.

Actors appear upon the stage in imitation of personalities. They are representing some one else and not themselves. They have talent of their own, but they use it to represent another. They come before us not in their own name but in the name of another. The true Christian is not representing himself, but he is representing Jesus. His talent and influence must be dedicated to the cause of his Master. He comes forth not in his own name but in the name of Jesus.

Paul said, "For me to live is Christ." Martin Luther said, speaking of himself, "Martin Luther does not live here, he is dead. Christ lives here." If the world is to be saved Christians must allow Jesus to have control of their lives. He must be imitated. Imitated in his pity for the poor, in his sympathy for the suffering, in his sacrifice for the needy, in his forgiveness of the erring, in his search for the straying, in his love for the truth and in his reverence for God.

Actors do not play their parts alone, they have help of various kinds, make-up, scenery and props, also many other things that contribute to their success. Christians cannot play their part alone. They must have help and help from above. A Christian is called upon to do impossible things, but with Christ all things are possible. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," are the words of one who had personal knowledge of Christ.

With this knowledge he faced the world with all of its most trying ordeals without fear and came out victorious. We at this time are facing a world possessed of tormenting fears and agonizing unrest, disturbed by doubts and chaotic conditions, possessed of revolutionary ideas, the spirit of intolerance, selfishness and greed.

Even religion, morals and manners are in constant change. Some say the foundations of society are crumbling before our eyes. There are many question marks about the future. All nations of the earth are in the midst of a great crisis and are fearful of an impending war which threatens to blot out civilization. No procedure at present by the nations of the world is with certainty as to its ultimate outcome.

In these trying hours and crucial moments there is one thing that is sure and certain and that is Christianity. If tried it will settle all the problems troubling the world today. However it must be tried. It is not a set of rules to be kept but a life to be lived. When lived it has shown itself to have been strongest when persecuted most. No ideology can stand permanently before Christianity when it is lived, unless it is founded on the principles of Christianity.

The greatest defense against Communism is Christianity that is lived. However, it cannot be lived without Christ and we have the living Christ at our disposal whose promise is, "I am with you always even unto the end of the world."

Christianity has the greatest opportunity right now in all of its history. With all of the achievements of science and other advancements, it has the opportunity of changing man's mind so that he will use these things to the glory of God and the benefit of humanity. This will be done by allowing Christ to live in us as Christians. If this age refuses him entrance he will ultimately find some followers in which to live, and his kingdom will come and his will will be done on earth as in heaven.

I had rather see a sermon than to hear one any day,
I had rather one would walk with me than merely tell the way.
The eye's a better pupil and more willing than the ear;
Fine counsel is confusing, but example is always clear.

The best of all the preachers are the men that live their creeds.
To see good put in action is what everybody needs.
I soon can learn to do it, if you'll let me see it done.
I can watch your hand in action, but your tongue too fast may run.

The lectures you deliver may be very wise and true
But I would rather get my lesson by observing what you do.

Good Candidate For City School Board

As the political pot begins to boil it should not be overlooked that there will be some vacancies on the city school board this fall.

Among these is the position now held by Hilltopper Robert M. Draper, who has served on the board for a number of years. He has indicated that he will not be a candidate for reelection this year.

By all means the Hilltop and West Side should have able representation on the Columbus Board of Education.

Many problems may face Hilltop schools in the very near future, perhaps the most important being that of building new school buildings here. The rapid growth of the Hilltop along with the increased birth rate since the war projects a picture of overcrowded conditions in local schools in the next few years. Unless the ground work is laid now we may not be able to cope with this need.

This representative on the school board should be a parent, and a man with business experience, and one who can afford to take the time from his business to be a faithful attendant at board meetings and delve into the problems of the schools.

We have not consulted him, but we have talked with other residents of the Hilltop who are in accord with the thought that Ralston Westlake, 3294 W. Broad-st, would make a good representative on the board.

We sincerely hope he will give the matter every consideration and seek the position.

Alert Police Nab Bandit In Bus Holdup

Speedy work on the part of two members of the Police Department's auto squad early Wednesday brought to a sudden halt the career of a holdup man who robbed a city trolley coach driver of $57 at the W. Broad-line terminal at Southampton-av only 45 minutes earlier.

The suspect, Fremont Anderson, 28, of 66 Latta-av, was picked up by Detectives Sam Toy and Kenneth Anderson at a filling station at Mound-st and Central-av. They became suspicious when they saw a handkerchief draped over his license plate. When they searched the car, they found a revolver, a coin changer and a dagger in the front seat.

The bus driver, Claude Steele, 84 S. Harris-av, told police he had alighted from the coach at the end of the line when a man with a handkerchief over the lower part of his face approached and threatened him with a .32 caliber revolver. Steele said the bandit then marched him behind a nearby billboard and made him lie on the ground while he robbed him.

The suspect was slated at the police station for investigation of robbery.

Police Warn West High's Bicyclists

Columbus Police Department this week has been making a survey of the bicycle situation at West High School to ascertain to what extent students are conforming to the license ordinance.

Many friendly warning "tickets" were handed out to scores of pedalers, suggesting obedience to the law. The tickets read:

POLICE NOTICE

"Riding a bicycle in Columbus without a license is unlawful.

"Unlicensed bicycles and those ridden in violation of safety rules may be impounded.

"License on your bicycle will aid in its recovery if stolen. This is insurance at small cost. License is due Apr. 1 of each year at office of City Auditor, Room 111, City Hall, for 50 cents.

"The rider of an unlicensed bicycle may become involved in a damage suit on account of not taking out license.

"If you unfortunately meet with an accident your license affords prompt communication with your family.

"Keep your bicycle in good running condition and repair. Register it by licensing it.

"Obey all traffic laws. Ride carefully and safely.

Take this notice with you to the City Auditor, Room 111, City Hall, for license and registration within 24 hours."

Chickenpox Hits City Hardest; Mumps Second

The number of cases of chickenpox and mumps reported in Columbus during March was far higher than during the similar period in 1948, the city board of health said this week.

There were 159 cases of mumps in March, compared to eight cases a year ago, and 355 cases of chickenpox compared to 118 in March, 1948.

Last year's measles epidemic, however, has so far shown no signs of repeating itself. Compared with 633 cases reported in March, 1948, only 10 cases made their appearance last month.

Camp Chase Post Celebrates 20th Anniversary On Hilltop

By Myron T. Seiter

With the recent announcement that subscribers to the Hilltop American Legion Hall project have agreed to extend time for the construction of the new building, members are reminded of the 20th anniversary of the founding of Camp Chase Post No. 98 on Apr. 22. Research from local newspaper sources shows a short history of a civic group on the Hilltop that is contributing much to this community.

During the American Legion convention of Ohio in August, 1928, at Columbus, a new post for the west side of the city was discussed. Through the efforts of Commander Driscoll and Ted Stuart of the Raymond Scott Post, Linden, the matter was placed before Franklin County Council and that body recommended that such steps should be taken to place a post in the west section of the city of Columbus.

A similar group headed by Dave W. Shelby and Robert Billups of Franklin Post were trying to accomplish the same end. A delegation from Navy Marine Post, headed by Claude V. Hasson and Paul Haas, asked permission of Dave Shelby to assist them and their party in getting something started in the form of definite action on the West Side.

Shelby, an old legionnaire, had already applied for a temporary charter, which was granted and the solidifying of the different groups brought into being Camp Chase Post No. 98 on the night of Apr. 22, 1929 at 12 S. Park-av.

Claude Hasson and Paul Haas presided at the first meeting and were later chosen as temporary post commander and post adjutant. There were 22 ex-service men and legionnaires in attendance at the first meeting of Camp Chase Post with only 16 eligible men to sign the temporary charter for Camp Chase Post, due to the balance having membership in other posts.

Camp Chase Post No. 98 was selected as the name of this post on the West Side to perpetuate the memories of the Civil War, Spanish-American War and the World War.

At the first call meeting of this post, the temporary organization was set up as follows: Claude V. Hasson, commander; Ted Stuart, first vice commander; Minor Mithoff, second vice commander; Paul Haas, adjutant; Fred L. Sulzberger, finance officer; J. C.

Kiwanis Unit Lauds Firms For Good Friday Closing

The Support of Churches Committee of the Hilltop Kiwanis Club this week praised the businessmen of the area in their observance of the hours of noon to 3 p. m. on Good Friday during which they closed their establishments to permit their employes to attend worship services.

Rev. Harold Dutt, pastor of the Westgate Evangelical United Brethren Church, is chairman of the committee which was active during the Lenten season in urging businessmen to suspend trade during the early afternoon hours of Good Friday.

Rev. Dutt said he considered the response on the Hilltop very good and he extended his committee's thanks to those business men who cooperated.

Rev. Dutt added that in view of the better-than-expected response to the Kiwanis committee's 1949 appeal he believes even the managers of the Hilltop area's chain stores may be persuaded to join local businesses in the brief closing period on Good Friday in 1950.

13,250 See Birds Drop Opener, 4-3

Columbus' baseball fans, 13,250-strong, flocked to the W. Mound-st stadium Wednesday night for the once-postponed season opener between the Red Birds and the St. Paul Saints and, a couple of hours later, they trudged off the grounds wrapped in the gloom of defeat.

Yep, St. Paul won a hard-fought opening day (or should we say night?) contest 4 to 3.

But one swallow doesn't make a summer and one game falls a great deal short of constituting a season, so the hopeful fans will make many a trek to the stadium before the final "out" of the season is recorded.

Overcoated Hilltoppers got a special thrill out of the pre-game ceremonies, during which Don Gilmore, Hilltop diamond star, was presented a Red Bird jacket. Don was injured seriously in a bus accident last season while travelling with the Duluth baseball team.

Wednesday night's attendance figure was slightly below the 14,823 mark set last year, but Red Bird President Al Banister said all ticket-sale reports had not yet been received and he felt sure the 1949 figure would be increased somewhat in the official report.

Meanwhile, the Red Bird management announced that all games at Red Bird Stadium this season will be night games with the exception of Sundays and the first three Saturdays. The starting time of the night games will be 8:30 with the exception of Saturday nights which are scheduled for 8 o'clock.

The Sunday double headers are set for 1:30 p. m. and the first three Saturday games will start at 2:30 p. m. Twilight-night double headers will get under way at 7.

Hilltop Relays Scheduled At West May 10

By Eddie Sensenbrenner

The third annual Hilltop Relays have been scheduled for the night of May 10 at West High's Magly Field, R. C. Glass, coach, said today.

This meet will give track fans on the Hilltop a good chance to see most of the city's track stars in action at the same time.

Coach Glass announced that the meet will start at 7 p. m. with the field events. The running events start at 7:30 p. m. The meet will end around 9:25 p. m.

As in previous years, queens will preside over the festivities and present the winners their ribbons and trophies.

Trophies will be presented to the winning team and also to the runner-up team. A trophy will also be presented to the individual high point man of the Bob Cooper of Central won this trophy last year and is expected to win it again. Central which nosed out West for the championship last year by two and two-thirds points is expected to retain possession of their trophy, as it again has a powerhouse-track team.

This night meet will give the working people of the Hilltop a good chance to watch the West High track team in action. The Relays is the only night track meet scheduled this year. The public, as last year, is expected to take advantage of this opportunity.

Tickets will go on sale at 35 cents each at the school about May 1, Coach Glass said.

Top Speller Selected At West Junior

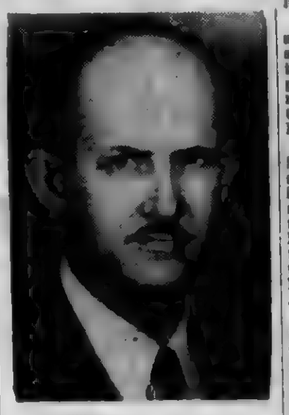
Judy Lowmiller will represent West Junior High school in the "spelling bee" contest sponsored by the Columbus Citizen Saturday, Apr. 23. Miss Lowmiller was chosen from among 12 finalists by a committee composed of Adolf Kittel, English teacher, Mrs. Florence Heitz and Lola McFarland.

The 12 finalists were Betty Penn, 147 Clarendon-av; Judy Lowmiller, 96 S. Sylvan-av; Joyce Fyffe, 810 S. Terrace-av; Marilyn Howard, 1586 S. Fourth-st; Pat Henry, 289 Eldon-av; Barbara Koch, 364 S. Eureka-av; Doris Friend, 284 S. Warren-av; Jacqueline Burger, 262 Midland; Carolyn Stillwell, 644 Wiltshire-rd; Bob Harmon, 76 N. Terrace-av; Carol Smith, 150 S. Hague-av; Patty Manus, 659 S. Hague-av.

Betty Penn, 147 Clarendon-av, was chosen an alternate for Miss Lowmiller.

Get Chick? Now Raise It For Contest In June

The Fox Food Shop, 2422 W. Broad-st, gave away 400 Easter chicks last Saturday as the first step in its spring poultry contest for Hilltop youngsters, Harold Fox, manager, announces.



The chickens given away Saturday, all to children under 14 years of age, will be eligible for judging in the contest which is scheduled for the last week in June.

Owner of the best chicken, in the judges' opinion, on the date of judging, will be awarded a $5 cash prize. Other prizes will be awarded for second and third places and honorable mention.

All chicks were of blooded stock from the Erlay Poultry Farm, Plain City.

Koontz Candidate For Council Seat

The Hilltop's political picture was somewhat clarified today with the announcement by Councilman Henry J. Koontz that he will be a candidate to succeed himself on the city's legislative body.

Councilman Koontz

Councilman Koontz, for the last six years the Hilltop's sole representative in Council, said his petitions now are in circulation and probably will have within the next few days enough signatures to put his name on the Republican primary ballot.

Meanwhile, Leo L. Phillips, 617 S. Ogden-av, still had not come to a definite decision as to whether he would enter the GOP councilmanic race. A retired chief of detectives with the Columbus Police Department, Phillips has been offered the support of several Hilltop groups if he chooses to put his name before the voters in the August primary.

Councilman Koontz disclosed that his petitions are in the hands of workers directed by City Clerk Agnes Cain, 2147 W. Broad-st. Koontz said the petitions are omnibus affairs, carrying, in addition to his name, the names of Joseph R. Jones and Dr. O. J. Fillinger, the two other Republican councilmen whose terms expire Dec. 31.

Koontz first entered council in the summer of 1944 when he was appointed to fill a vacancy. He ran for and was elected to a full term in 1945.

Phillips' pending decision will determine whether Koontz will have opposition within his own bailiwick in his campaign to return to Council.

Bean Dinner Plans Laid; Date July 27

Plans for the 1949 version of the far-famed, traditional Hilltop Bean Dinner got off to a flying start Tuesday at a meeting of the committee of the big civic enterprise at the Airport Restaurant.

The committee has selected Wednesday, July 27, as the date when Hilltoppers and citizens from miles around will gorge on the delicacy. But, in addition to full stomachs, bean diners will carry away with them a host of prizes representing the longest list of awards yet made at the annual affair.

The committee, representing the Hilltop Businessmen's Association which sponsors the event, has decided on a new plan of awarding prizes. Details of the plan will be announced later.

Members of the committee for this year's Bean Dinner are J. P. Merriman, Don Rice, Lou Rausch, Robert Henery, John Hardy, Harold Erlenbach, Russell Carter, Myron Rodabaugh, Franklin D. Sparks, Earl Upp, Elmer Hegenberger and C. Carlton Hartley.

Platinum Ring Of Bride-To-Be Lost Downtown

Jinx Witherspoon, pretty bride-to-be, was near tears Tuesday, when her $385 platinum engagement ring turned up missing. The ring, which had been sent to the jewelers to be made smaller, was lost or stolen between Broad and Long-sts.

A Christmas gift from her fiance, the platinum ring was enclosed in a small manila envelope when lost this week. The envelope was a standard one used by Smurr Jewelers, 46 E. Broad-st.

Miss Witherspoon will be married June 10 to Robert Gulcher. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Witherspoon, 172 Lechner-av.

Call It Fate or Otherwise, Hilltopper's Life Is Saved

A stuck safety valve almost cost the life of E. O. Melvin, 107 S. Warren-av, Sunday night, but a taper made of a rolled newspaper saved it.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin had just returned to Columbus from a vacation in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Mr. Melvin took his wife to his brother's home to stay while he lighted the gas furnace at their home after an absence of more than five weeks.

Mr. Melvin, a retired hardware dealer, turned on the pilot light of the furnace, but, as was afterward discovered, the safety valve was stuck and, as a result sufficient gas leaked into the furnace to cause a terrific explosion when he attempted to light the pilot.

Mr. Melvin's left hand was both cut and burned in the blast.

Both the front and back of the furnace were blown out and two basement windows were shattered by the force of the explosion. Metal fragments cut as deep as one and one-half inches into a wooden cupboard standing near the rear of the furnace and glass in the cupboard also shattered, Mr. Melvin says.

And about the newspaper taper angle—

Mr. Melvin says he always before stood directly in front of the furnace and lighted the pilot burner with a match. But last Sunday, he rolled an 18-inch taper, held it in his left hand and stood to the right of the furnace. When the blast let go, chunks of metal big enough to have killed him sailed right on by.

If you ask him why he changed his habitual method of lighting the furnace Easter evening, he will tell you quite simply that he doesn't know.

NOTRE DAME BANQUET

Dr. Thomas Hughes, 2970 Wicklow-rd, president of the Columbus Notre Dame alumni chapter, is being assisted by a committee including Ed Cantwell, 700 Binns-blvd, in arranging a banquet at 7 p. m. Monday at the Seneca Hotel for the 26th annual observance of Universal Notre Dame Night.

Hilltop Aid to Ritthem Project Part Of America's 'Operation Democracy'

Generous Americans from nearly every state in the union have joined in a project known as Operation Democracy. Hilltoppers have long been familiar with the Aid to Ritthem committee, headed by C. Carlton Hartley, which is only one unit of the large national project.

The May issue of Pageant magazine lists a number of European towns which have been adopted by numerous communities in the United States.

The Operation Democracy project is a non-profit organization with headquarters in New York, which acts as a clearing house for all adoption projects. It does not raise money, but helps community organizations get in touch with towns whose needs have been verified by relief representatives on the other side.

Suggestions are made to local committees as to suitable gifts to send. Organizations are contacted by mayors and burgomeisters who advise as to the approximate war damage and what articles are most needed.

Ocean freight for the gifts is paid by ERP funds and foreign governments. Deliveries overseas are made either by the government or relief agencies. Distribution in the towns themselves is made either by the mayors or town officials.

The article in Pageant magazine does not mention Ritthem, but it does refer to several other Dutch communities adopted by U. S. citizens.

Ritthem, the town adopted by Hilltoppers, is located on the island of Walcheren, which was flooded in 1944 for the purpose of forcing the German troops out of the area.

General Montgomery described the island in his book as "resembling a saucer filled with water." After tremendous labor and many disappointments the gaps of the dikes were closed and Walcheren is now on the road to recovery.

Building and construction programs have been slow in most European countries. Ritthem's chief problem is the reconstruction of its church and community meeting hall. Residences are in bad shape.

Various letters from F. Danielse, burgomeister of Ritthem, indicate that Dutch people are in sore need of women's, men's and children's clothing. Also needed are medical and food supplies.

Those interested in contributing to the project are asked to contact Mrs. J. G. Bowser, 36 N. Hague-av.

Councilman Koontz Visits Pensacola Base on Flying Trip With Local Group

BY HENRY J. KOONTZ
Member of City Council

Members of the Columbus City Council and the Airport Commission were invited several weeks ago to make a brief trip to Pensacola, Fla., as guests of the U. S. Navy.

We left Port Columbus at 9:50 a. m. Apr. 12 in a Navy DC-3 Transport plane. We rode at about 13,000 feet—above the clouds all the way.

We rode around a storm over Tennessee and arrived at Atlanta, Ga., at 1:35 p. m. We had lunch with the airport superintendent at Atlanta and later inspected the airport. We found the air field at Atlanta was quite a bit ahead of Columbus' port in a number of ways.

We took off for Pensacola and arrived there at 5:45 p. m. Upon arrival we were loaded aboard a navy bus and were taken to officers' headquarters, where we were assigned rooms and took a brief rest. Then we were taken to the Officers' Club for a banquet and party.

After breakfast Wednesday morning, we were taken through the school of aviation medicine and were given an opportunity to inspect a Link trainer. Later, one of the navy commanders explained the setup for cost accounting and statistics records for the base.

After the tour of the base, we were taken to the pier and put aboard a launch which took us out through Pensacola Bay and Straits into the Gulf of Mexico. We pulled up alongside and were taken aboard the U. S. S. Cabot, a U. S. Navy carrier. After lunch we witnessed a simulated attack on the ship by the ship's own fighter planes.

There also was a demonstration of dive-bombing and target practice by the ship's anti-aircraft guns firing at a towed sleeve. The entire demonstration took place about 50 miles at sea.

After dinner, we were showed all over the ship, and for my part, I don't care if I never have to climb a steel ladder again. Muscles unaccustomed to that type of activity have a way of protesting that left most of us weary—and the next morning . . . Ouch!

We retired aboard ship at 1 a. m., but when we arose next morning, it wasn't just our muscles which were paining us. Councilman Frank Kearns and I, who bunked together, had been robbed of our billfolds during the night. Our total loss was $134 and despite a furious investigation by the captain, neither billfolds nor cash could be found.

The carrier sailed for the dock and about midway we were transferred to the launch again and subsequently went ashore at Pensacola again. As soon as we landed, we were whisked off for a quick inspection tour of the overhaul and repair department of the base and then were taken to Corry Field to emplane for home.

We left Pensacola at 11 a. m. and arrived home at 2:50 p. m.—just three hours and 50 minutes later and 790 air miles away.

The flavor of a few capers in your fish sauce will perk up the most disconsolate appetite.

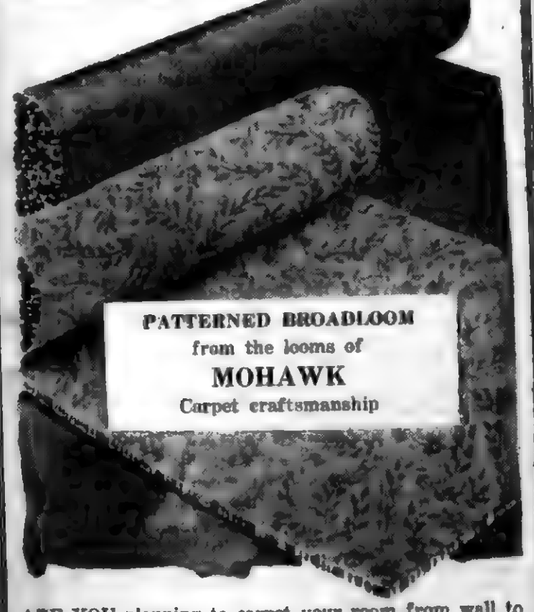
SATISFACTION

She chose a forlorn church pew,
For she longed to pray
Upon that scarred evening
Of a cruel, sorrowful day.



She knew the deep, calm healing
That divine faith imparts,
The balm a lone church offers
To soothe troubled hearts.

Four Starling girls help Mrs. Eby in her remedial math classes. The girls keep the bulletin board record of the work accomplished by the remedial math students. This is their principal task but they sometime help Mrs. Eby check the pupil's workbooks. The girls also pass out test papers, and then sit as monitors.

The aim in the remedial math classes is to help the students have a clearer understanding of the handling of numbers.

The helpers in these classes are Elizabeth Church, Diane Hilf, Connie Sonners, and Donna Swickard.

V. Richardson, chaplain; Joe Enright, historian. Members of the executive committee were as follows: Carl Barnes, Gosnell Layman, Gail Henery, L. W. Weifel, G. G. Nitrauer and William Wilson. Representatives to county council: Robert Billups, Joe Enright, Claude V. Hasson. Color bearers: L. W. Weifel, T. J. Grady. Sergeant-at-arms, H. Neuenschwander.

On May 11, notice was sent out to members of the post that the first permanent officers would be elected May 16, 1929, at 2372 W. Broad-st, at which place the post was holding its meetings.

The following officers were then chosen to head the post for the balance of the year 1929: Claude V. Hasson, commander; Edward G. Planck, first vice-president; Wallace Locker, second vice-president; Paul A. Haas, adjutant; J. C. V. Richardson, post chaplain; G. B. Myers, finance officer; J. Preston Smith, sergeant-at-arms; color bearers, Robert Billups, L. W. Weifel; color guards, A. T. Stuart and Gosnell Layman. County council representatives: W. E. Wilson, Robert Billups and Mose Williams. Alternates: Herbert Davis, C. G. Hoar, E. G. Planck. Executive committee: Milton Binehart, W. E. Wilson, C. G. Hoar, Carol Barnes and Fred Reese.

Post colors to carry on the work of this post were secured through the efforts of Mose Williams and Bruce Bidwell, who went to Theodore J. Arnold, a Civil War veteran, who donated the necessary funds to secure the colors for Camp Chase Post No. [redacted].

The first accomplishment of this post, after securing their colors, was the issuing of a newspaper of eight pages which went to each home on the west side of the city of Columbus, carrying the history of the last four wars this country had participated in and to gain publicity for the purpose of the dedication of the post colors and publicly announcing the formation of Camp Chase Post No. 96, which was edited by Charles G. Hoar.

On June 6, at the K. of P. Hall, through the cooperation of the post and under the chairmanship of Mose Williams, the Ladies' Auxiliary of Camp Chase came into being.

To maintain interest and increased membership, it was decided to hold a joint picnic July 4 at Hempy's Grove, and ball games, picnic lunches, swimming and other athletic games were carried out.

The outcome of this picnic was the formation of recreation ball teams and competitive games were played within the organization.

Comrades Planck and Suitzberger were sent as delegates to the state convention of the American Legion at Akron, Aug. 25, 26 and 27.

On Sept. 13 the post sent Commander Hasson to represent Camp Chase Post at the national convention at Louisville, Sept. 30 to October 4, 1929, which gave the post recognition by the national body.

Several pot-luck suppers were held in the fall of 1929, bringing CAMP CHase post—Gal. 2 ... fp a closer contact with all members and to stimulate interest in the work to be carried out by the American Legion.

About this time it was brought to the attention of the post the need of a firing squad to carry on military functions, and the members decided to purchase rifles and side arms, and thus a firing squad was formulated.

On Oct. 31, 1929, Camp Chase Post reported 106 paid-up members into state headquarters of the American Legion, which assured the permanency of the post, an increase of 23 members on Apr. 18.

At the annual meeting of Oct. 29, 1929, the post officers who had served from its inception were re-elected to office with the exception of the post adjutant and several of the executive committee members.

On Nov. 11, Armistice Day, Camp Chase Post participated in the city-wide parade with a larger representation per capita than any other post.

A Bible was presented with a small American flag for the altar of the post by Al Sillman, a Hilltop business man, so the legion could carry on its ritualistic work.

The first community activity assumed by Camp Chase Post and the auxiliary was the participation in the community fund drive. Under capable leadership the quota assigned the two organizations was exceeded, which established a record that did honor to the post and auxiliary.

Towards the latter part of November, a headquarters was established in the Rivoli Theater building for the purpose of carrying on the post committee meetings, and the corner of Oakley and Broad was the center of all legion activities.

On January 1, a drive for membership was opened and closed on Apr. 1, with a 157 increase over the preceding year. Commanders of Camp Chase Post and Southway challenged each other on this drive, and Camp Chase went over the top with a bang.

To create interest in the membership drive, a regular army chow was staged across from post headquarters at Oakley and Broad, which brought back memories to many ex-service men of the days of 1917 and '18. This was well attended by legionnaires all over the city, as well as city and state officials.

Across The HILLTOP ALLEYS
By Dick Ardle

Kate Cecil and Andy Andrews took over the lead in the fifth annual mixed doubles tournament at the Hilltop alleys. They had a score of 1089 plus 152 handicap which gave them a total of 1241, two pins better than Gene Harold's and Kay Seitz's 1239.

Dick Ardle

Gene Harold put on a fine display of bowling earlier in the evening as he blasted 682 scratch and added 58 pins handicap for a blazing 740 total. He and his partner, Hazel Gosner, totaled 1203, which was good for 13th place in the standings. At the present time 1170 is low in the money.

Kents Lead League

Allen Milk picked themselves up off the floor where they've been all season and knocked the "pins" out from under the league leading Schroeck's Service Station team and planted the lead in the hands of Kent Brothers, who were beating Ben Brew at the same time. Allen, who last week looked like a last place team against Seiller's, rolled games of 915, 965 and 886 for a 2766 total.

While this unexpected event was happening Kent Brothers were kicking the pins around to the tune of 1004-2804. Paced by Kenny Morris, who had 233-639 the team also had games of 917 and 883. Their three game victory over Ben Brew gave them a three game lead over Schroeck's but next week they must take on the ever-dangerous Allen Milk and then the final night they must meet Schroeck's Service Station.

Catholic School Planning New Rec Center

The Holy Name Society of St. Mary Magdalene Church announced last week that initial work has begun on the playground and recreation center at the school grounds.

Converting the present greenhouse into a locker and shower room for the athletic teams is already underway. The laying out and fully equipping the baseball diamond will take place in a few days.

The Society also announced plans to lay out a new football field and to erect permanent football posts during the summer months.

A partial shipment of the playground equipment has arrived, and it is anticipated that the order will be completed within a few days.

The playground will cover an area of approximately two and one-half acres and will include such items as a large and small swing set, a swing set for preschool children, merry-go-round, large and small slides, maypole, teeter board set and other equipment.

In addition to the playground equipment the Holy Name Society is planning to build tennis, volleyball and handball courts, a wading pool and shuffle board and horse shoe courts.

Members of the committee in charge of the project are Edward A. Tonti, chairman, Lee Blackburn, Francis J. Boehm, J. A. Diebel and Lee Walters.

1949 Is 100th Anniversary Of California Gold Rush

By Myron T. Seiferf

Names still familiar to Hilltoppers made up the caravan from Columbus and central Ohio that spanned the middle and western part of the United States via mules and the covered wagons just a short century ago.

Back in 1849 the discovery and mad rush for gold finally penetrated the Ohio Country and engulfed the activities of Columbus, and many West Side folks, bent on adventure, lure of conquest, and quick riches.

Announcement of two parties who started for the wooly West in '49, was recorded in the Ohio State Journal of that day and read:

"Two companies of adventurers of 30 each, residents of Columbus and vicinity have this day taken leave of their fellow citizens, and started for El Dorado of the Sacramento Valley. The first company, whose name has not been furnished, is composed of the following persons: John Walton, president; J. G. Canfield, vice president; Peter Decker, secretary; G. Q. McColm, treasurer; S. J. Price, H. Moores, G. Walton and C. Breyfogle, directors; C. E. Boyle, physician. The other members are D. Bryden, E. Barcus, Jr., E. E. Canfield, G. Chadwick, W. Cain, A. B. Cris, C. Dewitt, J. S. Demgan, T. Davis, L. A. Denig, C. M. Fisk, J. Krumm, J. C. Lunn, P. McCommon, H. Ranney, T. Rugg, D. Rugg, J. P. Stone, W. C. Stiles, C. D. Wood, L. H. Sherman.

The company has 10 wagons and 40 mules, and is well supplied with equipage, provisions, and arms. An organization it is divided into five masses, with one director in each. Leaving Columbus, they passed through Xenia to Cincinnati, thence by water to Independence, in Missouri, beyond which the particular route is not determined upon.

The other band is called the "Franklin California Mining Company." Its officers are Joseph Hunter, captain; John Coulter, lieutenant; J. H. Marple, secretary; F. A. McCormick, treasurer; O. S. Hunter, quartermaster.

The other members are Chester F. Colton, J. Robey, Joseph W. Boothe, Geo. Woodward, Samuel Price, Matthew Williams, Alexander Robinson, John Spaythe, V. R. Smith, John Uncles, Charles A. Robinson, John McCartney, J. K. Barr, R. J. Hunter, C. M. Shaw, C. H. Meyers, Jacob Armitage, Samuel Meyers, A. M. Hunter, Jona Bobo, Anderson Cornwall, J. W. Coulter, Nicholas Demorest, O. S. Walcutt, E. Gaver.

The members are associated upon the joint stock principle, and are to remain in California 18 months, May 1. They carry provisions sufficient for that length of time. Their train consists of eight new and strong wagons and 26 yokes of oxen. The route to be pursued is the same with that of the other company.

For purposes of mutual aid, the Central Ohio '49ers banded together and organized "The Columbus and California Industrial Association."

The same newspaper of that day gave credence to this movement and reprinted the quasi-articles of incorporation, empowering this group to act.

The news account read:

"Whereas, the undersigned parties have agreed to associate themselves together, for the purpose, prosecuting and conducting mining operations, and procuring gold and other minerals in the territory of California, and on and about the shores of the Pacific Ocean; and whereas, an undertaking requiring our presence at a point so remote from our homes, and from those whom we most cherish, and whose happiness we most desire, subjects us to many privations and hardships, and calls for cordial and united efforts for our mutual welfare; and whereas, we cannot hope for success in our neighbor without the guidance and blessing of an All Wise Creator, and a due observance of His laws; now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, and in order more efficiently to manage the property and prosecute the business of said company, the parties and hereunto severally and individually, and each for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, respectively agree, that the following shall be the articles of mutual agreement and association, for ever binding upon each of the said parties, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns to wit:

Article 1. This association shall be known by the name and style of "The Columbus and California Industrial Association."

Article 2. The officers of the association shall be president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and five directors, who shall be elected by ballot and serve for three months, and until their successors are elected.

A majority of all the votes shall be necessary for a choice. Each mass shall nominate one of their number as a candidate for director, who (if elected) shall enter upon the dicharge of his duties. The Board of Directors thus elected shall have a general supervision of all the affairs of the association, and shall perform such duties as may be required of them by the by-laws.

Article 3. It shall be the duty of the President to preside at all meetings of the Association and to preserve order and decorum.

He shall decide all questions of order (subject to appeal to the Association by two members). He shall sign all orders on the treasurer for moneys appropriated by the Association, and perform such other duties as may be prescribed by the by-laws.

Article 4. In the absence or disability of the president, the vice president shall perform the duties of the president; and in the absence or disability of the president and vice president, any member of the association may be chosen to preside.

Article 5. The secretary shall keep a correct record of all the proceedings of the association, in a book to be provided for that purpose. He shall receive all moneys that may be paid into the association, paid into the treasurer and take his receipt for the same. He shall countersign all orders on the treasurer, and perform other duties as may be prescribed by the by-laws or by resolution.

Article 6. The treasurer shall receive all moneys from his secretary, and receipt to him for the same. He shall keep a just account of all receipts and disbursements. He shall pay all orders signed by the proper officers, on presentation; and for the faithful performance of his duties shall give a bond of $3,000 with security to be approved by the association.

Article 7. The association shall consist of 30 men with an equal capital of $225. They shall be men of good character and sound constitution.

Article 8. This association shall continue to exist for one year and six months from the time of leaving Columbus, unless two-thirds of the association determine otherwise. But in no case shall the association be dissolved, or a dividend declared, until the return of the association to the city of Columbus without the unanimous consent of the members presented by such votes taken without notice to each member at the time and place of which such vote will be taken; Provided, however, that this article shall not be so construed as to prevent the association from granting an honorable discharge to a member, upon his own application and two-thirds of the members concurring in the discharge.

The member so discharged shall be entitled to an equal division of the gain of the association to decline of such discharge.

Article 9. This association shall be united to share each other's fortunes and render assistance in time of danger; and if any member of this association shall be deprived of his health, or in any way injured, so as to be unable to aid in advancing interest of the association, he shall not, for that reason, be deprived of his interest in the profits and effects of the association: but he shall, at all times, be regarded as a fit party in all things, and entitled to the kindness and watchful care and protection of every other member of the association, and under no circumstances shall he be deserted or permitted to suffer for want of proper attention in the advent of the dead or the death of any member of the association before the expiration of the time limited for the continuance of the association, his legal representatives shall receive his full share of the properties and effects of the association, the same as though he had lived and faithfully labored through the whole period required by the articles.

Article 10. No gambling of any kind shall be indulged by the members of this association either among themselves or others. No: shall any member be allowed to use any kind of intoxicating drinks, unless administered under medical advice.

And any member who shall violate the provision of the article shall be advised by a committee appointed by the Board of Directors for that purpose, and afterwards, he shall persist in it he shall from that time forfeit his interest in the association.

Article 11. Any person who shall become a member of this association, and shall pay his part of, and in any part of, or the full amount required by this constitution, and shall be removed by death or be disabled before starting the amount paid in by him shall be paid back to him, his heirs or assigns. Should he fail from any other cause, he shall forfeit the amount paid in by him unless ordered otherwise by the association.

Article 12. Neglect of duty and disorderly conduct shall subject the offender to such punishment as the association may determine by a two-thirds vote; but in no case shall a member be expelled without the concurrence of three-fourths of the members.

Article 13. It is further agreed that any person or persons who shall be detected in secreting or embezzling gold or other property for his or their own use, which he or they are bound to take care of or collect for the benefit of the association, conviction thereof, after hearing the accusers and accused before nine members of the association—to be drawn by ballot—he or they shall be expelled from the association and forfeit all the stocks he or they may have invested originally and said association, and all his or their interest in said association. The accused and accusers may be the object to any three persons who shall be drawn to try the accused.

Article 14. It is further agreed that there shall be no personal or individual interest, trade or traffic, whatever; but that any article of individual interest disposed of shall be credited to the members at cost and the proceeds go into the general funds.

Article 15. As religion is a matter of private opinion the members of this company would not seek to enforce, by restrictive laws or penalties the observance of any particular worship, or belief of any particular doctrine, yet we would earnestly recommend to every individual member of the association the observance of the Sabbath day — to cease from all unnecessary labor, and to engage daily in such worship as the judgement shall dictate the conscience approved.

Article 16. A copy of these articles of the association shall be made and signed and duly executed by each member of this company, and said executed articles of agreement shall be deposited in the recorder's office of Franklin, Ohio, for safe keeping, and a certified copy taken by the company; and the said original articles or agreement shall not be withdrawn from the place of deposit unless by the unanimous consent of all the members of the association.

Article 17. These articles of association are hereby declared to be unalterable.

One trip to the store— One quick "bowl-mix"— Gives me two pounds of Nucoa ready to use!

SAVE TIME—"BOWL-MIX" TWO POUNDS TOGETHER
(And save money—no extra cost tacked on for a "squeeze bag")

● "It's a waste of money," thousands of women tell us, "to pay two to three cents extra for margarine in a 'squeeze bag.'"

What you really want, of course, is to buy yellow margarine at the modest price it can be made for you, right in the churn—when the law permits! Until then, the makers of Nucoa refuse to add one penny of trick-package cost to this top-quality margarine.

And money isn't the only saving! With Nucoa's easy "bowl-mix" you can save time and bother by coloring two pounds together, make it just the degree of yellow you like; mold it in balls, squares or other shapes to suit your taste.

"And it colors so much more evenly!" women say.

Millions agree! Ask your grocer for Nucoa—America's most popular margarine.

Meal Without Meat

By BETTY BARCLAY

The burden of proof is always on the chef, but many a good meal can be prepared without using meat. Ingenuity is the prerequisite, though, to make these meatless meals a success.

Take, for instance, a pound of mushrooms. Wait until they're at their plentiful best, for economy's sake, and then make a meal of them. The recipe below uses seasoning with a free hand for real gourmet effect. And the flaky cereal base gives good contrast to the creamy sauce.

Mushrooms à la Cereal
1 pound mushrooms, sliced
3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons chopped green pepper
6 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 bouillon cube
½ cup boiling water
1¼ cups milk
3 tablespoons chopped pimiento
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups Toasties corn flakes

Saute mushrooms in butter about 5 minutes; add green pepper and cook slowly until tender. Add flour, salt, and pepper and stir to a smooth paste. Dissolve bouillon cube in water, combine with milk, and add to mushrooms gradually. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add pimiento and mix well.

Pour melted butter over cereal in shallow pan. Heat in moderate oven (350° F.) about 6 minutes, or until crisp. Place cereal on hot platter and top with mushroom sauce. Serve at once. Garnish with strips of pimiento, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

The Familiar Hat Has Varied And Interesting History

By Myron T. Seifert

"Keep it under your hat," is a maxim familiar to all of us. It probably antedates history, but be that as it may, the hat has a very respectable and ancient history, having from the earliest times been regarded with curious interest and not infrequently, by reason of some eccentric form, given rise to much chaff of the wearer thereof.

To the average man there is inexpressibly ludicrous in the "shocking bad hat" as the English say, and many a public man has been joked at for some queer headpiece he effected.

With the Greeks the hat was simply an appurtenance to a traveler. The free citizen preferred to go bareheaded—a la Joe College—and put on his broad rimmed petasus only for protection against the sun when on a long journey, or as a guard against the inclemincies of the weather.

Indeed, the uncovered head was a part of his dignity, for the slaves and workman wore always a kind of pointed skull cap, the pilus, which therefore stood for a badge of servitude. Much the same scorn of habitually covering the head prevailed among the Greeks' [illegible] the Romans. Thus, the serval class among the Greeks had nothing to keep under their lid, hence the maxim referred only to "the man who lead the good life"—it was he who carried about with him ideas underneath the headdress.

In England the hood was not finally given up until the early part of the fifteenth century. The "green velvet hat furred" worn by the mayor of London, John Welles, in 1452, is cited as a singularity by one authority who declared, that previously the coverture of men's heads were hoods, for neither hat nor cap is spoken of. In point of fact there are a few earlier instances of hats being worn by nobles and even the middle class.

Perhaps the most fantastic shapes ever assumed were those in vogue centuries ago. One was a kind of turban with a large cluster of bows or puffs on one side, to which the origin of the cockade, doubtless still worn by liveried servants may be traced.

Another, made with a broad brim and adorned with feathers dangling down the back of the owner, as a sort of compromise between the disinclination to wear it and the desire to be fashionable, for throughout medieval times the hat was a mark of distinction.

The caprices of the hatter were somewhat less grotesque in the Elizabethan period, when hats of beaver dyed black were popular. The dyes were the reverse of "fast", and a favorable method of blackening a rusty chappeau was to hold it in the smoke of a ling or a pitch torch.

Tradition ascribes the discovery of the process of hat felting to St. Clement and he was therefore assumed as the patron saint of hatmakers.

Prof. Hagerty of the Ohio State University considered the hat of great utilitarian as well as ornamental value. In fact, he praised himself on wearing a green headdress which came from the "Old Country" a quarter of a century ago—and wore it to time of his death. Little wonder, therefore, that professors always have something under their hats.

Bob Hope To Dedicate Boys' Club Headquarters May 1

By Myron T. Seifert

When Bob Hope brings his all-star Hollywood show to Columbus May 1, for an appearance at the Fairgrounds Coliseum, he will also dedicate the new Columbus Boys' Club, an affiliate of the Boys' Club of America, at 6 p. m. at the old West Side Market House, State and Gift-sts, which is now undergoing extensive remodeling to make it suitable for the numerous and varied activities of the Boys' Club work.

Non-Sectarian Program

The club will maintain an "open-door" policy. Any boy may belong and may attend any day and every day during after-school and evening hours. The club will be completely non-sectarian in control, leadership and membership, officials said.

The first organization with the name Boys' Club in its title was the Boys' Club of New York, which has been in continucus operation since 1876. The movement spread and today there are 300 Boys' Clubs in the United States with 300,000 members. In 1906 the existing Boys' Clubs organized into a national association, Boys' Clubs of America.

Club Purpose Outlined

The purpose of the Boys' Club is the guidance of boys in physical and mental health, and vocational skills, including social and character development. This is done through a planned, boy-interest program of activities—recreation, games, physical training, athletics, instruction in health habits, library and assistance in school studies, vocational classes, summer camps and group and individual guidance. Instruction and leadership are given by trained workers.

To attract boys, the organization takes advantage of the boy's own natural method of organization and makes building facilities available to meet his desire to congregate.

Activities Daily

In addition, the club, unlike most youth organizations, is open every day of the year and offers activities that interest him. The idea is simple: Give a boy a chance to do the things he really wants to do and the equipment to do it, and he won't go out of his way to look for trouble.

Self-Discipline

Discipline in the club arises from the democratic form of the club's society. There are no posted rules and regulations. The only motto is "This is your club. Take care of it."

Leaders in the Boys' Club movement, both on the local and national level, are outstanding men in widely diversified fields of activity, including education, industry, social welfare, business, finance and civic development.

Among them are outstanding leaders of the Jewish, Catholic and Protestant faiths. Ex-President Herbert Hoover is chairman of the board of directors of the parent organization, and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is a member of the board.

"MOTHER IS A FRESHMAN", starring Van Johnson as a college professor and Loretta Young as the mother "froshie", starts Sunday, April 24, for a four day run at your favorite Auto Theatre—Miles' West Broad. The supporting cast presents Barbara Lawrence as the daughter with a crush on the professor and Rudy Vallee as the competitive admirer of her mother. Also showing are news and selected short subjects.

Gardeners Should Start Early Tomatoes Now

There's nothing so good, nor good for you as ripe homegrown tomatoes. By means of good varieties and good gardening practices every family may reap an abundance of ripe tomatoes from early summer until late fall.

The first of April, is a good time to start tomato plants indoors in pots. As soon as flower clusters appear, they should be sprayed with an approved plant growth control agent.

Tomato seeds sown indoors in early April, should be transplanted in the garden before June 1. The gardener may expect ripe fruit from these seeds by mid-July.

To avoid the extra work of transplanting, the gardener, by using pelletted seeds of the early Chatham variety can plant seeds immediately in the garden in April. Fruit may be expected about the middle of the summer.

Early Chatham is outstanding for dependable harvests in this part of the country. Developed primarily to provide a reliable good cropper for the short growing season of the northern peninsula of Michigan the variety ripens in as little at 55 days after the plants have been set in the garden.

Another important feature of tomato growing is proper staking of plants. Proper staking of plants in little gardens provides the means of obtaining greater yields from each square foot of ground. Where hobby time is employed and especially where garden space is limited, staking is a very important means of making a little garden serve the purpose of a large garden in growing tomatoes.

Belvidere Ave. Youth 'Hits the Road,' Sees Sights In 33-Day Southern Trek

By Myron T. Seifert

The feeling of hitting "the open road" has been experienced by youthful Paul Starkey, Belvidere-av, who graduated from West High School last January, after he decided that he wanted to see some of the places he had read about in his geography and history books during his school days.

Losing little time, and with enough money in his jeans to tide him over in the event of need, Paul left for the south, visiting 14 states, returning home after a 33-day trek. He is now about to embark upon another traveling venture in the west and northwest.

Classmates Bill Farrand and Dick Lanigan accompanied Paul on a part of his journey.

His diary of the experiences encountered is jammed full of interesting exploits.

Parts of his journal read:

"Left Feb. 13 with plenty of money . . . First night spent in YMCA in Louisville, Ky; from there went to Tennessee and spent night behind a billboard (80 miles south of Nashville). States covered: Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Louisana, Indiana. Missed Iowa by one mile.

"Feb. 19-28—Eight days at a boarding house in Mobile, Ala. where food was best ever tasted. Saw four main parades of Mardi Gras in New Orleans. Mardi Gras is very colorful, with balls, parties, dances, mostly costumes, and everybody happy.

"Like the southern gals very much and the friendliness of the southern people.

"Feb. 28—In the French quarter of New Orleans someone broke two windows of the car we were in, while we were hitting the spots, and got about $100 dollars worth of clothes, leaving what they didn't want. At this time we were hitch-hiking with a merchant seaman who picked us up.

"Mar. 8 — In Beatrice, Neb. there was three feet of water. The day after we got through, the whole town was covered. From there we went to Lincoln, Neb. Met some interesting people including Bob Seymour, who played six years pro-football for Washington Redskins and one year for Los Angeles Dons.

"Mar. 5—Stayed at Jim Irvin's home for two days, in Gutherie, Okla. (Irvin was a former Hilltopper with whom Starkey worked at Yost Florist.).

"Mar. 9—Last Wednesday we three boys separated in St. Louis, Mo., Lanigan coming home and Starkey going through lower Illinois and Indiana before coming home.

"The Presoyterian Church and Dauphin Way Churches in Mobile, and the Baptist Church in Princeton, Ind., all served chicken dinners which we enjoyed.

Incidental observations along the way:

"In Louisville, Ky. sandwiches were five cents each.

"Got clear to Miami on $4.50 apiece, then paid $7 for a hotel room.

"One night slept in fruit packing plant by riding with truck driver and obtaining permission. Ate oranges.

"Went through largest Spanish settlement in U. S. Ybore (pronounced E-bor).

"Almost picked up for vagrancy in Dallas, Tex. and had to keep moving.

"At one time traveled for six days and nights without going to bed. Had to walk streets four nights in New Orleans as no rooms to be had.

"In Mobile, spent time at Y playing basketball, boxing, etc.

"Mobile celebrates Mardi Gras same way New Orleans does. Three big parades.

"Slum districts really pitiful. Poor along docks.

"Went to boat races at Mobile (in the bay).

"In New Orleans, girls took us home for big meals and showed us around to night clubs. Danced in Pat O'Brien's Patio."

Housecleaning Tips Can Make Job Easier

Most housewives look forward to spring when they can dig in and get started on the inevitable spring housecleaning job.

Many years ago women dreaded the thought of days of back-breaking work, with the house, husband and children helter skelter for several weeks.

Today science and few timely tips can mean an end to unnecessary chores and a beginning to more efficient and speedier housecleaning.

Best thing for brightening and cleaning upholstery is a good household soap, or a special rug preparation, many of which are on the market.

A half dry wash cloth or sponge full of soapsuds can be whisked over upholstered furniture to make it shades lighter.

Rugs are easily scrubbed with a long handled, stiff bristled brush. Stubborn spots can be removed with vigorous rubbing or a special spot remover preparation.

Wallpaper is another big problem. It is best to spread papers around the floors and on furniture before starting, to avoid the tiresome job later of cleaning up the particles of cleaner, which inevitable drop off.

Housecleaning usually means redecorating and if you're doing any painting, there's a new inexpensive paint on the market, which is easy to apply and can be washed.

For a housewife to do her work with a minimum of effort and a maximum of results, she must work only by plan and by schedule.

Especially at spring housecleaning time she will not be exhausted by the countless other duties, she must perform, before finishing the cleaning.

Flying fish probably move through the air to escape capture by other fish.

The date of Easter can vary as much as 35 days, from Mar. 21 to Apr. 25.

The first commercial factories to make plywood were erected in Russia in the 1880's.

Birds will not fly out of sight of the ground when there is a thick fog.

Botany Student Growing Orange Trees At West

Determining the amount of Vitamin C in oranges is the chief aim of Dick Miesse, 15, of 438 S. Powell-av, who is growing three orange trees in the biology department at West High School.

While only an experiment, Miesse is making scientific observations of the rapidity of growth under varying circumstances. The trees were planted from seed two months ago.

Each was planted in different soil. One has rich, black dirt from a local greenhouse, a second was planted in sand; and the third was half sand, half dirt.

Number one, with black soil, has already surpassed growth records among the three, Miesse has observed.

Forestry and horticulture occupy much of Dick's time, and he has regular employment at a local greenhouse, where he is encouraged in the art of floriculture.

Plant life is not the only interest of Dick. He has been conducting experiments with guinea pigs, feeding them on a varied diet, to determine what food values are suited for favorable growth.

Flowers of a wide variety interest him.

President's Congress Tiff Gives Hope to Republicans

GOP Liberals Seek to 'Sell' Stassen to Party

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Political joy, while not unrestrained, is on the upswing in the rebounding ranks of the Republican party.

One of the main contributing factors to the optimistic upsurge is President Truman's current way with the Democratic Congress—or, more precisely, with certain elements of the Congress. It is these elements that he is castigating both publicly and privately for obstructing his legislative program.

Harold Stassen

While the president's top advisers are trying to talk him out of his threatened "purge" tour, which he first mentioned in his Jefferson-Jackson Day speech, the Republicans are rallying.

With 1962 in view, "liberal" GOP strategists are trying to "sell" Harold Stassen to all ranks of the Republican party as the first and best presidential hope of 1962.

The present plan is for Stassen, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, to go along with a conservative running mate like Robert A. Taft, or John W. Bricker, both of Ohio. This, these strategists feel, would unite the party three and a half years from now.

There are also Eisenhower drums beating in the distance. The Republicans would happily settle for Gen Dwight Eisenhower as a candidate in 1962 if the general would settle on them.

As one key GOP political figure told this column: "While the president simples, we are sparkling with plans that will end in the White House."

● THE UN AND SPIES—At least one top State department official expects a repetition of the New York-Washington spy case involving a Russian attache of the United Nations, unless a more careful check is made of foreigners entering this country through the United Nations.

This official, who declines to be identified, points to the charge made a year ago by Robert Alexander, assistant visa chief of the State department.

At that time Alexander warned a Senate judiciary subcommittee that spies and individuals dangerous to the security of the United States were getting into this country through the UN.

Alexander, who was officially reprimanded for making his charges, has refused to comment on the current case involving Valentine Gubitchev, a Russian arrested in New York by the FBI on espionage charges.

It has been learned, however, that Alexander is prepared to repeat his warning to a congressional committee if he is asked to testify. And he is very likely to get his chance.

Rep. Nixon (R), California, and other members of the House un-American activities committee, has demanded a committee investigation of the New York case. If the investigation materializes, Alexander may be called as a witness.

● SUPER-CHIEF—Each day makes it more abundantly clear that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is back on "temporary" duty to bring the bickering armed services into harmony.

The official reasons for Eisenhower's recall, of course, have some surface merit. However, there are men already at the Pentagon capable of dealing with such matters as selling military appropriations to Congress and planning America's part in equipping western Europe with arms.

Congress, however, almost certainly will approve legislation creating a "super-chief" to act as a supreme court in Army-Navy-Air force wrangles. Meanwhile, Eisenhower will be acting in that capacity.

Eisenhower Unification's Sole Hope?

He is possibly the only American who could get anywhere in the thorny job without the force of law behind him. His ability to bring warring parties together, demonstrated during the war in striking fashion, is counted on to get real unification underway after a year and a half of haphazard efforts to make it work.

When he moves on and the super-chief's office is established by legislation, Gen. Omar Bradley may be expected to step into the post.

Hilltoppers Should Plant Home Flower Gardens Early

The warm spring weather Hilltoppers have been enjoying means that gardening time is here.

Hilltoppers can begin their summer flower garden now by starting annual plants in the house in shallow boxes for final transplanting into the garden.

Home gardeners needn't look to a greenhouse for this early care.

Gardeners should watch when planting early that the soil used for seeding is light and loose with adequate humus and not too rich. A satisfactory mixture includes one-third good garden loam, one-third sand and one-third finely screened peat or leafmold.

Shallow boxes that will hold about three inches of soil are good containers, provided that bottoms are looose enough to allow good drainage.

Diseased and weak seeds may be controlled by sterilization in the oven at 180 degrees F. for at least one-half hour.

Soil should be watered thoroughly after seeding. After sprouting, seedlings should be placed where the light is good and the temperature is lower to prevent them from becoming spindly. Watering is important at this stage of development and soil should be kept moist, but not too wet.

A Lecture

on

Christian Science

Entitled

Christian Science: The Promised Comforter

by

Ralph E. Wagers, C. S. B. of Chicago, Illinois

Member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

Given

April 15th

12:15 p. m.

First, Second and Third Churches of Christ, Scientist

Columbus, Ohio

The lecturer spoke substantially as follows:

A Christian Science lecture often encourages a listener to become better acquainted with the Bible; particularly with the first four books of the New Testament. These books record the life history of Christ Jesus, a life which was so important to humanity that it brought forth a new calendar. There has never been a time when an understanding of his life was more important than it is now. And there are encouraging signs that humanity is turning in that direction more than ever before.

The Promised Messiah

What Jesus said about himself, the purpose of his life, and the nature of his mission, is essential to one who would acquaint himself with the true significance of Christianity. It is evident that he recognized his earthly mission to be in fulfillment of prophecy. In the Gospel according to St. John are two references which indicate that there prevailed among those who were acquainted with prophetic utterances an expectancy of the appearing of a Messiah who would direct the course of human thought Spiritward. One of these references has to do with Andrew seeking out his brother Simon and saying: "We have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ" (John 1:41). The other is where Jesus awakened the woman at Jacob's well to the import of his mission. After a most illuminating discussion, she said to him: "I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things. Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am he" (John 4:25, 26).

Luke writes of the Master: "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read. And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor: he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him. And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth" (Luke 4:16-22).

Luke also records a conversation Jesus had with two of his disciples after his resurrection: "And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself" (Luke 24:27). Later, the disciples said one to another: "Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?" (Luke 24:32.)

The Promised Comforter

Jesus recognized that he had a particular work to finish, and he finished it. A part of his work was to prepare thought for a fuller unfoldment of Christ, Truth. Fulfilling the prophecy concerning himself, he forged another link in the chain of prophetic promise: "If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you" (John 14:15-17). Revealing the nature of this Comforter, Jesus said: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26).

Jesus then had this to say about the need for further preparation in order that spiritual teaching might be better understood and utilized: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth" (John 16:12, 13). What a wonderful promise! And what of its fulfillment? In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes (p. 55): "In the words of St. John: 'He shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever.' This Comforter I understand to be Divine Science."

Centuries elapsed between the prophecy and the fulfillment of the appearing of the Messiah. A similar period elapsed between the prophecy and the fulfillment of the appearing of the Comforter. These were periods of mental and spiritual preparation. Comparing the unfoldment of Christ in human consciousness to the growth of grain, Jesus made use of the illustration, "first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear" (Mark 4:28).

Preparation for the Comforter

In order for the Comforter to fulfill its divine mission and accomplish the greater works to which Jesus referred, it was essential that human thought become spiritually receptive. But this thought must be prepared to think scientifically as well, in order to gain the more impersonal sense of God as divine Principle and of man as divine idea. It was the lack of this scientific sense that was to a great extent responsible for the loss of primitive Christian healing in about the third century.

In an interview with a correspondent of the New York Herald in 1901, Mrs. Eddy stated her attitude toward the pursuit of modern material inventions. She declared that we cannot oppose them and said (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, p. 345): "They all tend to newer, finer, more etherealized ways of living. They seek the finer essences. They light the way to the Church of Christ. We use them, we make them our figures of speech. They are preparing the way for us."

Science

The word "science" comes from a Latin word meaning "knowledge." It is defined, "knowledge, duly arranged and referred to general truths and principles on which it is founded, and from which it is derived" (Webster). In the Christian Science textbook, Mrs. Eddy writes (p. 123): "Christian Science differs from material science, but not on that account is it less scientific. On the contrary, Christian Science is pre-eminently scientific, being based on Truth, the Principle of all science." In the same book, she writes (p. 313): "Jesus of Nazareth was the most scientific man that ever trod the globe. He plunged beneath the material surface of things, and found the spiritual cause." Neither Jesus nor Mrs. Eddy may have been capable of building or repairing a radio receiving set, but they were able to reclaim the sinner, heal the sick, and raise the dead, through their scientific understanding of the spiritual nature of man and his relationship to God.

There is no valid reason why what is termed science should be confined to the so-called physical realm. And there is every reason to believe that, to the progressive scientific thought, matter will appear more and more to be merely the counterfeit of Spirit. In Christian Science, when the word Science is spelled with a capital "S," it is elevated to its spiritual meaning, just as the words Truth and Mind, spelled with capital letters, are appropriately used as synonyms for God. True Christianity demonstrates the inseparability of Science and religion. That is why this religion is termed Christian Science.

In the final analysis it will be clear to both scientist and religionist that there is no necessary conflict between Spirit and matter, because as is stated in the Christian Science textbook (p. 264): "Matter disappears under the microscope of Spirit." Of special interest to the Christian Scientist in considering Christian Science as the promised Comforter are these words of Mrs. Eddy (ibid., p. 127): "Science is an emanation of divine Mind, and is alone able to interpret God aright. It has a spiritual, and not a material origin. It is a divine utterance,—the Comforter which leadeth into all truth."

The Bible and Religious Freedom

In these United States, as in other essentially democratic countries, both science and religion have a large measure of freedom from governmental restrictions. This freedom is essential to the success of the Comforter. It made possible the King James Version of the Bible, the version which is used in all Christian Science churches. As religious thought broke away from ecclesiastical restrictions, with the aid rather than the hindrance of the state, it manifested greater interest in the application of spiritual law to human life—which was prophetic of the present period in which Christian Science is successfully restoring the lost element of spiritual healing.

The Christian Science Textbook

In his letter to Timothy, Paul wrote: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (II Tim. 3: 16, 17). Referring to the authorship of Science and Health, Mrs. Eddy has written (Science and Health, p. 110): "No human pen nor tongue taught me the Science contained in this book, Science and Health; and neither tongue nor pen can overthrow it." It is not possible to compare the Bible with any other book, and the Bible is the only book with which Science and Health may be compared. The substance of both books is divine, not human.

The Nature of Spiritual Unfoldment

Studying these books one finds unfolding within his consciousness an ability to understand them which he did not before possess. The consistent study of these books unfolds the ability to understand and demonstrate the Science they present. As one grows in spiritual stature he appreciates the value of these books, and it is by studying them and applying their teachings that he grows in spiritual stature. The divine Mind imparts the ability to understand the nature of true existence. Truth is self-explanatory, because Mind and Truth are synonymous, and the nature of Mind is to unfold or reveal Truth. Studying and applying the truths revealed in these books one becomes more and more consciously aware of the things of Spirit. Such is the nature of spiritual unfoldment. Since God, Mind, is infinite, and man is His expression, man's unfoldment must be unlimited.

Spiritual Causation and Human Progress

If one is accepting as real the problems incidental to a material sense of existence, he may believe he would prefer to postpone to a more convenient time a consideration of spiritual causation—shall we say until after death? However, a statement in Science and Health shows how important it is for us to give proper consideration to this subject today. It is to be found on page 170, and it reads: "Spiritual causation is the one question to be considered, for more than all others spiritual causation relates to human progress."

In its original presentation, Christianity differed from every other religion in that it was devoted to works rather than to observances. These works were based upon the understanding that as God is the only cause and creator, and God is Spirit, causation must be spiritual. Spiritual causation implies the spiritual nature of effect. Considering God to be the divine Parent, and man to be the divine offspring, it is necessary to recognize that man derives his nature and existence from Spirit. Man, then, is not material; he is spiritual. The one who is willing to test the effect of this spiritually scientific declaration of man's true being will find himself awakening to the truth about himself. The appearing of the truth about himself and the disappearing of the error brings about healing and a satisfying progress in every aspect of human experience.

Christian Science is a practical religion, noticeably lacking in creed and dogma, ritual and ceremony. Because these have been so commonly associated with religion, the inquirer may wonder at the lack of them here. Christian Science makes plain the incompatibility between human creeds and the living presence of Christ; between mortal theory and healing works; between ritual and divine Science; between ceremony and demonstrable truth. It is the exchange of the material and unreal for the spiritual and real which constitutes Christian Science. Ceremonial observances do nothing in the way of spiritualization of thought, while inspiration unfolds in human consciousness those spiritual ideas which counteract erroneous material beliefs.

Prophetical Religion

Here let us consider the term "prophetical religion." Students of the Bible recognize that there are two distinct lines of religious thought running through the Bible. One stems from the first or spiritual account of creation in Genesis, and may be referred to as the line of the prophets. The other stems from the second or material account of creation, and may be referred to as the line of the priests. Prophetical religion is inspirational in nature; the other is ceremonial. The prophet entertains a spiritual concept of creation. With ever-increasing clarity, prophecy declares the spirituality, the absolute goodness, the unchanging perfection, the immutable purity of God and of man as His image and likeness.

Prophecy, then, has to do with spiritual seeing, with seeing spiritually, or from a spiritual rather than from a material standpoint. Writes Mrs. Eddy in Science and Health (p. 476): "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

The early Christian healers were prophets, spiritual seers, beholding in ever-increasing measure "the perfect man," not a perfect mortal, but the perfect man who, as the image and likeness of God, shows forth the holy, sinless, deathless, deathless nature of deific Mind, the one divine Being, who causes each manifestation of Himself to be as perfect and complete in nature as He is. In this perfect man the Christian healer sees "God's own likeness." And today, as always, "this correct view of man" heals the sick.

Thus is the office of the Christian Science practitioner defined. He is not a priest, not a minister, not a doctor, but a prophet. His is a prophetical office, and his ministration is effective in the degree that he holds himself spiritually receptive to divine inspiration.

Spiritual Healing Explained

In Science and Health (p. 370) we read: "The body improves under the same regimen which spiritualizes the thought." This explains spiritual healing. Not through ceremonial use of manipulative words, nor by psychological suggestion, but through spiritualization of thought, is the body healed and the human self transformed in Christian Science. What we call the material body is merely the objectification of material thought. Being a mental concept, the body responds to the transforming action of the Mind which is God. As human thought yields to spiritual unfoldment, spiritual ideas appear where material beliefs seem to be exercising a negative influence over the movements of the body, restoring normal action and revealing the orderly control of the divine government.

The healing of a friend of mine shows the practical effect of applying spiritual teaching. For many years she was the victim of a disturbing organic condition. Physicians had agreed that due to an injury at the time of her birth a certain necessary function of the body was impaired.

We began to reason along these lines: If all action is in reality the action of Mind, then it is at all times perfect, harmonious, unlabored. We analyzed this statement in Science and Health (p. 108): "My discovery, that erring, mortal, misnamed mind produces all the organism and action of the mortal body, set my thoughts to work in new channels, and led up to my demonstration of the proposition that Mind is All and matter is naught as the leading factor in Mind-science." Then we turned to this statement (p. 141): "After a lengthy examination of my discovery and its demonstration in healing the sick, this fact became evident to me;—that Mind governs the body, not partially but wholly."

We realized that the functional difficulty was associated with the belief that man is material and that his well-being is of necessity dependent upon and subject to the condition of physical organisms rather than upon divine law. As this phase of material-mindedness yielded to the realization that "Mind is All and matter is naught as the leading factor in Mind-science," we saw that man reflects the perfect action of divine Mind. Through spiritualization of thought it was possible to see this perfect action of the divine Mind rather than some phase of imperfection. The next day the situation was normal and has remained normal ever since.

Science and Christianity

A very illuminating statement in Science and Health indicates the limitless possibilities of Christian Science. It reads (p 466): "Science will declare God aright, and Christianity will demonstrate this declaration and its divine Principle, making mankind better physically, morally, and spiritually." Let us consider it. As Science and Christianity in their true sense are one and the same thing, it is impossible to separate words and works, message and manifestation, statement and proof, declaration and demonstration. Science declares; Christianity demonstrates. Science declaring God aright is not the human mind declaring its limited concept of Deity. It is the declaration of the truth about cause and effect. Christianity is the action of this declaration in human consciousness, whereby Truth replaces error, health replaces disease, and the primal harmony of God and man is restored in the present experience of mankind.

The term Christianity means not form or ceremony, ritual or creed, doctrine or dogma, but the very spirit of Christ penetrating the veil of materiality and permeating the consciousness and lives of men with such transitional qualities as "humanity, honesty, affection, compassion, hope, faith, meekness, temperance" (ibid., p. 115). Thus the lives of all who are receptive to the liberating Christ, Truth, are transformed.

Are we declaring God aright? We may test our declaration by the effect it has upon us. Into the thought filled with the omnipotence and omnipresence of God can enter no belief of another power. Our declaration of God's allness must be so complete as not to permit any suggestion of evil to be power, influence, or attraction. The unreality of evil is as firmly established in Science as is the allness of good. And it is by denying its reality in declaration and action that we prove man's immunity to evil and his oneness with God, good.

Declaration and Demonstration

A fountain can rise no higher than its source. So our demonstration of harmonious being can rise no higher than our declaration of God's allness. In the practice of Christian Science, our declarations may be higher than our demonstrations, but the opposite is never the case. As our thought becomes more spiritualized, our declarations will be so true, our words will be so in harmony with Truth itself, that they will be immediate in demonstration: our words will be confirmed instantly in works. Jesus said, "Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other" (Mark 3:5). Peter said, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk . . . and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength" (Acts 3:6, 7).

Christian Science is today performing works of healing such as those which characterized the practice of primitive Christianity. What is the explanation? It is by declaring God aright and by unfolding the scientific rules by which men and women may understand and apply spiritual truth in their individual lives.

The oneness of Science and Christianity is evidenced in the progressive demonstrations of Christian Scientists. Our highest achievement so far is but a foretaste of greater possibilities. A Christian Scientist who endeavors to be as scientific as he would be Christian, and as Christian as he would be scientific, is sure of success. In fact, it is this and this only that constitutes a successful Christian Scientist. These compassionate words of Mrs. Eddy provide a yardstick for one who would measure his stature as a genuine Christian Scientist (Science and Health, pp. 366, 367): "If we would open their prison doors for the sick, we must first learn to bind up the broken-hearted. If we would heal by the Spirit, we must not hide the talent of spiritual healing under the napkin of its form, nor bury the morals of Christian Science in the grave-clothes of its letter. The tender word and Christian encouragement of an invalid, pitiful patience with his fears and the removal of them, are better than hecatombs of gushing theories, stereotyped borrowed speeches, and the doling of arguments, which are but so many parodies on legitimate Christian Science, aflame with divine Love."

The Comforter

The Comforter, or Holy Ghost, which Jesus said the Father would send in his name, is not merely that which comforts us in our affliction as a friend would comfort us. It is that which lifts us out of our affliction through acquainting us with the nature of reality, as distinguished from that which is unreal. The understanding of Christ, Truth, not merely enables us to endure suffering, but to overcome it by recognizing its unreality.

Spiritual Healing

The attitude of established systems of religion and medicine toward Christian Science is becoming more tolerant and kindly as Christian Scientists become more consistent in their presentation of its teachings. Resistance and opposition are recognized as merely evidences of misunderstanding. The greatest area of misunderstanding seems to center in the necessity of departing from the usual material means of treating disease. Let us consider why it is basically impossible to work from two contrary standpoints.

Spiritual and material means are fundamentally opposed to each other and cannot be made to work together. To attempt their combination is to serve two masters. Mrs. Eddy says (ibid., p. 142): "God being All-in-all, He made medicine; but that medicine was Mind. It could not have been matter, which departs from the nature and character of Mind, God. Truth is God's remedy for error of every kind, and Truth destroys only what is untrue." There has never been a mode of dealing with disease so complete and satisfying as that of Christ Jesus. A careful study of the four Gospels will confirm this fact.

It is quite generally believed that these works of healing do not belong to our time; that in modern times, medical systems have superseded the practice of primitive Christian healing. But Christian Scientists are proving that this is not so. Many of your neighbors, and perhaps some of your relatives, have experienced healing in Christian Science after failing to be healed otherwise. And there have been cases where recognized medical doctors not only have been healed through Christian Science, but have found themselves better equipped than they were before to heal the sick when they have engaged in the practice of Christian Science.

Christian Science recognizes disease to be not fact, but deception, regardless of the form it assumes. Any conflict there may seem to be between Christian Science and materia medica revolves around this basic point, and the area of disagreement will be widened, rather than narrowed, as this difference is recognized.

Health Defined

Health, being wholly good, is spiritual in nature, as present as God is present. Health being infinite, there is an abundance of health for everyone. Health is positive; disease is not. Of course it would be stupid, but suppose you tried to reflect a ray of darkness into a light room. You would see how impossible it is for that which is negative to exercise any effect upon that which is positive. But a ray of light displaces darkness in an instant, and without effort or struggle. The only successful and scientific way to dispose of disease is through a spiritual understanding of the true nature of health, the truth that health is ever present. And why is it ever present? Because as is stated in Science and Health (p. 120): "Health is not a condition of matter, but of Mind." Health, then, is as present as Mind, God, is present, and as irresistible. The appearing of the truth about health in consciousness is the disappearing of the lie about health in experience, just as the appearing of light disposes of the darkness—and disease is nothing but a lie about health.

Christian Scientists' Attitude Toward Mrs. Eddy

Those who have not yet experienced the healing and regenerating power of Christian Science may not readily understand Christian Scientists' attitude toward Mrs. Eddy. We, of course, do not worship or deify her. We are grateful for what she has accomplished in restoring the lost element of Christian healing. If we unintentionally give a misleading sense of our attitude toward our Leader, this is to be regretted. That a lone woman should find herself destined to take her place as the greatest religious leader since the time of Christ Jesus, all through a spiritually scientific sense of Biblical teaching, seems in this age a startling proposition. That a world-wide religious organization should be established by a woman in what is considered to be more or less a man's world is all the more startling. That her propositions should so coincide with the teachings of Christ Jesus and be so contrary to orthodox theology would naturally arouse both profound gratitude and determined antagonism. But is not this the pattern of outstanding religious achievement?

Yielding to the laws which her discovery revealed, Mrs. Eddy found her own life transformed. Through the purging of material beliefs in her consciousness, she became more and more spiritually-minded. This enabled her to see in the teachings and demonstrations of Christ Jesus the operation of spiritual law. Accordingly, she defined Christian Science "as the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony" (Rudimental Divine Science, p. 1).

The ability to follow a path hidden by dogma and obstructed by mountains of materialistic doctrines required of Mrs Eddy keen discernment and exceptional pioneering courage. Her mental progress beyond form, ceremony, and ritual was God-directed. Her unwavering obedience to the spiritual teachings of the Master is becoming clearer and clearer to Christian Scientists, and will be better understood by others as Christian Scientists demonstrate more fully the truths she taught.

The Jews of Jesus' day did not recognize his spiritual grandeur. It is unfortunate that they were not prepared to see his Christly nature. But material-mindedness could not grasp the spiritual significance of the prophecy concerning him. So that was rejected which, if understood and accepted, would have saved from recurring experiences of martyrdom.

It was not the person, but the spiritual-mindedness of the Master, which separated him from his brethren, and this is also true of Mrs. Eddy. She had great appreciation for all who were engaged in ministering to human needs. She recognized the sublime importance of her mission and lived so close to divine Love that she received of God a greater measure of spiritual strength, sagacity, and discernment than any person—man or woman—has received since the days of Jesus.

Mrs. Eddy justly requires of her followers an honest recognition of her position as Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science and Leader of the movement she established. The requirement is for the growth and protection of the great movement and for the welfare and development of her followers, certainly not for any gratification of personal pride. The more demonstrable one's understanding of Christian Science, the more one values a life so consecrated to a mission as that of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. But we, as her followers, need to watch lest we give others the impression that our affection for our Leader does savor of deification. We owe to her this consideration.

Problems and Answers

It is nearly time to bring this lecture to a close. Before doing so, however, may we consider the proposition that problems are human but the answers are divine? Because that which is divine is infinite, there is a divine answer to every human problem. When the answer appears, the problem disappears. When we think of ourselves as mortals, we invite the problems that vex us. But when we acknowledge with John "now are we the sons of God" (I John 3:2), and carry this acknowledgment to its logical conclusion, we become assured of the answer to our problem.

What if the problem is that of some diseased condition, or some disappointment with accompanying grief? What if the problem has to do with lack—lack of health, of employment, of advancement; with inability to withstand some weakening temptation or loathsome sin? What if the problem has to do with some hereditary tendency; with some phase of temperamental instability; or with some past mistake or wrongdoing? Regardless of the nature of the problem, the answer is at hand. And with the appearing of the answer will come the healing, the correction, the reward, the freedom.

When we think from the standpoint of what we humanly seem to be, we are troubled and sometimes overwhelmed by various problems. But when, through spiritualization of our thinking—and this means through our God-given ability to think spiritually—we become spiritually aware of the truth about ourselves, we identify ourselves with God, the divine source of our being. In God there are no problems.

Job's Healing

Have you read the book of Job in the Bible? If not, you have missed something. Here was a man who seemed to be overwhelmed by problems. His friends attempted to comfort him, but they only made him more miserable by justifying his plight from the standpoint of a wholly inadequate sense of God and Job's relationship to Him. When this approach failed to relieve his suffering, or even to satisfy his troubled thought, Elihu brought healing through a wholly right sense of God and man's relationship to Him. He declared: "But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding" (Job 32:8).

Depending upon this inspiration of the Almighty, Elihu turned Job's thought completely away from a mortal sense of himself to a divine sense of God. He began with the statement: "The spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life" (Job 33:4). He spoke in his day much as a Christian Science practitioner would speak today. He set forth in language suitable to his time the omnipotence, omnipresence, and omniscience of God. He rebuked Job's mortal, material sense of himself, and opened his eyes to see what a glorious heritage he had as a son of God.

Elihu's language seems strange to us, but the truths he enunciated are the same truths which are applied in Christian Science treatment today. The result of Elihu's treatment was all that could be wished for.

My friends, we are living in an age that corresponds to the early Christian era. Christian Science is the Comforter promised by Christ Jesus. You are not asked merely to believe this, but to understand and demonstrate it. And as you do, you will find yourself grateful beyond measure that you are receiving of God the moral courage and spiritual stamina required to maintain your position as a demonstrator of Truth in every phase of your experience. This is the way you make the Comforter your own.

THE KEY TO CONVERSATIONAL SUCCESS

DEEP DOWN in our hearts is the desire to take part in the conversation that goes on around us. Why? Well, there are two reasons. One is to impart knowledge; the other is the feeling of importance it gives us. I can assure you that the first reason is not the stronger one.

D. Carnegie

Here's a man who has learned a great truth in this connection, and one likely to stand him in good stead all his life. His name is Amos E. Jordan, and he lives in Stockton, Calif.

He says that at one time he could never listen to a conversation without sitting on the edge of his chair waiting for an opportunity to tune in. By and by, he noticed that people were less friendly to him than they were when they started out.

One day he read something in a magazine about the importance of being a good listener. No harm trying it out! He had just returned from a most interesting trip to Mexico. He had learned a great deal about the country, enough to whet his appetite for more. Some day he would go down there again. Before he did, he would learn all he could about the country.

One day he got into a conversation with a man who knew a lot about the big country to the south. He asked questions of him; also, he sat waiting to put in his two cents' worth. But he didn't get a chance. The other fellow was so thrilled about what he knew of Mexico, and so eager to tell it, that Mr. Jordan had either to listen or to rudely break in. So he put to a test the advice on being a good listener.

Did he profit? Well, he says he learned so much of what he had wanted to know that he decided from then on to be a good listener. He has followed this resolve, doing some of the talking, showing interest by asking questions, but mostly hearing what the other fellow had to say.

Incidentally, that man who knew so much about Mexico, and who got the chance to tell it to an interested person, seems to enjoy very much the society of Mr. Jordan!

Weekly vs. Daily Paper

One of the leading editorial writers of the New York Times maintains that a single copy of a weekly newspaper, slowly absorbed, may succeed in driving home a point more effectively than metropolitan dailies." He says:

"With us, the small town and country newspaper, which often is a weekly journal, is more influential than the daily press. A weekly newspaper which is read and absorbed in the seclusion and comparative leisure of a small town, is likely to exercise a greater pull on its readers than the daily newspaper crammed with a bewildering array of reading matter, and consumed amid the distraction of urban life."

A recent nation-wide survey by 13 research organizations showed that the weekly is much closer and leisurely read; is kept in the home for an average of four days, and that nine more people read the ads in the weekly than in the daily."—Industrial Press.

Depression Seen Only If We Talk Ourselves Into It

By John Kelly

(First in a Weekly Series)

A depression does not necessarily follow the return of a "buyers' market"—unless we proceed to talk ourselves into one. With typical American enthusiasm for headline and phrase, we could do just that.

Competition is the life blood of our system, but the spectacle of prices seeking a competitive level seems to be too much for some of us. It would almost appear that we didn't want to work again, a little matter we always realized would return some day.

Our situation today is utterly unlike that preceding former periods of collapse. There is no pyramid of private debt and no indication of financial strain. Industry, merchants and you as individuals were never so well prepared for the inevitable transition from boom to normal times. No one wanted the war to last forever.

There are virtual certainties which argue against the development of a downward spiral. Of all these the principal one is increased spending by the government. The enormous funds necessary to rearm and maintain the military and carry out our attempt to aid the economic reconstruction of war torn countries should make unnecessary a drastic change.

This should not be interpreted as an endorsement of huge, all-embracing central authority or the dream that such would solve our troubles for all time. As a matter of fact, the very mention of it is frightening.

It must not be forgotten that government makes mistakes. Memories go back to the autumn of 1945, when governmental experts prepared for deflationary developments which never transpired. The consequences of the 1945 mistake were the establishment of inflationary policies which started the post war upward spiral.

There has been no retraction, so far as we know, of widely published ideas to combat further inflation. But we now have with us plenty of groundwork for the beginning of an anti-deflation drive. There is always the problem of whether any one prophet can be right—especially when he was wrong in so many of his former predictions.

The price of big government can be our freedom. Let us do everything in our power to keep the freedom dear to us.

And Have Not Love

SYNOPSIS

Marriage for the Farishes had begun frugally and happily. After ten years Beatrice Farish and her successful husband, Porter, had themselves at an impasse. Porter has become morose, disgruntled as confidential aide of Mr. Ramey, the rich industrialist who employs him. Beatrice fears that their marriage is headed for the rocks. At breakfast Porter creates an ugly scene with Marianne, their little school-girl daughter. Angrily he storms out of the house. Beatrice determines that there shall be no divorce. She herself had been a child of divorce and bitterly remembers her misery. Their lives together, their home must, at all costs, be preserved for Marianne.

CHAPTER FOUR

BEATRICE had found an inner beauty and a winning simplicity in Hilde Bradley. During the ten years of semi-monthly visits to the hairdresser's little shop, she had seen Hilde's role alter from that of the new girl, shunned by the customers, to one so much in demand that no hour of her long working days was free of appointments. Moreover, Beatrice had seen the girl in love with the red-haired boy she had married and followed until the gates had [illegible] separating the civilian from the military, separating Hilde from him whom she loved most in the world—the tall figure in a GI uniform. Beatrice had gone to the hospital to see her when her son had been born, and then because Beatrice herself had followed Porter to California when he had been in the Navy, she had not seen Hilde again until the war was over, and she had again found her in the same little shop.

Beatrice wondered if anyone had ever told Hilde that she was beautiful. She wondered if her husband had ever told her, or if to him she was just a long-legged girl with short, dark curls—curls that just grew that way naturally. Beatrice saw the deep, quiet, almost purple eyes, the demure and charming smile, the beautiful body beneath the starched white uniform, and the long lovely hands red from constant use of hot water and usually stained from hair dyes. Beatrice had never seen the girl vexed when appointments overlapped and customers were irate and unreasonable. She had never heard her complain. Seemingly tireless she must, Beatrice had often thought, be tired most of the time to the point of despair.

Assuredly Hilde, constantly being thrashed up and down the pavement of life, poor, obscure, sorely beset, saw no comparison between herself and Mrs. Porter Farish, wife of the well known industrialist who was always getting his picture in the newspaper.

The shop, in a long block of stores, was in a busy commercial area. Beatrice parked her car and walked back. This section of town never failed to make her nostalgic. She had been a bride along this street, a poorly dressed girl carrying a little bag of groceries. I see her still, she thought. I know her still. She was so happy saving pennies on the groceries, so she and Porter could go to a movie on Saturday night. She was happy. She felt set apart and blessed. She and Porter were going to do such wonderful things. They were going to have everything. She didn't ask herself then, "And what will I do when I have everything? What will I be?"

Her preferential treatment in the shop always embarrassed her, and she was usually thankful to be a nonentity under the dryer.

Nina, the proprietress, a heavy woman with heavy black hair, and hard dark eyes, greeted her.

"Oh, good morning, Mrs. Farish."

"Good morning, Nina."

"It's a beautiful day, isn't it? That's a stunning suit."

"Thank you." Usually Hilde quietly intervened.

"I'm sorry but Hilde's not in today," Nina said. She wagged her head sadly and knowingly as she glanced around to see that all curious alien ears were closed to all noises except that of the whirring dryers. "It's only because you've known Hilde for so long that I can tell you, Mrs. Farish. Tom, that's Hilde's husband, his business failed and he's not working, not bringing in a cent. He's lazy, if you ask me. I wouldn't put up with it, working and keeping a man. She'd be better off without him. The way she works, and she's such a swell kid. I'd divorce him so quick. Forget him, I said to her. You forget that guy. Mildred's taking her appointments today. Mildred'll do right by you, Mrs. Farish. Hilde wrote down on a card just the way she does your hair."

At three o'clock that afternoon, after having seen her dentist and completed a little shopping, Beatrice took her car from a parking lot. It was on the impulse that she decided to stop at Libby's apartment to see her and to ask if Jane, Libby's fifteen-year-old daughter, would sit with Marianne tomorrow evening. Though Porter had not mentioned it, a small dinner party at the country club was noted in her engagement book: Daltons and Wests—club—dinner—dress.

Though Libby was like Hilde, a part of the past, Libby reached back deeper into the tissues of Beatrice's childhood. For of all the people she knew only Libby could see Mrs. Porter Farish as that awkward, wrongly dressed, neglected child stepping from the train and being met by Clara Preston, Libby's mother and Eddie's sister—a handsome woman, an out-giving woman, with a generous mouth that seemed a little tired from smiling as if her smile had been betrayed. Only Libby knew that the Preston home, that lovely country house into which Beatrice was welcomed for her weekends away from school, was the first real home she had ever known. Only later did Beatrice know what a great heart Clara Preston had for charity, how underprivileged she had thought her, and how desperately sorry she had been for her. Mr. Preston, Libby's father, had remained in the background, a distinguished looking man who was rarely at home.

And because for the first time in her life Beatrice had felt the magic of human warmth in Clara Preston, her death had been a tragedy from which it had taken Beatrice a long time to recover. For Clara had not seemed to die as other people did. Somehow she had simply ceased to exist because she had been unwilling any longer to hold to life.

At least, Beatrice thought now, one of the frustrations of her life was mitigated when she called on Libby. There was always a space to park around the tall brick apartment building. She noted, as always, the wide sweep of lawn, the profusion of flowers in the triangular flower beds, and the rather forbidding figure of the doorman.

Why hadn't Libby married again, she asked herself as she walked up the driveway? For Libby, after three years of marriage to Dick Gundria, a young surgeon, had divorced him. Beatrice, five years younger and still in school, had gone to their wedding and it had seemed to her then that there was not an ingredient for happiness that Libby and Dick did not possess. Yet they, who were so good for other people, were not good for each other. Though Dick had married Helen and had other children, he was a devoted and generous father to Jane. And since Dick and Libby belonged to the same country club and he went regularly to see Jane, it was inescapable that he and Libby should meet rather often. Beatrice had often pondered those meetings. How could Libby and Dick feel unmarried regardless of the legal severing? What had precipitated the divorce she did not know. She knew everything about Libby, who talked liberally about everything, except why she and Dick had been divorced.

In what was an increasingly and alarmingly changing world it was comforting to know what to expect of her old friend, for Libby was intense, spectacularly handsome and unfailingly loyal. Those qualities had made her so fantastically popular that even if she went to a party alone she was never the "odd" woman about whom a hostess had to worry. At the country club it was not at all uncommon to see Libby tweak the tie of the town's most unapproachable banker, and to see that the old gentleman loved it. She had the most catholic taste in men. Once during the war when she had been going to a party alone she had espied two soldiers on the street. Opening the door of her car she had asked merrily, "Want to go to a party, boys?" What the two soldiers had thought of the exquisitely dressed, be-furred, jeweled, dark-haired young woman in the sleek black car was never known. Libby had arrived, however, flanked by two red-faced GI's who had said that they had had the time of their lives.

Accordingly, it was generally accepted that Libby had not married again because she didn't want to. It was true that men's interest in her, at first ardent, soon cooled to a passive attachment. Beatrice had often wondered if Libby's gaiety were not a sham. Though Libby gave generously in tangibles—she was always sending beautiful gifts to her friends—a part of herself was held aloof, even from Jane. She seemed to turn away from warm affection. Beatrice wondered if Libby, amusingly cynical, a scoffer of sentiment, did not turn away from the thing she most desired. While granting a large capacity for friendship, Libby denied the existence of love.

West's Sluggers Chase Central Hurler, Win 10-4

By Dave Miller

West's baseball nine, again displaying a heavy punch at the plate, easily downed the Central Pirates, 10 to 4, on the downtown diamond Tuesday afternoon.

It was a tight ball game for four innings with Pitchers Jim Hill of Central and West's Phil Young going along in fairly good style until the Cowboy hitters pounced on Hill for four runs on as many hits, a wild pitch and two walks to break the game wide open in the fifth. Young was stingy with Central in his part, and the Cowboys went on to a rather easy triumph.

The Cowboys started things off fast with a run in the top of the first inning, but the Pirates came back with three in their half of the opening stanza, and the Cowboys tied it up at 3-all with two more in the third. However, a homerun by Johnny Wolfe put Central back in front in the third but the Cowboys broke loose for four in the fifth and two more in the seventh to "ice" the game.

Cowboys Score Early

In the top half of the opening round, Jack Pickens led off with a line single to left, and was sacrificed down by Dave Caton. Dick Culbertson hit to third base, where Pickens was out, sliding in. Dick Kirk singled Culbertson to third, and Dobbs plated the first-baseman with a punch to right-center.

Central came right back in its half. Second Baseman Jim Fowler hit Young's second pitch for a homerun over the left field fence. Harry Hoffman walked and stole second, and scored on Ralph Readout's single past second, and scored on Ralph Readout's single past second. Jim Hill then singled to left, and Dobbs let the ball go through him, plating Readout all the way from first. Young then struck out Jim Fenstermaker and Max Biederman to end the inning.

The Cowboys went down 1-2-3 in the second, but in the third Jack Pickens got his second hit of the day and Dick Culbertson walked. Morris Dobbs also walked to fill bases for the Hilltoppers with Bob Birle at the plate. He took a count of 3-2 before merely dropping a timely single to short left to score Pickens and Culbertson to put the score again at 2-all.

Central Regains Lead

However, Johnny Wolfe, Central third sacker, laid into an outside pitch by Young for a home run over the right-field fence to put Central back ahead, 4-3.

In the top of the fifth, the roof fell in on Pirate twirler Jim Hill. Dave Caton walked and Dick Culbertson singled him to third. After Culbertson stole second, Morris Dobbs, playing his best game of the season so far, singled to right, plating two runs. Bob Birle singled the former to third and Dobbs scored on Hill's wild pitch. Jack Winnestaffer then singled to short left field, plating Birle with the Cowboys' No. 8 run of the game, and that was all for Hill.

Vernie Feen replaced him on the hill and set the Cowboys down. Young then struck out the side of John Wolfe, Ralph Readout and Jim Hill in the Central fifth. In the fourth frame, Harry Hoffman, one of the better outfielders in the City League, hit a terrific drive to deep left. Leftfielder "Mo" Dobbs followed the ball clear to the fence, and finally made a last minute stab, and caught the ball, and also hit his head on the iron bar on the fence, knocking him momentarily unconscious, but he felt well enough to stay in the game. Dobbs also made a beautiful catch of Howard Cassady's foul fly in the sixth inning in addition to hitting 2 for 3 in the game.

West Clinches Victory

The Cowboys sewed up the game in the seventh with two more tallies. With two away, Jack Winnestaffer walked and Paul Ellingsworth, playing right field for the Cowboys, was hit by a pitched ball. Phil Young's single loaded the bases, but Winnestaffer scored on a passed ball, and Ellingsworth scored on Jack Pickens' double.

Jack Pickens was the Cowboys' star at the plate with two singles, a double in five chances at the plate. Dobbs and Birle each got two hits. The latter leads the team in hitting with 6 for 12 for a .500 average.

The Cowboys play host to North on the local diamond this Friday afternoon, weather permitting.

The Central-West line score:

		R.	H.	E.
West	102 041 2	10	11	1
Central	301 000 0	4	6	2

Just Garden Talk

By W. H. Lindberg

The weather has been so bad these last 10 days that inspiration for gardening has been lacking. I am going to try to devote this column today to some of the fundamentals of landscape design.

You have very likely noticed in the last decade how much more interest has been placed on the exterior development of the small home. I might even go so far as to draw attention to the development of the small home itself. Before taking up the direct thought of landscape design let's try to reason some of this progress of small property development. To make myself clear I am considering the progress of the individual home builder and not of the mass production small home.

The better small home has been brought about by two primary lines of thinking. One has been the effort to carry out some traditional type of architecture and the other has been a desire to plan a home to fit into the present day mode of living. This is the phase that definitely fits into the modern ideas of the grounds development.

If you have selected some traditional type of design in your home then the exterior decoration should fit into the same picture. You will find variations of a more or less set pattern that will be best to follow.

On the other hand, if your home is designed after the modern plan of living, then your garden or outdoor living room can follow in the same plan.

This subject has gotten itself involved and I am running out of space so I will promise more of the same next week.

Safety Tips For Spring Fishermen

Although the thermometer is becoming more and more familiar with the 70's and lower 80's, stream and lake water are still too chilly for an intentional swim.

Early spring fishermen, especially boat fishermen, can avoid a chilly "ducking" by following a few simple rules for boating safety.

Anglers at this time of the year are more heavily dressed than during the summer months and thereby face greater danger from occasional spills because the human body is less maneuverable equipped with heavy clothing and rubber boots.

Veteran boat fishermen usually make it a firm rule never to wear boots in a boat. Boots filled with water on the feet of a fisherman interested only in fishing is next to suicide, and anyway, the result is just about the same as tying weights onto your feet with wire. Your chance of getting the boots off in deep water is just as good.

The weather is more changeable at this time of the year and sudden storms are more certain. Watch for those clouds and head for shore when they look bad.

Two fishermen in one rowboat, regardless of size, is a load unless one rows while the other fishes, and casting from a standing position should be done only by the sure-footed and even then with great caution.

Fishermen are urged to hunt up those old inner-tubes for use as standard equipment while boating. They may be too worn to save your life on a curve, but still good enough to save your life in the water.

And if you value your fishing tackle equipment while fishing from a boat, keep your tackle box closed, except when you need something, and tie a short piece of cord to the handle and attach it to the boat. This is a good idea for other pieces of equipment which might be lost if you should take a spill.

Both fishing and boating are considered safe outdoor sports but they can be hazardous unless treated with the principles of common sense.

Hilltopana

By Myron T. Seifert

Imagine, if you can, the traffic jam that would result if every vehicle going or coming on W. Broad-st, Rt. 40, were required to stop at the bridge long enough to pay toll for the right to cross it, and this toll, as advocated by some today, would expedite financing of the bridge.

Imagine, if you can, your own feelings as you would jam on the brakes, disentangle yourself from your companion, and grope about in your pockets for a coin.

Yet, with the exception of jamming on the brakes, that was what went on when Columbus, 133 summers ago, on U. S. 40, was just beginning to grow from a cross-roads hamlet on the "high east bank of the Scioto" into a city worthy of being the capital of Ohio.

In 1816, the year in which Columbus was incorporated, the legislature granted a charter to Lucas Sullivant, allowing him to build a bridge to connect Franklinton and Columbus, and to derive a reasonable revenue from it, without services of a modern State Highway Department.

Mr. Sullivant was one of the most prominent of our pioneer citizens, one whose manifold civic activities in the early days were later commemorated by naming a West Side street for him.

An article appearing in the "Columbus Monitor" in November, 1816, under the heading "New Era", gives a detailed description of the structure which carried westward-bound pioneers over the Scioto on the famous National Road.

"An elegant bridge," wrote the enthusiastic reporter, "is now thrown across the Scioto, establishing connection between the towns of Franklinton and Columbus; the bridge being of wood, of a firm and durable structure, commencing at the termination on Broad Street and extending 316 feet to the opposite side of the river and continuing 350 feet further over the adjoining bottom. It is built on the principle of king posts and braces and the part over the river is supported by three trestles of sufficient strength and solidity of foundation."

Mr. Sullivant was a business-like individual, as his various interests (most of which he turned to profit) show. That was his bridge by legislative grant, and he was going to say how it might be used. A few days later he inserted an advertisement in the "Columbus Monitor" in which he made his intentions clear.

He stated that "the gates of my bridge will be closed on the first of December next," that date marking the official opening of the thoroughfare.

Those gates, he went on to assure the citizens, "would be open at suitable hours on Sundays and days of Thanksgiving." Free passage on the bridge was piously proffered to "all persons going to or coming from Divine worship" and also (perhaps in return for permission to operate the bridge) "to members of the legislature when going to or from the General Assembly."

Mr. Sullivant was generous, even if a little dictatorial about his bridge. "It shall be open," his notice concludes, "at all times free to funeral processions and on such other occasions as I may deem expedient." He further added, "Permits for passage on the bridge may be had on reasonable terms."

St Michael's

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever." And it seems as if Old St. Michael's church has been just that; not quite forever, but for several centuries. It is one of America's landmarks. Long may it stand as a bulwark against man's selfishness, against nations' wars.

Located in the Deep South, in South Carolina, it might symbolize any church. We like to think of it as God's church, a beacon light to free man of every creed who may find within its confines the path to immortality.

The clock on St. Michael's indicates the passing of time. The clock we see will some day stop, never to run again. St. Michael's itself, may some day crumble in ruin, unless it be preserved by remodeling and rebuilding as the ages wear on toward the perfect day.

In effect, all things worldly decay and die. Only the spirit of God's love, as exemplified by His churches, lives on. That, and time. Some clock somewhere will pick up where the clock of St. Michael's some day stops ticking. Time will wear on. Each second is gone forever, a chance lost to find the Divine Way of life for those who have not yet sought it.

But in a spiritual sense, Old St. Michael's will live on forever. The influence of its teachings, as exemplified by all Christian churches, will continue to make itself felt in the lives of its members. They go forth in an ever broadening army that others seeing them may be reminded of their Father who art in heaven."

Jesus Instructs His Disciples — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 12:16-21; 14:27-33.

To instruct His disciples in the discipline necessary to be one of His disciples, Jesus told them the parable of a rich man whose barns were too small, for his harvest, so he decided to build larger ones and take it easy the rest of his life.

The night he made his decision, the rich man was told by the Lord that very night his soul would be required of him. What then was the use of all his wealth? Jesus said this man was rich in material things, but not rich toward God.

To be a true disciple of the Lord, a man must "bear his cross," and follow in Jesus' footsteps, just as a man who intended to build a tower must count the cost before beginning work, lest he had not funds to finish, and be mocked.

A king planning to fight another king, would need to plan whether his smaller force could overcome a larger one. "So, likewise, whosoever . . . forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be My disciple."

MEMORY VERSE—James 1:17.

Card in Florida Paper: "Thursday I lost a gold watch which I valued very highly. Immediately I inserted a want ad in your lost-and-found column, and waited. Yesterday I went home and found the watch in the pocket of another suit. God bless your paper."

The absent-minded professor shaved the cat, and kicked himself in the face.

The Spectator By C.C. Hartley

Hilltop Now Has 47 More "Little Merchants"

With the advent of the Hilltop Record as a twice a week publication there was created on the Hilltop 47 new business men—the "Little Merchants" who have the job of delivering your paper each Tuesday and Thursday.

The Record is proud of the opportunity to set these young men up in a business for themselves and it is our sincere hope that this may be the beginning for many of them of a very successful business career.

Over the prosperous United States today are thousands of successful business men who got their start just as these boys are getting theirs. Many a man can look back with pride on his first venture in business as a newspaper delivery boy—a "Little Merchant" who bought his papers and in turn sold them to his many customers.

In addition to making it possible for a boy to earn some of his expenses this program likewise provides activity that might otherwise be spent unwisely and lead to juvenile delinquency. Judge Harry K. Eastman of the Juvenile Court of Cuyahoga County last week stated that he has not had a newsboy as a delinquent in his court in 20 years.

Likewise, this is valuable training in that these boys learn how to meet and treat people, how to get along with people. He develops a sense of responsibility and in general it makes of him a fine citizen.

The Record is happy to have this connection with a lot of fine boys of the Hilltop. We hope we may contribute to their future success. We trust they will be well received by the public as they make their calls from house to house to ask you to subscribe and to transact their business with you.

A local minister was two hours late for a wedding rehearsal Sunday evening . . . It's a son for the Mike Mowreys born Friday at Madison, Wisc. and Hilltop's Capt. Mowrey, 2935 Crescent-dr, becomes a grandpa . . . There aren't many success rules that'll work unless you do . . . A big sesquicentennial celebration is in the making for Sept. 2-3-4 and 5 at Greenfield, Ohio . . . New signs on Broad Street: Ray & Son and E. L. Shipper at Terrace and Broad and the Hilltop Tune Shop, and on Sullivant one for Cap's Confectionery at Nashoba-av . . . John Hardy's two daughters and wife are on the sick list . . . Something new has been added at Hardy's Shopall: The prescription department has been moved right into the front window where you can watch what the doctor prescribes being compounded while you wait . . . Mrs. Mose Williams will be interviewed over WHKC Thursday at 1:30 by Rita Thomas, telling of the Alaskan Library project . . . Incidentally over 1160 books and 200 new testaments have been shipped to Alaska already . . . The Dr. R. J. Men with hairy chests
Look better

Hilltop Asked To Map Plan

The Hilltop community has been handed a golden opportunity to get its plans and aspirations for civic betterment before the men who have it within their power to make realities out of some of the dreams the Hilltop has been dreaming for many years.

Mayor James A. Rhodes has invited Russell Carter of the Broadview Linoleum and Tile Co., president of the Hilltop Community Council, to gather together and present in one "package" the short and long-range desires of the community.

The mayor's invitation, of course, does not guarantee that every proposal the Hilltop might make will be carried out overnight. He does seek, however, to have before him and other city officials a sketch of the community's future needs so that they might be given the proper priority in the city's planning for the future.

Hails Opportunity

Mr. Carter termed Mayor Rhodes' invitation as "an opportunity without precedent," and immediately said he would appoint a special committee shortly to receive and tabulate suggestions for an over-all civic betterment program.

Already on hand and in writing, Mr. Carter said, is a group of proposals which might form the nucleus for the broader set of plans. He listed these as:

1. An alleviation of the swamp condition in the Belvidere-av section.
2. Development of the natural amphitheater below Glenwood Park.
3. Continuation of the owl bus beyond the present Powell-av terminus.
4. Installation of lights around the Glenwood Park shelterhouse.

Broad View Sought

Mr. Carter indicated, however, that the over-all proposals for the Hilltop's future would not be restricted to relatively minor gains such as those listed above. He emphasized that the proposals should cover sufficient area to enable the Hilltop to grow and to be a better place in which to live.

Not every proposal which is made, he said, can be incorporated in the final draft of the "Hilltop Plan" but each will be studied carefully to the end that the plan, as presented to the city, will contain those proposals on which the community as a whole can agree and behind which the community, as a whole, can put its collective shoulder and push them through to ultimate realization.

Hilltop Store Starting Sale Of Live Bait

Bob Postle and Lou Maish, proprietors of the Hilltop Sporting Goods Co., 2461 W. Broad-st, will offer, beginning next week-end, the only live bait service west of Central-av.

Maish and Postle, who have been operating their sporting goods store for the last two and one-half years, said that equipment necessary to offer their customers fresh, lively bait will be installed in time to take care of the needs of live-bait fishermen, beginning Friday and for the rest of the season.

They plan to handle minnows, soft craws, helgramites, night crawlers and dug worms.

Special hours have been arranged to meet the needs of both day and night fishermen in addition to those who desire to set out for their favorite pools early on Saturdays and Sundays.

The store will be open on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. Saturday hours will be from 5 a. m to midnight and Sunday hours from 5 a. m. to 10 a. m.

In addition to the new line of live bait, the Hilltop Sporting Goods Co. also offers a complete line of artificial casting lures, flies and fly rod lures and spinning equipment in addition to all types of rods. Fishermen also may obtain licenses at the store, making it a complete, one-stop service station for anglers.

DOOMED AS HAZARD — This is the ancient, weatherbeaten barn, relic of an earlier era, which must be torn down because it has become so insecure as to constitute a hazard to life, Columbus' chief building inspector has ruled. Hilltop Puppy Places First In Columbus Show

A first place winner at the Central Ohio Kennel Club Dog Show Sunday, Apr. 24, was a Hilltop puppy, owned by Mrs. Frances V. Zigler, 330 S. Ogden-av.

Owner of a black chow male puppy, Mrs. Zigler entered him in the puppy class Sunday and walked off with a blue ribbon and a trophy.

Judged the best in his class, the puppy, professionally known as Mongol-Yan Black Fury, is sired by Copper Topper of Sand Dune, well known Columbus champion.

Six hundred and six entries were judged at the Central Ohio Kennel Club dog show at the Fairgrounds Coliseum. Mrs. Zigler's dog was one of 10 chows entered at the show, which continued from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Mongol Yan Black Fury is the first entry Mrs. Zigler has made in a dog show.

Hilltop Barn Behind 'Y' Condemned

A Hilltop landmark will pass out of existence within the next few days, the victim of wreckers' hammers.

Condemned as a fire hazard by fire and city officials, the large brick barn at the west rear of the venerable Weber "mansion" at 2585 W. Broad-st must come down because of order by the city's chief building inspector, J. S. (Doc) Stith. The condemnation order was issued Apr. 18, according to the Columbus Department of Public Safety. The order of that date called for razing of the structure within 10 days.

Owned By Neth

The property is now owned by Theater Operator J. Real Neth. The old Weber "mansion" also is located on the tract and presently is occupied by the Hilltop YMCA. The front portion of the tract is under lease to the Sucony-Vacuum Co. which several years ago laid concrete over a large expanse preparatory to the installation of a filling station.

The barn which must be razed under Mr. Stith's order is a victim of the ravages of time and young hands. Mortar, rotting over the years, became soft enough for boyish hands to extract the bricks from the walls one by one. Now, vast gaps appear in the structure at several places. Mr. Stith found the bulding insecure and a potential death trap for youngsters playing in and around the building.

Part of Roof Sags

The southeast portion of the heavy slate roof now sags dangerously because of the fact that most of the supporting bricks are gone.

A notice of the dangerous condition of the building now is posted on the front door and it is suggested that Hilltop parents specifically warn their children to avoid the building entirely until the demolition can be completed.

City Installs 4 Traffic Lights In Hilltop Area

Hilltoppers are driving with a wary eye these days. They never know when a traffic light may loom up where none ever grew before.

For the sake of the unwary, here are the locations of four lights which were installed in the Hilltop area Monday.

Hilltop Record Celebrates 32nd Birthday Wednesday

Thirty-two years ago tomorrow, on Apr. 27, 1917, the first Hilltop Record made its appearance in this community. The United States had entered World War I only three weeks earlier.

Now, 32 years and two World Wars later, The Record enters its 33rd year with the Thursday issue on a note of healthy progress, for only three weeks have elapsed since it entered the semi-weekly field.

Since The Record's first appearance, 2113 issues have rolled off its press—always on time.

The first issue, published by S. J. Westlake, contained only four pages and was four columns wide. And where its circulation at that time was reported as 2000, The Record now goes into over 7000 homes.

The biggest news event recorded in the first issue was a banquet of the Baraca Class of Glenwood M. E. honoring the two city champion basketball teams of the church.

The junior squad that year, according to the records, won 14 of 18 games played while the "Big Team" took 23 out of 25, beating West High in one battle, 25 to 21. The team also overwhelmed West Park M. E., runners-up in the West Church Loop, 78 to 7.

Two of the four front page columns were utilized for church announcements, while the fourth was given over to brief items of Hilltop activities and a Seiler Dry Goods advertisement.

"We begin this week," the first editorial runs, "the publication of The Hilltop Record, and expect to continue issuing the same each week, date of publication being Friday.

"We have no great predictions to make concerning the future of the Record, but we do promise to do our best to make it an interesting newspaper devoted exclusively to the Hilltop . . ."

The Record is still trying.

Words of the Wise

Be Ambitious to live, contest with small means; seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; be worthy, not respectable; and wealthy, not rich. Listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages with open heart. Hear cheerfully, act bravely, hurry never, and always let the spiritual grow up through the common.

Cowboys Nip Polar Bears, 5-2, In Wild, Woolly Game

West's Cowboys copped their third City League win in four outings yesterday afternoon by defeating North's Polar Bears, 5 to 2, behind the able pitching of Phil Young, at West.

Phil was very effective in the clutch throughout the game. The first inning was a good example when, with one man away, Tommy Thomas walked, Dave McBride got a double to right center and the clean-up man, Bob Blanchard, also walked to fill the sacks. However, the big right-hander struck out "Skip" Barker and forced Dave Dreennan to ground out to second, ending the inning with no damage.

The Hilltoppers hopped on Right-hander Paul Jones, a former West student, in the very first frame, and he was unable to retire any of the five men who faced him. Russ Daye relieved Jones and set the Cowboys down easily after the outburst. However, Daye walked the Cowboys' fifth run in the second inning, but from then on he couldn't be touched. North got both its tallies in the third frame.

In the opening inning, Jack Pickens led off with a clean single to left, and he advanced another base on Jones' wild pitch. Dave Caton walked and both he and Pickens moved up another base on a passed ball by Catcher Don Mittendorf. Dick Culbertson then tagged a single to right field, plating both the base runners, but Right-fielder Ed Kiefhaber let the ball go past him, clear to the fence in right. Culbertson raced around the bags to score on the error.

Dick Kirk then singled past shortstop and advanced to second when Left-fielder Dick Mahoney also let his ball go through him, but a perfect peg by Center-fielder Tommy Thomas held Kirk at the keystone sack. Then Morris Dobbs, sophomore out-fielder for the Cowboys, placed one over shortstop, plating Kirk with the locals' fourth run of the inning, and still none out.

Jones then made his exit for North, and Russ Daye set the "red bot" Cowboys down easily in the latter part of the frame.

Final Run Forced In

In the second inning, Phil Young struck out, but was safe at first when Catcher Mittendorf dropped the third strike. Jack Pickens then singled, Young to second, but Dave Caton forced the pitcher at third, Daye to Third-baseman Dave McBride. The sacks were loaded when Second-Baseman Dave Drennan bobbled Dick Culbertson's grounder and Daye walked Dick Kirk with a 3-2 pitch to force in the Cowboys' fifth and final run of the ball game.

North got its only two in the third when Tommy Thomas singled and Dave McBride got his second straight hit of the day with a single past first, sending Thomas to third. The latter scored on Bob Blanchard's force of McBride at second. Blanchard then proceeded to steal second, and scored on Jack Pickens' bad throw over First-Baseman Dick Culbertson's head.

Young then pulled himself out of the inning by forcing Drennan to ground out to shortstop and striking out Kiefhaber for the second straight time. In the fifth inning, with one gone, McBride got his third straight hit and was safe at second when, on an attempted double play after a line drive to Second-Baseman Caton, he threw the ball over Culbertson's head. Then came the prettiest play of the game. Phil Young turned and threw to Shortstop Jack Pickens and they got McBride by two feet. The two had tried this once or twice before, but it never was in time in previous attempts.

McBride Gets 3 for 3

Hitting star of the game was McBride of North with 3 for 3, getting three of the five North safeties. Dick Culbertson was easily the hitting star for West with three singles in four chances. The big first-baseman now leads the team in total bases with 21 in five games. There are three .400 hitters in the West starting nine, Dick Kirk with .467, Jack Pickens with .421 and Bob Birle with .400 even. Culbertson is close behind with a .389 mark.

Jim Hamrick is scheduled to pitch against Aquinas in today's game with the Mt. Vernon Avenue School to be played there. The Cowboys drew the bye Friday in the City League but have a really tough test next Tuesday when they clash with undefeated South.

The West-North line score:

North	002 000 0	2	5	4
West	410 000 x	5	8	2

Jones, Daye (1) and Mittendorf; Young and Birle.

Hilltop Boy and Girl Bowling Teams Win Both State and National Honors

By Dick Ardle

Paul Leighninger was surprised last week—twice—while at work at Seiler's Department Store. The surprises came in connection with the two teen-age bowling leagues which he sponsors and which roll at the Hilltop Alleys on Monday and Saturday.

A week ago yesterday, Paul received a telephone call from Margaret Schueller, secretary of the women bowlers of Ohio, informing him his Bobbie Brooks girls' team had won the state championship bowling honors and had placed 16th in the nation.

No more had he hung up the receiver than he had another call from "Doc" Bernhard informing him that the same honor had been won by his McGregor boys' team. The boys had won the state championship and placed sixth in the nation.

The championships were decided in a telegraphic meet in which the contestants rolled at their local alleys and wired their scores to a central clearing house in Chicago. The Hilltop boys' team total was 2881 while the girls were racking up an excellent [illegible].

Each team will receive individual trophies and Paul will receive a team trophy for each group to be held for a one-year period.

Both teams of youthful bowlers will be honored and presented their trophies on May 9 during the Women's International Bowling Congress convention to be held at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel.

By Dick Ardle

McCullough Insurance, paced by Harvey Cowgill's 209-567, practically eliminated Fox Food Shop from the title race of the Thursday Night Business Men's League as they defeated them three games, 862-850, 893-888 and 814-797.

Dick Ardle

All three of the games were close with each one being decided in the 10th frame. In the middle game, McCulloughs were seven marks down going into the 10th frame but were able to pick them up and go on to win. Carl Breckenridge was the top man for Fox Food Shop with 201-561.

And Full Value For Your Dollar

There's a commonly used expression: "You get just what you pay for." This applies to PRINTING just the same as most anything else you buy. Good PRINTING can't be produced at a poor price.

Poor PRINTING even at a low price is expensive, because it gives the prospective customer the impression that your services or products are not up to standard. We give full value for every dollar you spend with us for PRINTING — and our prices are always FAIR.

OUR PRINT SHOP IS AT YOUR SERVICE..

Words of the Wise

Genteel peace shows us but one side of the world; adversity brings out the reverse of the picture. —(Colton)

A sea-gage is the draft of a vessel, or a sounding instrument which shows the depth of the water by the pressure exerted on a column of fluid.

Switzerland has seven universities, and the oldest Basle, was founded in 1460.

GENE'S -- FINE FOODS

"Tops" in Chicken and Steak Dinners!

Curb Service in Season

Whether it's a business or a social event or you're "Topping the Town" some night — it's Gene's Fine Foods—at 1565 West 5th Avenue, at the big pink stucco building with easy drive-in and parking facilities. These after-the-show folks and night owls surely go for Gene's Giant Hamburgers with a big malted milk, and his home-made spaghetti is something out of this world.

It is a cozy place where you are made to feel at home. Enjoy a tender choice broiled steak or fried chicken dinner, "Southern style" and your favorite fountain drinks served in an atmosphere that will delight you with new modern up-to-date equipment.

The excellent service, good food and attractive surroundings all combine to make this a popular spot. Your choice of modern styled tables or luxurious booths.

Folks down our way are telling their friends and those friends are telling others—"Gene's juicy and tender steaks and fried chicken dinners at moderate prices are really "tops"! Gene's home-made Italian spaghetti is cooked and prepared expertly, served with meat balls. That's why it tastes so extra good.

A lunch or dinner here is a form of invitation the people "in the know" as to popular eating places accept as a mark of distinctive eating and good times.

Gene's is an ideal spot to bring the family for an evening or Sunday dinner. 1565 West Fifth Avenue, KI. 0168.

Kiwanis Folder Discusses Record of U. S. Doctors

Folder No. 3 of the Kiwanis International's "It's Fun to Live in America" series contains a number of pertinent thoughts with respect to the proposals now before Congress for a nationalized medical program. The Record wishes to pass them on to its readers:

"Say, remember the time your measles "broke out" right in the middle of the night! Or the time baby sister (or brother) was about to arrive at your house! Who was called to come a-running? And who came, bringing hope, confidence, and the "smell" of good clean, health-giving medicines? Why, it was the old family doctor, of course! Regardless of the day or night — rain or shine, sleet or snow, the doctor came. What's more, he didn't ask about your bank balance, Social Security number, or have you fill out a set of government forms.

By George, do you know there are 200,000 doctors of medicine in this great land of ours—that's one M. D. for every 710 people, the lowest number of people per doctor of any nation on earth. Not included in this total are thousands of other doctors, fine men and women who specialize in different types of treatment.

"What about our nation's health? Considering our size, and races of people involved, we have made more progress than any nation on earth. Why, a child born back in 1900 could not expect to live beyond 49 years, but now the life expectancy is 68 years. In 1953, it will probably be three score and ten. Just think, only 18 years ago pneumonia and tuberculosis cut off the most of men's working years. Now it is accidents. Yes, we're making great progress! And these fine doctors of ours—who must go to school eight, 10 to 12 years after high school—have made this progress possible.

"Government control? That's the $64 question! But it should not be hard to answer. Here we are, a nation that won our independence only 168 years ago. Yet in that short span we have made more progress in health and well-being than any other nation. So we're going to be mighty careful about changing our voluntary way for any compulsory 'scheme.'

"Let's look at the record. Here's an excerpt from a letter we recently received from another country: 'Our free medicine is now costing my husband and me between three and five pounds (roughly, $12.00 to $20.00) per month in added taxes.' Is that free? But here in America one can voluntarily purchase hospital and medical insurance for about the cost of a package of cigarettes a day. So, let's keep our voluntary way."

THE HILLTOP RECORD

The Hilltop, Columbus 4, Ohio, Tuesday, April 26, 1949

Latin American Problems Described to Kiwanians

Kiwanians of the Hilltop Club were given a thumb-nail review of Latin America's problems, aspirations and culture Thursday noon at the club's regular meeting at Schmelzer's Restaurant.

The speaker was Wayne Hanson of Oak Park, Ill., world traveler and for many years a YMCA executive.

Introduced by Averille Thorn, Hilltop Y secretary, Mr. Hanson drew first a word picture of the vast, underdeveloped area "south of the border" and described the terrifying vistas of the Andes Mountains, a continuation of North America's Rocky Mountain chain.

Wealth Concentrated

Turning to the economic side of Central and South American problems, he pointed out that the vast bulk of the area's wealth is concentrated in the hands of seven per cent of the population, that the "middle class" is composed of only 20 per cent of the population and that indescribable poverty is the lot of the remaining 73 per cent of the people south of the U. S.-Mexican border.

That situation, Mr. Hanson said, is the most obvious and one of the most pressing problems of Latin America as a whole.

The speaker added that the vacillating policy of the United States in some of its enterprises in Latin America has added to the stringency of the area's economy. He cited Washington's quick withdrawal from the natural rubber program in Brazil at the end of the war as typical of the chaos-breeding policy (or lack of policy) which the United States has pursued.

The culture of Latin America, partially because of the nationalities of its first colonizers and partially because of its geographical proximity to Europe, is largely European, Mr. Hanson pointed out. He described Buenos Aires, Argentina, as the "Paris" of the Western Hemisphere, with overtones of London, Madrid and Lisbon.

Think Like Europeans

And because of its Europe-based culture, Mr. Hanson said, Europe's manner of thinking also has been passed on to Latin America. As a result, the people of the area cannot help being suspicious of those who come bearing gifts, the speaker pointed out.

Mr. Hanson declared, however, that the people of the Latin American countries, when given an opportunity to know and appreciate the motives of their North American cousins, were amenable to persuasion. In the light of that fact, he called upon Kiwanians and all American citizens to join in a "new diplomacy" of education and understanding so that people of all Western Hemisphere nations might unite in a long-range effort to bring peace, prosperity and economic justice to all.

Include Foods That Contain Vitamin C in the Daily Fare

By ALICE DENHOFF

IT'S a wise woman who sees to it that the menus for her family hit the high C's. Human life can't exist without vitamin C, science says; it is necessary to the growth of every living cell. How good it is that the vital C is found in foods that taste so good, the wonderful citrus that gleams golden and yellow in our markets, and the rosy tomato! Besides the C vitamin in which they are so rich, citrus contains valuable citrates, calcium, phosphorous, fruit sugars, and, of course, great alkalizing properties.

Besides the orange juice, and the grapefruit, see to it that additional C finds its way into the menu to help ward off Spring colds. Slice ripe bananas into orange juice for an afternoon snack for a convalescent, or for the youngsters. Use orange juice to thin down peanut butter.

First Course

For a fine salad that will yield a nice first course, relish or salad for 6, toss 2 c. grapefruit sections, a Number 1 can shrimp, ½ c. diced cucumber, ½ c. diced celery and ½ c. French dressing together lightly. Serve on beds of crisp watercress.

Make a production out of sweet potatoes this way: Scrub 4 medium sweet potatoes; cover with boiling salted water, and boil 25 min., or so, until tender. Peel, mash. Add 2 tbsp. butter, ½ tsp. salt, ¾ c. cubed orange sections and juice; whip fluffy. Add ½ c. chopped Brazil nuts. Pile in shallow casserole. Bake in very hot oven (450 F.) 15 min. Serves 4-6.

Another Version

For another version of this dish, cook 4 medium-size sweet potatoes, then cut in lengthwise slices. Combine one c. honey, 2 tbsp. cornstarch, ½ c. water and ¼ tsp. salt. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Arrange alternate layers of sweet potatoes, orange slices and chopped nutmeats in greased casserole, using 2 c. orange slices and ½ c. nutmeats in all. Pour honey mixture and 1½ c. orange juice into casserole. Bake at 375 F. for 20 min. Serves 6.

If the icebox yields 1½ c. cooked lamb, dice it and prepare a good salad for luncheon or supper. Mix together one c. cooked, diced potatoes, ¼ c. chopped pickle, 2 c. grapefruit sections, the lamb and ½ c. mayonnaise, quarter 4 tomatoes and arrange with salad greens on a platter, heaping salad in center. Serve well chilled. Enough for 6 servings.

School Pupils To Be Given Trees Friday

Twenty-five thousand black walnut trees are being prepared for distribution to public and parochial schools throughout Columbus, Bexley, Grandview and Worthington by a committee of the Cooperative Civic Club headed by Lou Viereck, Columbus florist.

It will be the third successive year in which the club has sought to do something about the city's declining tree population in connection with the observance of Arbor Day.

Arbor Day has been proclaimed for Apr. 29 by Gov. Frank Lausche who urged citizens to give attention to the need for replacing trees in both city and countryside.

Deliver to Schools

Each school pupil in the city has been asked whether he or she has a place to plant a tree. Schools have sent their orders to the club and next Thursday following a noon luncheon of the club, members will deliver the trees to the schools.

On Friday, teachers will distribute the young black walnut trees to pupils who are expected to take them home and plant them as an investment in the "future they all hope to enjoy," said Mr. Viereck.

Although Friday, has been designated as Arbor Day, citizens need not wait until that day to plant trees. In fact, if an early Spring breaks through and normal warm days typical of the old-fashioned April should follow then the latter part of April will be considered by many as a little late for tree planting.

Hints for Planting

The Division of Conservation offers the following hints for tree planting gathered from many years of experience in planting thousands of trees for wildlife food and shelter throughout the state.

First, dig a hole a little larger in size and depth than is necessary to take the root system when spread out as it would grow naturally.

Place tree in hole, spreading out roots so that none are folded, bent or bunched. If running water is available (or if a sufficient amount can be carried), run a small stream into the hole and push soil in slowly so that it settles solidly around the roots. Hold the tree upright with the "root collar" level with the ground while filling the hole, and fill to the ground level. If water is not available, hold tree in position and push soil in slowly, tamping and packing firmly.

Stake Exposed Trees

It is advisable to stake and tie trees which are in exposed positions until they are firmly established.

If trees are received a few days before planting, they must be kept moist and cool or "heeled in." "Heeling in" is done by digging a hole or trench with one side on a slant. Place the bundles on the slant so that roots can be completely covered with earth.

All trees should be planted at the same depth as they formerly grew. This depth can usually be determined by an "earth mark" or "root collar" on the stem.

The soil must be packed solidly around the roots either by water or by tamping. Air spaces or pockets around a root indicate that it is not in contact with soil, which will kill that root, and possibly the tree.

Planted trees should be watered during dry periods the first year or two.

"CLOUDS" RIDE SURF ALONG EAST COAST

No, this is not an upside-down picture of billowy clouds; it's a closeup of the foam stirred up by the sea and "riding the surf," as it were, along the route of the proposed 57-mile toll road to be laid down narrow Currituck Beach on the coast of North Carolina from Virginia Beach to US 158 just north of Nags Head—turning point for US 17.

WITHIN a year from now—18 months at the outside—a new sportsman's and vacationer's paradise will open up along a 57-mile toll road to be laid down narrow Currituck beach on the coast of North Carolina—one of America's most varied oceanic wildernesses.

The proposed $1,500,000 seaside highway, planned by a group of North Carolina and Virginia investors, will connect Virginia Beach with US 158 just north of Nags Head—turning point for US 17.

A veritable land of romance, mystery and recreation, Currituck sound is considered the best duck-hunting area on the Atlantic flyway and the fresh-water fishing (for large-mouth bass) is equally as good.

The beach presents a never-ending panorama of wildlife, including geese, ducks and the rare American bald eagle as well as muskrats, grey-foxes, an occasional mink and now and then an otter or two.

Hard by 163-foot Currituck Light (locally called Whaleshead, after the barchane nearby, is False Cape, a land projection which led many an unwary mariner to mistake it for Cape Henry and so turn too soon for a landing—only to find himself and his crew shipwrecked.

North of Carolla lies Washwoods, where the forest came marched right down to the surf.

Southward, the route takes the traveler to Fort Raleigh with its summertime Lost Colony near Kitty Hawk, site of the Wright Brothers' historic first flight and Pennsylvania's first wireless experiments.

The beach narrows to a few feet in some places; toward Duck, at the southern terminus, it spreads out into a magnificent forest of water oaks, bays, pines, holly, yaupon, dogwood and other species. The northern end has wind-beaten shrubs and a few pines and cedars and much sea oats and beach grass. A reforestation project for pines and cedars is underway.

Sportsmen will encounter big-game territory at Manns Harbor, Stumpy Point and Englehard—an area over-run with bear, deer and by waterfowl, squirrel and other game.

It is estimated that a minimum of a million persons a year will traverse the road.

Limerick, capital city of Limerick Co., Ireland (Eire) was a place of importance in the Middle Ages. It was the last stronghold of James II in Ireland in 1691.

New Road Block Survey To Seek Data on Traffic

Sheriff's deputies, highway patrolmen, city police and state highway department employes will set up road blocks around the edges of Franklin County in the near future, to secure highway information vitally needed in improving traffic conditions.

The action, known as the "Origin and Destination Survey," is sponsored by city, county and state highway departments, the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and other groups.

Road blocks will be set up from time to time on 35 stations, on each road carrying more than 500 vehicles a day. Crews of seven or eight men will be assigned to each station, from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Each driver leaving the county will be asked the origin and destination of his trip. The interviews will last only a minute or less.

The Lengthening Shadow

The New England Letter, published periodically by the First National Bank of Boston, offers a fresh and startling realistic perspective of the growth of Federal spending in these United States.

In 1929, Federal spending amounted to less than two-thirds of the personal income of the inhabitants of California.

By 1947, expenditures of the national government were approximately equal to the total personal income of all the inhabitants of California, Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and about four-fifths of Texas.

Federal expenditures amounted to $121 per family in 1929, $250 in 1938, and about $948 in 1948.

Glance at a map of the USA. It's quite apparent that the states listed above comprise slightly more than half of the area of the entire nation.

The New England Letter points out that these figures represent the spending of the Federal government only. When state and local government spending is added the total amounts to some 30 per cent of the national income.

In other words, the American people devote nearly one-third of their working time and effort to supporting their various governments.

Government derives its revenues through taxation. So the taxation shadow has crept from a mere two-thirds of California in 1929 to blanket more than half the nation's area by 1947. It is still gathering momentum.

The Hoover Commission study points the way to paring down that spending by simplifying the structure of the Federal government and increasing its efficiency, eliminating overlaps and waste.

It remains to be seen whether the 81st Congress will endeavor to follow the Commission's guideposts. It would be difficult to think of a better way to win the people's confidence and with it their votes.

Capt. Neeshan Is Graduated At Florida Base

Capt. M. T. S. Neeshan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Neeshan, 221 Haldy-av, was graduated in the Air Tactical School class at the Tyndall Air Force Base at Panama City, Fla., Friday.

Also among the graduates was Capt. Don Gentile of Piqua, one of the top aces of the European theater during the last war.

For the last 16 weeks these Air Force officers, with others carefully selected for the training, have taken an intensive course in subjects of vital importance to Air Force officers in responsible positions under direction of Brig. Gen J. K. Lacey, Commandant. The rigid academic course has found the officers hearing lectures on military management, operations, operational services, new developments, tactics, and supply and maintenance, coupled with frequent round table discussions of problems similar to those confronting the men operating today's United States Air Force.

Upon completion of the course here student officers returned to their home bases, to put into operation the theories they have learned. Later, after a period of additional service, many of them will be selected to attend other schools in the Air University system.

A FRANTIZED SEARCH for 2½-year-old Jacqueline Simon ends as a 50-man Big Rapids, Mich., posse finds her wandering in a swamp 16 hours after straying from her front yard. She seems slightly puzzled by the photographers and appears to be ready to settle down and rest. (International)

Getting Hot, Eh Comrade?

Grant, Savior of Union, Born in Ohio 127 Years Ago

By Robert Stearns

General Ulysses Simpson Grant, 18th president of the United States, was born at Mount Pleasant, O., on Apr. 27, 1822. There is nothing revealed in the study of his campaigns to contradict the popular view that he saved the Union.

The contrasts in his life afford an important study of character. A few highlights will enable one to understand why his was a "massive, noble and loveable" personality, in spite of some shortcomings.

As a man of war, Grant manifested a grim, relentless—even terrifying—singleness of purpose to win his objective regardless of cost. After he was placed in supreme command of the Union army (March, 1864) there began a series, almost uninterrupted, of terrible battles. The Confederacy, almost always the victor in tactics, was worn out and reduced to a handful by Grant's strategy of attrition.

Two Dissimilar Characters

As a man of peace, he was utterly unlike the merciless man of war. At Appomatox, where he insisted upon "unconditional surrender", he absented himself from the formal ceremony rather than risk any appearance of personal triumph. From then on Grant did everything possible to make easier the lot of his fallen countrymen.

With a great hue and cry, after Abraham Lincoln's assassination, to indict General Lee and others for treason, Grant stopped the popular movement. He threatened to resign his commission if the surrender terms were so disgracefully violated.

During his two terms (1868-1876) in the White House, he contributed services to our country just as valuable as anything he ever did on the battle field. After his veto of the Inflation Bill of 1864, it was his decisive influence which led to the passage a year later of the Resumption Act. Only then did the nation begin to make headway on the long road back.

No Stigma Touched Him

A straightforward appraisal of President Grant is impossible without reference to the widespread scandals during his administration. No stigma ever was attached to him personally, but he was ill-fitted to cope with the rascality bred of reconstruction. It seemed clear beyond him to believe anything but good of anyone to whom he had given his friendship. Much of the evil was performed by his friends.

A final glimpse of Grant's character is gained from his "Personal Memoirs", a book filled with simplicity and charm. He knew nothing about writing, but he was penniless and had to keep the wolf from the door. When he began the work, the painful disease which killed him was well started. The manuscript was finished only four days before his death.

General Grant died July 23, 1885. His tomb of marble and granite overlooks the Hudson from Riverside Drive, New York City. The funds which made possible its construction were made up of 90,000 individual contributions—a fitting tribute to one of the heroes of a great nation.

And Have Not Love

SYNOPSIS

Marriage for the Farishes had begun frigidly and ruggedly. After ten years Beatrice Farish and her successful husband, Porter, find themselves at an impasse. Porter has become person, disgruntled as cantankerous old Mr. Ramey, the rich industrialist who employs him. Beatrice fears that their marriage is headed for the rocks. At breakfast Porter creates an ugly scene with Marianne, their little school-girl daughter. Angrily he storms out of the house. Beatrice determines that there shall be no divorce. She herself had been a child of divorce and bitterly remembers her misery. Their lives together, their home must, at all costs, be preserved for Marianne. At an Bee's acquaintances, Hilde, the beauty shop girl who does her hair, seems happy. She does not expect too much from life. She is content working to help her maladjusted war-vet husband and their infant son. Then there is Libby Lee's lifelong friend, a rich, handsome "gay" divorcee who has everything but love. Libby seems blind to the anguish caused Jane, her teen-age daughter, pathetically confused in their broken home.

CHAPTER FIVE

WHEN Bessie, the housekeeper, opened the door, Beatrice was admitted into a large and exotically decorated apartment. Here, too, Libby's taste for the eye-catching unusual was fully revealed. For there was about the apartment an opulence that was almost Oriental. Indeed, many of the things had come from one of Libby's trips to the Orient just before the outbreak of war. That the exquisitely carved and delicate pieces of furniture had been sparingly placed saved the more provincial callers from feeling that they were being smothered by magnificence. Here Libby lived fastidiously and luxuriously in a setting compatible with her almost Eastern darkness. Jane in dungarees, and Bessie with her soft southern accent, had often distressingly reminded Beatrice of transients.

"How nice to see you, Mrs. Farish," Bessie said. Bessie was stout and gray and sweet. She made Beatrice think of wisteria and Spanish moss. She had been with Libby since Jane's birth.

"Is Mrs. Gundria in?" Beatrice asked.

"Well, yes, but I'll have to see if she can see you now," Bessie told her doubtfully.

That meant that Libby had a caller. Beatrice wished she had not come. It would have been better if she had telephoned. But I didn't want to go home, she thought wretchedly. My home. Everything in it that I love and cherish, but I came here because I didn't want to go home.

When Bessie returned, Libby came with her.

"Why, Bee, darling, how nice!" I wonder, Beatrice thought. She saw that Libby was wearing a new black frock, and her diamond and ruby clips, and a single diamond bracelet—people had asked Beatrice if Libby wore her diamonds to bed. Her black hair with the severe center part was sleek, her slanted eyes merry, her deep crimson mouth smiling mischievously.

"I can't stay," Beatrice said. "I just wanted to ask if Jane . . ."

"Why can't you stay?" Libby demanded. "The part about Jane can wait. Come in. I want you to meet someone." She nodded, meaning: yes, it's a man and he's new and rather special.

"No," Beatrice said. "Not now, Libby. Really."

"You're bound to meet him sometime. He's going to be around for awhile. Come on." She wrinkled her nose. "He's okay."

When they went in together, a man arose from a chair.

Libby said, "David, I want you to meet someone you've never met before. A perfect wife. Mrs. Porter Farish. Beatrice, this is David Jordan."

Later when she had had time to think about it, Beatrice was sorry that Libby had introduced them thus. The part about the perfect wife spoiled their first meeting because she felt herself shrink inside as Porter moved vitally in her consciousness. She thought, Porter, why have we come to this terrible impasse when I love you?

"She blushes, too," David Jordan said.

"And so becomingly," Libby said, laughing. "I have to get mine from the sun lamp. Why are we all standing? Why don't we sit down? Is it too early for a cocktail?"

A cocktail, Beatrice thought. Why don't I leave Libby and this man alone? He is not an American. That accent, the words clipped short . . .

David Jordan turned to her. "Is it too early for you, Mrs. Farish?"

"No," she found herself saying. "No. I'd like a cocktail very much, Libby."

"Good," Libby said. "You know it's never too early for me, dear. If you'll excuse me . . . This is one thing I do better than Bessie. But you should try her mint juleps sometime."

When Libby left them, Beatrice looked at David Jordan. It was absurd, she thought, that she had to try to think of things to say to him as if she were a gauche school girl. Yet when had she been alone with a strange man who was not a business acquaintance of Porter's? She always had a modicum of information about those men. Porter said, "The chap who is coming to dinner didn't go to college. He's sensitive about it. He's married, has two children, drinks Bourbon and likes to putter about the house. You take it from there, Bee." Our dependence upon each other, she thought. Marriage. That's a part of marriage. Our dependence is so intertwined and I have been so completely married that I don't know what to say to this man about whom I know nothing. But how selfish of me to focus all my attention on myself.

He was smiling at her as if he knew and understood everything.

Beatrice asked, "Are you a newcomer to our town, or are you just passing through?"

"Both," he replied pleasantly. "I shall be here for the winter. When you come from as far as Johannesburg . . ."

She nodded. "South Africa. That explains the accent." She smiled. "South Africa always makes me think of diamonds as though there's nothing else there."

His eyes lighted slightly. "You're perfectly right. But while you think of the finished product you wear, the engineer thinks of getting them out of the mines."

Their laughter met and mingled and trailed off.

He was the kind of man, Beatrice thought, that you saw all of a piece. You saw a tall, loose-jointed man with fair sunburned hair, compassionate eyes brilliantly blue, a proud nose and a mouth that was gentle and ironical and wise. David Jordan, a man of rich experience who did not look out of place in Libby's luxuriant living room, but who belonged undeniably in fierce open air.

"I like your city," he said. "I've never been here before. I was in New York and Washington during the war on government business. I met Libby last week at one of those fabulous parties in Washington."

She smiled again. "I'm surprised you're not just passing through our city. When people have a choice, they usually prefer Washington or New York."

He looked at her steadily. "I made my choice for a permanent base today." Then he smiled. "Why am I here? Machinery wears out. You not only have gracious living here, but you also manufacture excellent machinery." He paused before he added, "And you and machinery are not as incompatible as you think."

And then Beatrice thought he said, "You are both a dream made real." She wasn't sure. She was never sure of what he said then, because Libby came in with cocktails on a silver tray, and the usually cool room became suddenly warm. The room that usually bespoke the leisureliness of antiquity suddenly became dynamic.

She did not linger after the first cocktail. She could not explain a sense of danger that made her want to hurry away. A sense of peril and, yes, a sense of accelerated living, too. And she knew that her feelings were pure upon her face.

She did not know if she said the right thing at all when she said, "I hope I shall see you again, Mr. Jordan." She, she thought, who had long since conquered the necessary small talk when meeting new people.

"You will," he said.

Libby said congenially, "David and I are having dinner at the club tomorrow evening, Beatrice. We'll see you then. Did you want Jane to sit with Marianne?"

Beatrice turned to David again. Bringing the children into it composed her.

"Libby's lovely daughter is the quintessence of all my own small daughter hopes to be when she is Jane's age."

Libby said, "You know how Jane adores spending the night with you, darling."

Libby went to the door with her and said in a low voice, "You see?"

"Yes."

"I wanted you to stay. Who knows? I might have been coy. Imagine me coy. Thanks for stopping in." Libby's jeweled hand was cold on hers.

Outside the sun was shining. Marianne would be home from school now, and in two hours Porter would be putting his car in the garage. It should all have been familiar—the apartment house, her waiting car, the prospect of playing with Marianne and a long evening with Porter. But somehow it wasn't. She felt that she was seeing everything new and different.

I REMEMBER...

By THE OLD-TIMERS

Jesse Ernest Kartje: "I remember the good times we youngsters used to have dancing the waltz, the two-step, the schottisch and the quadrille in the days before the fox-trot and jitterbugging."

From Robert H. Sedgwick: "I remember the tall-stemmed flowers that used to grow so abundantly in the prairies near our town before it grew up to be a big city. They were called Blue Bills or Shooting Stars. Whatever became of this species?"

From Henry M. Weeks: "I remember when kids from miles around would come into town on Sunday afternoon to see the old silent westerns, with Bill Hart, Francis X. Bushman and a guy called Billy who played either a sheriff or a bandit. Then there were such stars as Tommy Meighan, Ben Turpin, Charles Chaplin, the Gish sisters and Pearl White in the serials, 'The Perils of Pauline,' in which each episode always would end at the crucial moment and we had to wait a whole week to find out what would happen next. If you came in late you would receive a late check which was collected between performances and if we did not have a late check we would hide under the seats until the man was past us. After the show we went to an ice cream parlor nearby and bought a paper cone full of ice shaving saturated with some kind of sweet fruit syrup."

From Anne: "I remember when old-time photographers held your head steady with a vise when they took a tintype photograph."

Words of the Wise

Every man has three characters—that which he exhibits, that which he has, and that which he thinks he has.—(Alphonse Karr)

The ballads of the 15th and 16th centuries were responsible for the first great popularity of Robin Hood.

Americans Now Face Task Of Learning How To Live

By O. H. Craft

If we have lived to learn anything, I think we are going to reverse that process in some degree and learn how to live. I said to a friend a few days ago that it seemed to me that we were living too fast, that our pace was exacting too much, and that I thought we should try to find a more enduring existence. He flared up and said, "Do you want us to become soft like the French?"

He failed to see, as so many do, the waste, the wear and tear and the futility of our mania for keeping up with the Joneses. Instead of becoming hard in our striving, we become soft in our luxury.

Russia has no illusions about beating us on the field of battle, at least not in the foreseeable future, but they do know our weakness and have some logical ambitions about cornering the economic resources of the world. Russia mines gold with slave labor and at little cost, trades it to us for irreplacable resources, and we put the gold in a hole in the ground. If we could take that gold and repurchase as we need, we might make some profit in the transaction, but there could come the time when we could not replace these valuable commodities at any price. It is my humble opinion that Russia has some ideas of our over-extending ourselves to the point of an economic collapse and then we should find ourselves in real danger of being taken over. As a possible means to that quick end, this scheme of our financing a collectivist country is not being participated in by Russia.

Americans Are Wasteful

Individually and collectively, we are and have been wasteful in the extreme. We like to show off when we go into a public dining room. In our eating habits, or in general, we gorge or mess up and throw aside for the garbage can, ⅓ as much as we eat. What we thoughtlessly waste in food alone would feed millions of people better than they are being fed today. But are we willing to make an effort to see it? What is true of our food habits is true of our habits of dress; in whatever we do it seems to run to excess. Even our freedom of speech and press can become boresome because it is hashed over so relentlessly throughout the day and night. We hear the same news items many times a day. It's all added to the cost.

Our process of thinking seems to be geared in reverse form. Instead of producing first and keeping within our means, we first go about to get what we want and then proceed to cover up in backward fashion. This kind of stepping out may have been responsible for producing a lot of new things, that were born of necessity. Even so, we are not unlike an army that has overrun its objectives, our gains need to be consolidated, appraised and utilized. I think that to know more about what we already possess, is more vital and important than exploring the moon.

Flirt With Economy

There is much evidence to indicate that there are now a great many who are becoming economy minded, partly in the thought of saner living and partly in the thought that prices are too high. This might very well become a movement of such severity that it would border on the stingy side. This doesn't mean that we have over-produced; neither does it mean that devices of convenience will not be used; it may very well mean, however, that a great many people are in the throes of creating a new frontier of personal management. If it does mean this, business will adjust itself to this altered economy and our final recovery when it comes will be based on and built around this changed philosophy of living. Forced expansion, planning it that way from the top, borrowing to spend, taxing to spend, hasn't produced anything worth emulating.

Government could be run on a "pay as you go" basis. Politicians, and would-be politicians had better get out the goggles and penells. They are going to be elected to demonstrate that government can amply serve its people, in fact much better (if perhaps more simply) than they are now being served, for very much less cost.

Must Seek Solid Ground

To learn to get more out of less isn't actually going to harm anyone, but it might be inconvenient to a few people. Once we have found new solid ground, in finding better use of the things we possess, we will be healthier, saner and we certainly will postpone the day of our decline as a nation. We are our own worst enemies.

If what we waste and throw away half-used could be converted to the job of slum clearance and decent low cost houses for that portion of our population which cannot afford high-priced homes, in 20 years there would be no slums in America and everybody would have a decent place to live. We could then resurge as a nation reborn. We are capable of supporting twice our present population but we must have a better understanding of our resources.

Catch 'Em, Keep 'Em, Is Motto Of Ohio Fishermen, Survey Shows

According to a recent opinion survey among the fishermen of Ohio published in the Ohio Conservation Bulletin, fishermen like to keep every fish they catch regardless of size.

The survey was made to find out if the fishing public is in accord with the liberalized fishing experiment adopted by the Ohio Conservation Commission in 1948 which this year includes 26 lakes and one stream, where there are no restrictions of closed seasons, bag limits and minimum legal lengths.

The purpose of the experiment is to determine whether or not fishermen can enjoy more fishing freedom without harm to the fish population and also to find out if the heavy population of undersized fish indicated by test-netting operations can be reduced by more liberal fishing regulations.

The experiment thus far shows no harmful results and the opinions expressed generally by the fishing public are that "it's a good morale builder for the fisherman."

Ohio streams present an entirely different problem in fish management and therefore it is not expected that streams generally will ever be included under the liberalized regulation. However, Shade River and all tributaries in Athens and Meigs Counties are included at the present time for study purposes.

On all liberalized waters of the state, fish management men of the division of conservation maintain creel census operations in order to record the progress of the experiment.

Starling News

Starling Junior High's baseball team turned back Indianola 4 to 0 in a junior high game played Wednesday at the West Side A.C. field.

Bill Hawthorne on the mound for the West Siders pitched a no-hitter, fanning 11 Indians and walking four. He was accorded brilliant support by his teammates and the fielders had a rest as no balls were hit out of the infield.

Earl Spriggs hit two doubles and a triple in three trips to the plate and Bob Reed hit a home-run with none on.

This is Starling's second win in two starts having disposed of McKinley in the opener, 5 to 1.

It's Clean-Up Paint-Up Time

Next week has been officially proclaimed as "Clean-Up, Paint-Up, Fix-Up Week".

A lot of people have already jumped the gun and have a lot of the aforementioned accomplished already. And yet there are a lot of us who are like little boys who hate to have their ears washed—we put it off as long as possible.

In any event . . . it is a good suggestion . . . to do something about painting, cleaning and fixing. In weather like this it is fun—and there is always a lot of satisfaction after the job is done.

Flowers of The Week

A Rosebud Floral bouquet to Royal Millikin of Fox Food Shop for his 35 years service as a groceryman on the Hilltop and in one location. He is perhaps the community's oldest merchant in years of service. In this period he has seen the Hilltop grow and his acquaintances are widespread. We wish him well for another long period of service.

Hilltop Y Workshop Is Inviting Place

By the time he is ten or twelve years old every healthy boy wants a workshop. Wise parents go as far as possible in gratifying these natural desires but the high cost of much equipment makes such a program prohibitive in many instances.

The addition of a new workshop for youngsters at the Hilltop YMCA is a welcome addition to the local program and one that should be well patronized. Youngsters of the community should contact the Y to determine when they can have an opportunity to work in it.

Maybe one reason why men don't become too enthused over the wife's new clothes is that such approval might be her sign that he approves the price tag too.

Notes and Nubbins: This department would like to know the whereabouts of someone who will shear sheep . . . No foolin', we aren't trying to pull the wool over anybody's eyes . . . Mrs. Iva M. Marsh has been on the ill list for the past five weeks . . . We never thought we would see that day, but we did, when Bob Postle would give a $5 bill for his Kiwanis lunch and walk off and leave $4 change, but then he is a little nervous as wedding plans are progressing . . . Myron Rodabaugh was a busy character one day last week as he chased half dollars all over the Ohio National floor when he dropped a pack of 'em . . . We know a gal who claims her head is in a whirl since she started using the new beer shampoo.

An ad in the classified section of The Greenfield Daily Times reads:

We suggest this as good copy for the Hilltop Sporting Goods Store now that they are handling live bait.

One of the reasons more young men don't take a better half is because they can't find better quarters.

Workers To Plan Member Drive for Y

A meeting of voluntary workers for the Hilltop YMCA will be held at 7:30 p. m. next Tuesday at the Y to discuss plans for the membership campaign which is scheduled for the early part of May.

The membership fees paid by Hilltop residents bridge the vital gap between the annual $7500 furnished the Hilltop Y by the Community Chest and the actual expenses of operating the community institution.

Participating memberships will be sold this year, as last year, for $1. A contribution of $5 will entitle the donor to a voting membership in the Y and any money paid by an individual in excess of $5 will be placed in the organization's building fund.

The Hilltop Y is now occupying the old Weber home at 2585 W. Broad-st. The organization hopes to acquire its own home of a more modern nature within the relatively near future. Mose M. Williams, 2581 Steele-av, is chairman of the building fund committee.

The forthcoming drive for 1949 memberships will be headed by Jerry Spears, 2693 W. Broad-st.

During the 1948 drive, more than 3000 memberships were sold in the Hilltop area. The 1949 drive must exceed that number, according to Y Secretary Averille Thorn, to maintain the organization's services to the youth of the community.

Guess Who

GIVE UP? Well, this is a photo of Roy Millikin, veteran grocer at the Fox Food Shop, taken when he was a young blade. Mr. Millikin guesses he was 17 or 18 at the time.

Fox Food Shop Honors Roy Millikin

The Fox Food Shop, 2422 W. Broad-st, is honoring one of the veteran members of its staff this week-end with "Roy Millikin Days," Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Millikin has been with the establishment for the last 35 years continuously and through several ownerships, including those of relatives. When Harold Fox acquired the business 12 years ago, he also acquired the services of Mr. Millikin, who already had been serving Hilltop grocery customers for 23 years.

Mr. Millikin, who lives at 77 Eldon-av, invites his friends and customers of many years' standing to visit him at the store during the "Roy Millikin Days." Cake and coffee will be served to visitors Friday and Saturday and every visitor during the three days will have an opportunity to take home on of the 12 baskets of food to be presented during the celebration.

Mr. Millikin was born in Franklin County about six miles from Plain City and came to Columbus 35 years ago from Plain City. His wife died some years ago, but he has two daughters, Mrs. Alta Moulton, who is living in California, and Mrs. Helen Miller, who resides with her father at the Eldon-av address.

Dedication Of Boys' Club Set Sunday

The Columbus Boys' Club in the old West Market House at State and Gift-sts was nearing completion rapidly today, although it appeared probable that some work would still remain to be done after its dedication Sunday.

The clubhouse will be dedicated by a former member of the Cleveland Boys' Club, Film and Radio Star Bob Hope. The ceremony is scheduled for 6 p. m. Immediately afterward, the doors of the club will be thrown open to the public. The interior of the old market house has been remodeled considerably and this is the present layout:

The first floor will be the gymnasium, which will have courts for various games in addition to a standard-sized boxing ring. Dressing rooms, a 10-table crafts shop for hobby work; two clubrooms; wash rooms; a check room, and executive offices also will be on the first floor.

The second floor will consist of a large games room which will include four ping-pong tables, four pocliette tables, carom, checkers and chess tables, wash rooms, a large library, and a completely equipped stage.

On the large lot surrounding the building a softball diamond is being built, as well as an outdoor basketball court.

Dedication ceremonies will start Saturday night with a prededicatory banquet in the Hall of Mirrors in the Deshler-Wallick at 6:30 p. m.

David W. Armstrong, New York City, executive director of Boys' Clubs of America, will be the principal speaker, and George M. Trautman, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, will be master of ceremonies.

Hilltop Lassies Hit Big Time In Show Business

By Doris McGill

Two Hilltop girls, who confess they never took a lesson in their lives, are making show business history, the one in Venezuela with the Water Follies revue and the other in New York's swanky Copacabana Club.

The two entertainers, Dorothy Roederer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Roederer, 452 Belvidere-av, and Betty Lou Schwartz, formerly of 48 Central-av, practically grew up together on the Hilltop. They both attended the West Broad Street Presbyterian Church and sang in the choir.

After graduation from Central High School, Betty skyrocketed to success, Dorothy's climb was a little slower, but before the age of 21 (her birthday is today) she has gained the top high-board diving spot with the Water Follies revue.

May Be Back Together

After several years apart the two girls may be back together in June, when the Water Follies begins its European tour. Betty has received a bid to join the company. Her success already is assured. She won't swim, but she'll model (of all things) bathing suits.

Some show people enjoy telling others how hard it is to get into the racket. Betty, who is also a good singer, frankly admits she never took a lesson in her life. After her graduation, she jumped into the big time almost immediately.

An agent spotted her in a Midwest night club and signed her for an eight-month tour of Europe. When she came back she got a job in California and was runnerup in a "Miss California" contest. Later she won a "Miss Photogenic" contest and a $500 drama school scholarship contest. She appeared in a couple of B movies, one of them "Jungle Flight", before she snagged the Latin Quarter job in New York.

Dorothy was a different story. After her graduation from West High School, she attended Ohio State University and joined the Swan Club, women's social and swimming club. Here and at the Hilltop Swimming Pool, she picked up a few pointers from her friends and attendants at the pool.

Meets OSU Stars

She left for Florida the winter of 1947 to work in a hotel in Miami Beach, where she met several Ohio State swimming stars who were training for the 1948 Olympic tryouts in Detroit. Bruce Harlan and Miller Anderson were included in the party.

Dorothy still had swimming on her mind, but she returned to OSU for a couple of quarters and finally in July, 1948, she left for Detroit to try out for the Olympics with other top-ranking swimming stars in the nation.

Dorothy didn't show brilliantly, but she did place sixth in the women's high board events.

Leaving Detroit, she and Betty had their first reunion since high school days. Betty was going great guns in New York and Dottie left to return to Ohio State in the fall.

When the Water Follies came to Columbus the latter part of 1948, Dorothy had a long visit with some of her Miami friends. She talked to the manager of the show about a job. He promised to keep her in mind.

Whirlwind Career

She didn't give up and sure enough last February she received a telegram giving her three days to meet the show in Miami.

She hopped a plane and with a few weeks training started a career that's left her breathless.

A letter received Tuesday by her family shows a sample day in their daughter's busy career.

"The show opened in Carracas, Venezuela, Apr. 22 and I've hardly had a second to spare. We do four shows a week and get a full week's pay. Not bad! But our rehearsals make up for it. Every day we are at the pool at 8 a. m. and swim until 11. Then without lunch we go directly to the stage and dance until 1:30 p. m. Usually we take a break and resume again at 5 p. m. It's amazing how much can be crowded into one day. In my rest periods I try to practice diving."

Dorothy got a big kick out of a full length cut of her in the local Venezuelan paper, which was captioned: "She Stops Traffic."

Rumors have it that a local Columbus organization may sponsor the Water Follies show some time in June. If so Dorothy and Betty may at long last have a reunion in their old home town.

Council Setting Up Organization To Draw 'Hilltop Plan'

The Hilltop Community Council is moving rapidly this week toward the establishment of an organization which will chart the community's future in an over-all "Hilltop Plan."

This plan will be drawn in response to an invitation by Mayor James A. Rhodes to present the community's desires and aspirations in a single "package" to the city administration.

Russell Carter, president of the Community Council, now is considering the personnel of the special "Hilltop Plan" committee which will draft the document after receiving the ideas and suggestions of both individuals and organizations in the community.

To Complete Committee

Mr. Carter expects to have the committee, probably numbering four, completed early next week, he said today.

His principal interest at the moment, however, is to emphasize to all organizations comprising the Community Council that the development of the "Hilltop Plan" constitutes one of the most important items of business the council ever has considered and that it is vital that all organizations make sure they are represented in the deliberations which will be necessary before the plan is transmitted to the city administration.

"We of the Hilltop Community Council cannot present any plan to the city as representatives of the community's desires unless we can feel honestly that the proposals contained in it come from a cross-section of the community itself," Mr. Carter pointed out.

Next Meeting May 12

The next meeting of the Community Council will be held May 12. The meeting, Mr. Carter said, will be devoted almost exclusively to consideration of suggestions to be incorporated in the plan.

He suggested that organizations meeting within the next two weeks devote their time and discussion to possible suggestions for proposals to be incorporated in the plan in order that there will be a number of concrete ideas ready for study at the May 12 meeting of Community Council.

Mr. Carter again pointed out that every suggestion which is made cannot possibly be included in the final draft, but he promised that every proposal will receive serious and thoughtful consideration to the end that the plan finally submitted to the city will be one to which every Hilltop resident can give his ardent support.

Strategy of Housecleaning? Mum's the Word, Men!

by russ lang

Strategy is the grand policy itself and tactics are the execution of its component parts. Perfect strategy in the planning of your spring housecleaning will make its tactics "work" to you 50 per cent easier.

On the off chance that there are other males who haven't learned to keep closed the mouth at housecleaning time we submit this report.

The other evening our bride gave the ceiling the searching look common to all her sisters, and, after heaving a sigh from the floor, said, "How in the world am I ever going to get this house cleaned?"

Whereupon we observed brightly:

"Well, smart planning in advance will save half the work."

We were rewarded with a cold, withering, incredulous, "Who says?"

It took Dr. Elaine Knowles Weaver of the department of home economics at Ohio State University to get us off the hook. Perhaps her suggestions for good generalship will aid others similarly impaled.

A step-by-step work schedule even in ultra modern homes will make the vernal chore less burdensome. It will cut working time and accomplish the task without the expenditure of all your energy, according to this charming lady.

The following are Dr. Weaver's principal suggestions:

A. Have all your equipment at hand so you will not have to go barking off to the store every little while.

B. Avoid the hot weather by starting early.

C. Have any necessary repairs made before you begin your job.

D. Completely finish cleaning one room at a time.

E. Remove everything from the room while doing your stuff.

F. Clean the cellar first. Then work from the top down—removing junk as you descend.

G. Dust ceilings, walls and floors before washing.

H. Have your slip covers ready to use immediately to prevent a second dusting later.

There is only one weak spot as far as this male can see. Dr. Weaver has no qualms about the department cleaning the cellar twice.

Kiwanikwe Members Have Hat-Trimming Contest As Part Of Program Tuesday

"How to Make Milady's Bonnet Beautiful" was the theme of the unique program held by members of the Kiwanikwe Club Tuesday night at Schaefer's Restaurant.

Each member attending was given an untrimmed hat at the start of the contest. The members selected their own trimmings from a variety of adornments. Winners were chosen on the basis of the prettiest, the most unusual and the most amusing hats.

The hat trimmed by Mrs. W. Slyh was chosen as the prettiest. The attractive one worn by Mrs. Shroyer, fashioned from cabbage leaves, was judged the most unusual, and those modeled by Mrs. F. Sparks and Mrs. J. Miles were chosen as the most amusing.

Highlight of the program were the hats modeled by Mrs. Norma Edburg, Mrs. Arthur Wallerman offered the commentary.

Vocal numbers were rendered by the Beauty Shop Quartet, which includes Mrs. Gail Marsch, Mrs. Rosalee Ages, Mrs. Martha Hegenberger and Mrs. Dorothy Hartley.

As a part of the evening's program Mrs. Gail Marsch presented an historical scrapbook made by her father, C. E. Marlow, to the club for preservation of club news and events.

Hostesses at the meeting were Bertha Galloway, Mary Kent, Billie Warden and Mary Ness.

Sunday, May 1, members of the Kiwanikwe Club will meet with their husbands to attend the Hope Memorial Church in a group.

Rope Twirlers Real Cowgirls For West Band's Show

By Myron T. Seifert

You'll look a long while in the amusement world before you'll find a more fascinating, interesting and talented group of performers than the 11 adept rope twirlers from West High School, who provide a wide repertoire of tricks, as a part of their show, before thousands of spectators.

You saw them in action at the nocturnal football contests on Magly Field at half-time last fall, since which time there has been no let-up either in their training program nor their many exhibitions.

During their "free" periods in school this semester, you may see any of them throwing their lariats in the corridor of the Hilltop school, near room 214, where Advisor E. T. Stone, holds his chemistry classes. This enables the student-ropers to keep as fit as a fiddle in perfecting their many feats.

Last week Eastern Star and DAR organizations invited the 11 to present their show.

Let's look a little closer at the ropesters:

Twelve-year-old Patricia Miesse, 622 Racine-av, has been at the sport about a year.

"I saw the girls practicing in the halls, and I decided then and there that I would like to be a rope-twirler," Patricia said.

Planning to become a nurse, someday, Patricia believes rope-twirling a healthful exercise and profitable diversion.

Donna Fledderjohann, 194 Midland-av, was prompted to engage in the fun, and took up the training as an experiment "to see if I could manipulate and coordinate my fingers, arm and the rope."

Interesting her friend, Thelma Lou Mugrage, 112 Demorest, in the venture, the two now have a mutual interest. They both talk, sleep and eat ropes—almost that is.

Thlema is also a horse-fancier, and interested in horseback riding.

Shirley Ann Scherie, 2251 Sullivant-av, is comparatively new at the art, and can now throw the rope like a genuine cow-girl.

Seeing the performances on the football field last fall interested Shirley in the acts. Shirley has hopes of being a Jane Arden some day.

Roland Sunker, Occident photographer, and veteran rope-handler, 432 Townsend-av, delights in spinning the hemp. He is a necessary cog in the syncronization of group exhibitions.

The Gordon trio "takes the cake." By virtue of their excellent performances and numbers, they predominate the situation. The Gordons come from the same household, 156 S. Richardson-av, where roping is a "natural".

The triumverate consists of Barbara, 15; Carolyn 13; and Margaret Ann, 12 years old.

The Gordon's neighbor, Mary Ann Amos, 13, 155 S. Richardson-av, likewise got the fever, and by now, has mastered the fundamentals.

Newcomer to the group is Shirley Ann Harrison, 13, 246 Whitethorne-av, who has been tossing the lariat for the past three months.

Ropester Patty Miesse induced Shirley to join the band of rope magicians.

Big Jim Harter, Rome, was "drafted" to display his many techniques in rope-throwing—and he does a superb job.

West To Replay 7-7 Tie At Aquinas This Afternoon

By Dave Miller

West's baseballers and Aquinas High School played o at draw, 7 to 7 on the Aquinas field last Tuesday afternoon in a game called at the end of the eighth inning because of rain and darkness. The replay will be this Thursday afternoon.

It was a very sloppily played ball game by both teams, with each nine getting seven runs on just six hits, and each used three pitchers, none but the final two, Phil Young of the Cowboys and Jim Entz of the Terriers, looking good. However, it was doubtful at this writing that Entz would start in the replay game because this same Terrier nine must play South Friday afternoon.

West, luckily, draws the league bye, and can use Phil Young. The latter has pitched 30 innings, won three games and lost one, and struck out 38. He has pitched in all of West's six games this year at least one inning.

Right-hander Jim Hamrick started on the hill for the Cowboys, and looked great in the first inning by striking out the side of Don O'Brien, Jim Swepston and Ralph Stapleton. The Cowboys had scored one tally in their half of the first when Jack Pickens beat out an infield grounder and Tommy Wright walked. Both runners moved up a base when Pitcher Dick Lee attempted to get Pickens at second, but threw the ball into centerfield.

Dick Kirk, West's slugging outfielder, sent a long fly ball to deep center, of which Don O'Brien made a nice catch, and Pickens scored after the catch, plating the first run of the ball game.

Aquinas started to get to Hamrick in the second inning when "Ozark" Kearns, Terrier clean-up hitter, slammed Hamrick's first pitch for a single, and Don Outland, Aquinas second-sacker, hit back to Pitcher Hamrick, who threw to second in an effort to get Kearns. He was safe, but Pickens, who had received the throw at second, tossed to First Baseman Dick Culbertson in time to get the hitter for one out. Dick Ort flied out for Aquinas' second out, but Hamrick walked Jim Hord, and Bob Casparro hit an easy fly ball to left field that Morris Dobbs was under for an easy out. He dropped it, however, and Kearns scored, but Dobbs quickly threw to second in time to get Casparro coming in and the game was tied up, 1-1.

In the third frame, with one out, Dick Kirk laid into one of Lee's fast balls and smacked into Mt. Vernon Ave. for a four-baser, putting the Cowboys back into the lead. However, the Irish weren't to be denied as they came back into their bat and tallied three markers. O'Brien singled, stole second and was sacrificed to third by Swepston. On a wild pitch, O'Brien scored to tie the count at 2-all. Stapleton was hit by a pitched ball, but Kearns laid one out over the fence and it put Aquinas back ahead, 4-2, going into the top half of the fourth inning.

To lead off, Jack Winnestaffer was hit by a pitched ball, and advanced to second on Lee's balk. When Don Nafzger hit a blooper over third base for a single, Mike Zack replaced Lee on the hill for the Terriers. He walked Relief Pitcher Paul Ellingsworth to load the bases, and forced in Winnestaffer when he walked Pickens. Dick Culbertson then singled to center field to plate two more runs and Cowboys were ahead, 5-4. Dick Kirk walked to load the bases, but Morris Dobbs made up for his error in the field by singling home two more runs. Jim Entz then replaced Zack on the hillock and he struck out Dave Caton, walked Winnestaffer, but forced Don Nafzger to fly out.

The Cowboys led, 7-4, and Paul Ellingsworth set the Terriers down in order in the fourth inning, but the Mt. Vernon Ave. nine got to him in the fifth when O'Brien singled, advanced on a wild pitch, moved to third on Swepston's single, and a run came in on two straight walks to Kearns and Outland. Phil Young then replaced "Ellie" on the hill and Jim Ort hit his first pitch to right for a single to tie the ball game at 7-all. And that's the way it stayed.

After that, Young and Entz engaged in a pitching duel, with only one man reaching base against Young, that on an error. Five men reached base against Entz.

The line score:

West	101 500 00—7	8	2
Aquinas	013 030 00—7	5	3

Hamrick, Ellingsworth (3), Young (5) and Nafzger; Lee, Zack (4), Entz (4) and Stapleton.

Glenwood In Rehearsal For Political Play

The Glenwood Players Guild will present the play "The Closed Door" by Joseph Carlton on Friday, May 6 at 8 p. m. The play is being sponsored by the Woman's Society of Christian Service.

It is a story of Grandma Emerson (a perennially young woman of 70). Her son, John is governor but everyone knows that Grandma is the power behind the throne. Grandma suspects that her son is under the domination of Andrew Moore, a man she distrusts but she can't change John's loyalty to his friend. John's son, Martin, wants to buy "The Clarion", a small, but powerful newspaper, but John fights Martins plans. Grandma, unknown to anyone, quietly buys the paper for Martin and then dies. Things are in a pretty mess. But Grandma, even though she has passed on settles things by returning to steer the family through the trying times ahead of it.

Mrs. Merle Earle will play the part of Grandma and Howard Moon, the governor. Others in the cast are Marie Gildersleeve, Emerson Harlow, Betty Moon, Ethel Galloway, Ann Remington, Marion Bohanan and Tom Bohanan.

2 Anniversaries Being Marked By Manon Shop

The Manon Beauty and Gift Shop, 2488 Sullivant-av, will celebrate its 18th anniversary on the Hilltop the beginning of next month. It also will be the shop's first anniversary as a gift shop.

Mrs. Emma Crawford is owner of the shop, which has been at its present location for more than 10 years.

As a specialty for Mother's Day and as a birthday celebration for the shop, Mrs. Crawford will offer special prices for many of her gift items. The gift shop handles various lines of art work, figurines, needlework, costume jewelry and hand-painted dishes and glasses.

One of the Manon Beauty Shop operators, Verna Trisler, has been associated with Mrs. Crawford for 11 years. The other operator, Jane Agriesti, has been an employe for more than a year. The two operators specialize in hair styling, waving and permanent waving.

In the footprints on the sands of time some people leave only the marks of a heel.

Hilltop Women Will Direct Religious Clinic

New developments in Religious Education, especially the use of Visual Aids in teaching Church School classes, will be the topic for the Religious Education Clinic at Oakwood Methodist Church on Friday evening, May 6.

At 7 p. m. an exhibit of books, helps and visual aids will be open, and from 7:30 to 8 p. m. refreshments will be served by a group from Oakwood Methodist Church. Every church school worker is invited to come in time to examine the exhibits, and to enjoy the social half hour.

Worship service will be led by young people of the Oakwood Methodist Church. A demonstration lesson will be taught by means of film strips, followed by discussion groups in the various departments of the church school.

The department chairmen of the Religious Education Clinic are: nursery and kindergarten, Katherine Swanson; primary, Glenna Oesterle, 1911 Crescent-dr; junior, Harriet Faust; intermediate, Mrs. George D. Sriner; senior high, Mrs. Dennen Leach, 107 S. Terrace-av, and Mrs. Phyllis Wacker; adult, Mrs. Esther W. Tyree, 192 S. Wheatland-av; administration, Robert M. Tyler. The general chairman is Arthur G. Skeeles.

Given a government with a big surplus, and a big majority and a weak opposition, you would debauch a committee of archangels.

1-2-3 Desserts

By BETTY BARCLAY

Most families like dessert every day—and that adds up to 365 days a year! What a lot of desserts for the poor homemaker who likes to be original and not stick to one pattern!

Here's a way to make your variation easier: have you ever thought of dividing your dessert file into different classifications? For instance, an elaborate dessert for special occasions; a simple dessert to be enjoyed at any hour of the day; and then, quite possibly, a dessert that even the children can make, thereby serving as entertainment too.

The Jellied Plum Pudding recipe below is definitely of the party variety for it's gay and colorful and serves 12 with ease. The Salted Peanut Cookies are excellent served either along at meals or between-times, or as a fancy dessert with fruit or ice cream. And for solving that double problem of keeping the children entertained [illegible] at the same time, concocting the dinner sweet, nothing could be easier than Chocolate Toasties Clusters. There's only one danger—that there won't be enough left for dinner!

Jellied Plum Pudding

2 packages cherry-flavored gelatin
4 cups hot water
Dash of salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 cup finely cut raisins
1 cup finely cut cooked prunes
½ cup finely cut citron
1 cup finely cut nut meats
1 cup Grape-Nuts

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Cool. Pour 1 cup into mold or mixing bowl and chill until set.

Chill remaining gelatin until slightly thickened. Then add salt, spices, fruits, nuts, and Grape-Nuts. Turn out over firm gelatin in mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve with sweetened whipped cream. Makes 12 to 14 servings.

Salted Peanut Cookies

1½ cups plus 2 tablespoons sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1¼ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
1 egg, unbeaten
¼ [illegible] milk
1½ cups raisin bran
½ cup chopped salted peanuts

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda, and salt, and sift again. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour, alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Add bran and peanuts and blend. Drop from teaspoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 8 minutes, or until done. Makes about 4 dozen cookies.

Chocolate Toasties Clusters

½ package chocolate chips
½ cup corn flakes

Heat chocolate over boiling water until partly melted; then remove from boiling water and stir until blended. Add corn flakes and mix well. Drop from teaspoon on waxed paper. Cool until firm. Makes 12 clusters.

Kiwanis Hails U. S.-Canada Good Will

Leaders of the United States and Canada today cited the relationship that prevails between the two countries as an outstanding example of international good will.

President Truman and Prime Minister St. Laurent of Canada, in statements issued in connection with United States-Canada Good Will Week, declared that friendship north and south of the border constitutes the basis for world peace.

Sponsored by Kiwanis International, United States-Canada Good Will Week began Sunday. More than 2,900 clubs and 200,000 Kiwanians are expected to participate in the annual observance.

President Truman said "the spirit of friendship and cooperation which has characterized the relationship represents a unique achievement in the annals of nations.

"The peoples and governments of the United States and Canada," he continued, "provide the world with a striking demonstration of the ability of democratic, freedom-loving nations to live, to work, and to progress together towards lasting peace and prosperity."

Prime Minister St. Laurent, referring to "these troubled days," said the "cordial relations between our two countries are a pattern of international conduct which peace-loving men would like to see emulated everywhere."

Canada's chief executive also described the friendship as a "bulwark against aggressive forces which threaten democracy throughout the world."

MARCH OF EVENTS

Scott Trying to Merge Opposing GOP Factions | Giant Carrier to Cost Additional 65 Millions?

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Eighteen months before the 1950 congressional elections the Republican party is shaking off the dust of its 1948 defeat and is seeking to acquire control in Washington by emerging three political roads.

The bid for power first will come in the 1950 campaign. It then will expand for two years aiming at the 1952 presidential campaign. GOP National Chairman Hugh Scott, Jr., already is planning campaigns and setting strategy lines. Scott is trying to merge the three factions of the GOP, and much of the party's future depends on his success. The three groups are:

Hugh Scott, Jr.

1—The GOP "right wing," led by Republican Senate policy maker Robert A. Taft. The strength of this group will be determined to a great extent by the 1950 elections.

2—The GOP "center," led by defeated GOP presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey.

3—The GOP "left." This group already is backing Harold E. Stassen as "the man" to nominate in 1952. GOP failure in the 1950 elections would boost Stassen's stock.

• • • • •

● AIR FORCE-NAVY BATTLE—The bitter battle between America's two air arms will burst out again soon, and in new fury.

Look for the Air Force to renew its campaign against the Navy's super-aircraft carrier. The new blasts will be based on disclosure that the price of the 65,000-ton flattop has gone up 65 million dollars.

Air Force advocates will declaim that if the big carrier was a terrible risk at 124 million dollars in view of its vulnerability, it is ridiculous to sink 65 additional millions.

The sky jailors will counter with charges that intimacy between the White House and a prominent airplane builder is causing the Air Force to load up with B-36 bombers.

Naval aviators have claimed right along that the big six-engined B-36 would be a sitting-duck for enemy flyers.

● "HIDDEN JOKER"—Industry is up in arms over what it calls a "hidden joker" in the Spence bill which contains President Truman's recommendations for standby price controls, allocation power and authority to expand industrial plants.

In general, the bill proposes a broad program under which the federal government would assume responsibility for maintaining maximum production.

The National Association of Manufacturers claims, however, that the measure also contains the national production council program advanced by the CIO some five years ago.

Under this program, councils composed of management, labor and government representatives would be set up for each industry to determine how much the industry should produce and how much employment should be provided.

Industry officials long have attacked the CIO proposal as socialistic.

● MONEY SQUEEZE—Even though 50 senators, an absolute majority, signed a letter favoring a big program of aid for China, they appear to have almost no chance of getting even a small program for the Chinese Nationalists.

There is no lack of sentiment for opposing the Chinese Communists, but other and more pressing demands are on the verge of throwing the budget out of balance and Chinese aid can't be squeezed in.

The House has just added nearly a billion dollars for home military purposes; the arm-Europe plan is moving forward into uncharted costs; and veterans' pensions and social security expansion must be reckoned with.

A Deficit of 600 Million Now Feared

Nowhere are substantial cuts being made, and there is no indication that this Congress will vote more taxes.

So the prospect is for a 600 million dollar federal deficit at the end of this fiscal year, and a whopping deficit in 1950 if present trends continue.

Dedicate Lane Theater To C. A. MacDonald May 3

Many prominent Columbus residents have received invitations for the formal dedication of the Lane Theatre to the memory of Clarence A. MacDonald, on Tuesday, May 3.

The date is the anniversary of Mr. MacDonald's birth. A legendary figure in Ohio State University sportlore, Mr. MacDonald died in 1940 at the age of 43.

In addition to being one of Ohio State's most outstanding athletes, Mr. MacDonald also is regarded as the father of neighborhood theaters in the Columbus area.

The present Academy Theatre chain was founded by him. The owners of the Academy circuit acquired the MacDonald theatres after his death and founded the present Academy Theatres, 10 neighborhood playhouses located throughout Columbus and suburban areas.

Mr. MacDonald was one of two men ever to captain two major sports teams at Ohio State University. He was captain of the basketball varsity squad for the 1918-1919 season and captain of the varsity football team in 1918.

An oil painting of Mr. MacDonald will be unveiled on the Lane Theatre stage at the formal dedication ceremonies.

Those taking part in the ceremony will include Dr. James R. Hull, presiding; Dr. John W. Wilce, former OSU football coach; Mayor Otis Skinner of Upper Arlington; Herbert Horn, president of the Upper Arlington Civic Association; Leo Yassenhoff, representing the owners of the Academy Theatres; Mrs. Clarence MacDonald and Dean MacDonald, son of the late sports and theatre figure.

The memorial service will begin at 7 p. m. The Lane Theatre is located in the vast new Lane Shopping Center, at 1681 W. Lane-av.

A Bureaucrat for a Doctor?

When "Big Government," in its greed for power, extends its grasping hand toward an institution which has led the world in its crusade for health and has carved out a record of independent humanitarianism unparalleled in our time, the hour has come for the American people to rise up and silence the schemers with one mighty chorus of "noes."

The planners in Washington want to win control of the medical profession, one of the few large groups which still is not in hock to the government through one or another devious device. And what is the sales talk the planners are giving the country? They say that the people cannot afford medical care; that therefore the people should be taxed, before they get their pay checks, so that their medical care may be assured through government checks.

It would be about as sensible to say that, since everyone cannot afford a television set, everyone should be taxed so the government can furnish television sets to all.

The problem of medical economics has been well handled by the medical profession and the handling is improving year by year. Medical and hospitalization insurance is now available, for those sufficiently prudent to budget for future needs, at a price within reach of virtually all wage-earners. For those unable to meet even that nominal fee, there is a vast amount of free medical service available to the end that no one need suffer, today, for want of medical attention.

The plain fact is this: our doctors do not want to be forced into the role of government employes. They have a professional standing of which they are justly proud. We believe a vast majority of the American public will back them up in that attitude.

Cardinal, Ohio's Official Bird, Is Wise Choice

Although the cardinal was officially approved by the Ohio Legislature as the State Bird of Ohio on Mar. 2, 1933, the story behind the actual selection is not known.

Bird authorities of the state, however, agree that the selection of the cardinal was a wise choice. Edward S. Thomas, curator of natural history, Ohio State Museum, has this to say about it: It is not surprising that the cardinal should be so great a favorite with Ohioans. It is one of the most beautiful of all North American birds. It does not desert us when cold weather approaches, but is with us throughout the year. It is one of our most accomplished musicians. One does not have to seek it in the remote wilderness; it lives in the midst of the large cities as well as in the country. And finally, its home life and food habits are above reproach.

Cardinals have a large selection of songs, all of them loud, clear, musical, cheerful. One of their favorite songs, indeed, sounds to me like, "What cheer! What cheer! What cheer! Cheer, cheer, cheer!" The female cardinal sings sweetly on occasion, one of the few female birds to do so.

The nest, a bulky structure of straws, is built in shrubbery or a rosetrellis, sometimes on a ledge beneath our porches. The three or four eggs are bluish-white, heavily and handsomely speckled with brown.

And Have Not Love

SYNOPSIS

Marriage for the Parsiaes had begun frogally and happily. After ten years Beatrice Parish and her successful husband, Porter, find themselves at an impasse. Porter has become morose, disgruntled as cantankerous old Mr. Ramey, the rich industrialist who employs him. Beatrice feels that their marriage is headed for the rocks. At breakfast Porter creates an ugly scene with Marianne, their little school-girl daughter. Angrily he storms out of the house. Beatrice determines that there shall be no divorce. She herself had been a child of divorce and bitterly remembers her misery. Their ever together, their home must, at all costs, be preserved for Marianne. For all Bee's acquaintance, Libby, the beauty shop girl who does her hair, seems happy. She does not expect too much from life. She is content working to help her maladjusted war-vet husband and their infant son. Then there is Libby, Bee's lifelong friend, a rich, handsome "gay" divorcee who has everything but love. Libby seems blind to the anguish caused Jane, her teen-age daughter, pathetically confused in their broken home. Late one afternoon Beatrice calls on Libby and finds her entertaining a new swain, one David Jordan, a charming [redacted] Arizona engineer. He is so attentive to Bee that, sensing "danger," she cuts her visit short.

CHAPTER SIX

FRANCES had gone and Marianne was in bed. The sea-blue curtains were drawn and the fire burned low upon the hearth. The music of Debussy seemed to come from far away. It came only from the phonograph at the far end of the long living room. Porter sat behind a copy of a business weekly. Beatrice sat with her hands idle upon her lap.

And once more she was aware of a room's becoming dynamic, though this time not with the high flight of inexpressible feelings but rather with hostility. Porter had scarcely spoken during dinner, and since then he had hidden his face from her. Was he really reading? If only she could think of something to say that would make him lower the paper and speak to her and smile at her. What's wrong with us, she cried silently? What has happened to us? What have I done? It would be better if we lived in drowsy tolerance. Anything would be better than this cold wall between us.

Perhaps if she suggested asking Martha and Bart West and Rhoda and George Dalton for cocktails tomorrow before going to the club ... Perhaps she should say that Jane was coming to spend the night. Should she tell him that Libby had a new 'beau'? She could suggest calling Libby and asking her and David to join them tomorrow night. She decided against that. Libby would probably want David Jordan all to herself. You can't blame her for that, can you? a voice whispered in her ear. Perhaps if she tried she could put some enthusiasm in her voice and tell him she had a new dinner dress and that it was lovely. She would ask him if he were thirsty or hungry. Pleasant things. Amiable things. Appeasement. Appeasement ... Porter, tell me, tell me, please, where is our together-ness?

"Porter!"

"Yes."

"I can't very well talk to you through the paper."

He lowered the paper and looked at her without expression.

"What do you want, Bee?"

You, she thought. I want you. And I want us the way we used to be when I saved pennies so we could go to a movie on Saturday night. Remember? We always stopped in at a small place for shrimps and a glass of beer and then walked home. Those were wonderful moments, Porter, wonderful nights. Do only women remember?

"I wondered," she began quietly, "if anything is wrong, Porter. If there is, I'd like to know what it is. I'd ... well, I'd like to be in on it." Horrible, she thought. I sound like one of those morning radio serials. "It's so apparent that something is disturbing you," she added.

He looked at her not coldly but pityingly.

"We're not living in exactly cheerful times," he said. "I have many problems, and the old man is on the warpath."

"I appreciate that. But it touches us, too—Marianne and me—more than you know."

"You have everything you want, haven't you, Bee?"

"Materially, yes. More than I ever dreamed of having."

He rattled the paper. "Then there's nothing more to say."

"Only this. Have you everything you want, Porter?"

His look of surprise briefly warmed his eyes. Wearily he said, "I don't ever expect to get what I want," and then hid his face from her behind the paper again.

The telephone seemed to scream through the house. Automatically Beatrice arose and went into the library to answer it. When she had sat down in the red leather chair, her heart was heavy with living. There was no doubt as to the identity of the caller. It was Mrs. Ramey of course.

"Beatrice?" the old, querulous, aristocratic voice inquired.

"Yes, Mrs. Ramey. How are you?"

"Only fair, my dear. When you get to be as old as I am, you always know when we're going to have bad weather. My shoulder hurts terribly. I haven't heard from you in a week, and I did very much want to see my chiropodist. You're not forgetting me, are you?"

"Certainly not," Beatrice said. "I phoned you on Tuesday but there was no answer and I have had a full week."

"You phoned on Tuesday?" The thin voice was petulant now. "That's very odd. I haven't been out of the house all week. I don't understand it."

You don't believe me, Beatrice thought. Why don't you go ahead and say it?

"I did phone on Tuesday," Beatrice said. Don't be angry. Pacify her. Appeasement. "But I'll be glad to take you to the chiropodist next week."

"Very well, I'll let you know. I'll call you and let you know. You know I like to be definite. Of course, I don't want to interfere with your plans. Young people today are not the same as they were in my day. Is my precious darling coming to spend the night with me tomorrow? Her room is all ready for her."

Oh, dear, Beatrice thought. Now get yourself out of this.

"I'm awfully sorry but Marianne can't come tomorrow night. She'll be so disappointed, too." Liar! "But Libby is going out and Jane is coming here."

"I don't believe my darling likes me any more."

"Oh, she does," Beatrice assured her. "She reads and reads the last book you gave her. Maybe we can stop by on Sunday afternoon. Porter will be golfing, but Marianne and I could stop in."

The old, complaining voice seemed to crack. "Well, if nothing more interesting comes up for you ..."

"There won't be. We'll see you then."

"All right. Good-bye, my dear. Take care of yourself."

Beatrice returned to the living room. The last few minutes had put weariness in her face.

"Who was it?" Porter asked.

"Mrs. Ramey."

"What did she want?"

I can't bear it, Beatrice thought. I can't bear my deceit with her, my lies.

"What does she always want?" she cried. "She wants to remind me that I'm her chauffeur, and that she owns Marianne and me body and soul!"

She did not wait for his reply because she was afraid she was going to cry. She went upstairs to their room and began to undress. And then she began to wonder how it had all happened with the Rameys.

She and Porter had been married two years and they had been living in a tiny apartment of the wrong side of town on thirty dollars a week. Those had been the days when to buy a ten ninety-five dress had been an event of monumental importance. Beatrice had bought envelopes at the five and dime store, and into them she had put the money that Porter had given her each week—so much for rent in one, so much for food in another, so much for insurance in still another, and so on. There must have been half a dozen of those envelopes, and she would never forget them. Then one day Porter had been invited as a guest to the country club by George Dalton. Beatrice had not been there but she had heard the story many times of how Porter and Bill had found old man Ramey on the first tee, and since nobody would ask him to join them, they had asked him. Despite his blusterings they had known he was grateful and after the eighteenth hole he had asked to buy them a drink. A drink. Only one. Mr. Ramey's niggardliness was well known. Obviously they had made the drink last quite a long time, because by the time it was finished Mr. Ramey said to Porter, "I could use you, boy. Come down to my office Monday morning. Nine sharp." That was how it had happened.

★ HIGH COST OF LIVING

Everybody is talking about the high cost of living! Everybody is wondering what can be done about it. The Hilltop HAS been doing something about it!

The value you receive for your dollar depends largely upon what you buy and where you buy it. When prices took an upward trend, Hilltop merchants pledged themselves to keep them down. That HAS BEEN their job — IT STILL IS their job — IT WILL CONTINUE to be their job.

They have no bargains in caviar! They DO have bargains in ALL everyday necessities — everything good to eat, everything smart to wear, and everything for the home. They are chopping away at prices on all of these things.

Hilltop merchants know that there are lots and lots of people who can't afford to pay high prices. THEY WON'T LET YOU DOWN! They will continue to save you those hard-earned dollars. You keep wishing that your dollar were able to stretch. Take it to The Hilltop and watch it S-T-R-E-T-C-H.

GREEN LEAF

A brown leaf blown across the snow may not imprint the surface though the wind and you should see it go.

O wind, that brought the brown leaf low and mopped its whirlings to and fro, there is leaf shadow on the snow.

Snow on the heart and cold the foe of secret warmth beneath the snow; and one green leaf that does not know of brown leaves shadowing the snow, of brown leaves whirling . . . allegro . . .

sere leaves and wind . . . fortissimo . . .

Spring Fashion Experts Stress Shorter Skirts, Belted Coats, and Crisp Fabrics

Spring fashions are attractive this year for reasons different from other years. This spring there will be a bigger choice of fashions that can be worn easily and comfortably, and a bigger choice of every part of your costume at prices you want to pay.

After thorough coverage of the spring and summer fashion showings throughout the United States and Paris, fashion authorities find that silhouettes are quieter, with big excitement in fabrics and colors, and a big spotlight on details in the making of the clothes and on accessories.

Skirts Are Shorter

By "quieter" silhouettes authorities mean wide skirts are not so billowing as the New Look made them, and skirt lengths for everyday wear are an inch shorter, thus making about 13 inches from the floor the spring, 1949, prescribed length. For dinner dresses, lengths go down to 10 inches. Ankle-length dinner and dance frocks are way up in favor — more of them than last year, even those intended for formal parties, with full decollete.

On the subject of skirts, it should be stated that full skirts are still the majority rule in dresses, including sports types; but the fullness is moderate for daytime, with all the billowing lines reserved for evening. Petticoats will still be worn with such skirts. More creased pleats, fine and precise, will be seen in dresses, different from the wide, uncreased pleats of last year's full skirts.

Suit Skirts Are Slimmer

The skirt for the spring suit is another thing, for it almost without exception is slim and straight, with an incidental pleat or slash at the hemline for easy walking.

Suits that have a more tailored look, though not austere and mannish, in men's wear worsteds, or ..., or the new deep beige twills, are first on the list. And it is worth mentioning that suits for summer (of the same character) are very favorably considered; linen, shantung, fancy cottons are in the making for these, but certain good-looking rayon suitings that will be available in spring are especially promising. In acceptable prices, they fill the bill as that garment every woman wants—the reliable for any time of the year and in any climate, with or without a coat.

Belted Look In Coats

Coats are casual or fitted, the latter for big city wear. Belting the casual coat made of tweed or of pastel fleece gives the right look for this spring, and, in fact, so important is the belted look in coats that even reefers add a half belt at back. A big navy season for the town coat, falling in with the overall dominance of navy for this spring.

Cardigans Staging Comeback

The short coat, the indispensable little throw-on wrap so handy for spring into summer vacations, is sure to be in the picture, though when summer comes it may run into competition with the knitted cardigan. These little separate jackets so convenient to wear with almost any kind of summer dress, including evening, are due for a comeback.

Fabrics, in their great variety, are so vital a factor in the structure of spring fashions—summer too—that we hardly expected to have written so much before getting to them. "Crisp" is the quality emphasized, though the taffetas which best personify "crisp fabrics" are not so stiff and standoffish; also, they are lighter weight. Paper weight taffeta gives a good idea of this tendency. And this spring they will be around in prints.

Prints are emerging with great vitality. One reason to account for this is the greater amount of silks, and at moderate prices too, but this year you will see wonderful prints in cottons and rayons as well. You cannot mention prints this season without saying "color" in the same breath. Some wonderful color ideas are worked out in them. Print patterns are imaginative, a kind of spaced geometric flower in a sizable motif being the newest. But polka dots, tiniest pindots are much liked, ... neat ... abound in quantities, not only in silks and rayons, but they are imitated, too, for summer cottons.

Millinery

Hats ought to be a joy to buy this spring, for they are designed and sized to be more becoming to more people, especially if you have a short bandeau; and just as important, there is greater choice in "easy" prices. Close to the head, with a side-tilt, is the underlying idea whether it is a cloche or a turban. And the side-tilt goes for sailors and larger brims in the straw department.

Accessories

Straw accessories are so important—handbags and shoes—that they are influencing other textures in accessories, as well as colors in such accessory materials as leather. The straws had a good beginning last spring and summer, but now they are much more ambitiously styled, and hardly a type of handbag has been overlooked in straw.

With the terrific spotlight on low necklines in dresses—this is the year of the exposed chest and shoulders, and often back—neckwear climbs to new importance. Stoles and scarfs for one kind of cover-up, and gilets and modesty pieces for fill-in, where too much exposure is not desired.

Flowers are scattered over the costume, instead of on the hat exclusively, as they have been for the past years.

360 Turn Out To Hunt Easter Eggs at Glenwood

Twelve children were announced winners in the Easter Egg Hunt sponsored by the Hilltop Community Council on Apr. 16 at Glenwood Recreation Center.

Rain and cool weather didn't dampen the spirits of some 360 children who appeared before the hunt started at 2 p. m. Easter eggs were hunted inside instead of on the grounds as originally announced.

Four winners were chosen from three age groups. Winners are as follows: Pre-school age, Paula Fink, 464 Hilltonia-av; Cheryl Vogel, 210 Belvidere-av; Michael Porter, 57 S. Eureka-av; and Dorothy Nelmeister, 361 Belvidere-av.

First to third grade: Sandra Curry, 6 S. Wheatland-av; James Houdashelt, 1993 Fairmont-av; Tommy Hostranft, 478 S. Richardson-av; Larry Wine, 267 Wrexham-av.

Older children: Edith Clay, 209 Highland-av; Vera Mincks, 621 S. Burgess-av; Ronald Bezold, 710 S. Champion-av, Pete Ritter, 195 Belvidere-av.

HORN DULLED FOR ROMANCE

KEEPERS CUT OFF the tip of the horn on the nose of "Kifaro," male black rhinoceros, before putting him in a cage with his mate, "Kenya," just in case they decide to resume sparring contests held the last time they were placed together. Head Philadelphia Zoo keeper John Regan (left) feeds the animal as Fred Ulmer, curator of mammals, cuts the horn with a saw. Keeper Pat Menichi holds the rhino's head—or tries to. Jesus Declares His Authority

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Mark 11:1-11, 15-18; Luke 19:29-48.

By Alfred J. Buescher

After Jesus had ridden triumpantly into Jerusalem to the shouts of "Hosannas," He went direct to the temple where He looked around; then He went to Bethany with the twelve.

Next morning Jesus again went to the temple in Jerusalem and when He found money changers therein. He cast them out, saying that they were making the house of God into a den of thieves.

The scribes and Pharisees, seeing Jesus cast the money changers out of the temple and preaching to the people, sought how they might destroy Him, for the people marveled at His doctrine.

When Jesus came near Jerusalem He wept over it. He taught daily in the temple, but the authorities sought to destroy Him.

Evangelistic Series Opens Next Sunday

Evangelist C. D. Plum

The West Broad Street Church of Christ, Broad-st and Demorest-av, announces the beginning of its evangelistic services for next Sunday. Evangelist C. D. Plum of Parkersburg, W. Va., has been secured for the services, which are scheduled to continue for two weeks.

Evangelist Plum will speak each Sunday at 9 a. m. over the regular Church of Christ radio program on Station WRFD.

The West Broad Street Church of Christ has attracted the attention of Columbus churchgoers by building a fine meeting house and minister's residence without soliciting help from any of the residents of the Westgate area. Evangelist T. W. Butterfield is minister for the congregation. The membership and influence of this new congregation has grown constantly. It is expected that the membership will soon be twice what it was when the church began worshipping there the first of this year.

Evangelist Plum is well known to the Churches of Christ in Ohio, having labored among them for 30 years. He is highly esteemed as an evangelist and a debater, and, according to the local minister, is one of the church's outstanding Bible teachers. Services are being held each evening at 7:30. Sunday sessions are: Bible study at 9:30 a. m. to attend this series of gospel sermons and learn what the Church of Christ believes and teaches. Morning worship on Sunday begins at 10:30. The evening service will begin at 7:30.

Don't Kill Valuable Vitamins

By ALICE DENHOFF

WATER, air and fire may be friendly elements to man, but they may be vicious vandals where precious vitamins are concerned. Soak or cook a vegetable in too much water, and the water soluble vitamins dissolve, drown and dissipate! Turn on the heat too intensely and more vitamins, especially the precious Vitamin C, vanish. Expose vegetables to air and the vitamin content meets a sorry fate as may be seen from the wilted and dejected look of greens left carelessly lying on the kitchen table.

But the vitamin vandals—air, water and heat—can be vanquished easily by following a few simple rules. Whisk vegetables into the refrigerator after buying as soon as possible—and pick 'em as fresh as possible. Wash, don't soak vegetables, for soaking only means sending the precious elements down the drain with the water. Cook vegetables in as little water as possible and until just tender. Serve at once for vitamins shouldn't stand around.

Less Vitamins Lost

Never boil vegetables. Simmering means less violent exposure to heat, and so, less loss of vitamins. Liquid left over from cooking should be served with vegetables or blended with soups or sauces.

Of course a certain amount of vitamin loss is unavoidable, but may in some degree be replaced by using nutritious dressings and by combining vegetables with other vitamin-rich foods, as, for instance, in an excellent spinach recipe. Steam spinach as usual. In a double boiler slowly heat a number 2 can of grapefruit sections and liquid. Toss together heated grapefruit with spinach which has been drained, chopped, seasoned with butter, salt and pepper to taste. Serve at once. Even confirmed spinach-haters have been known to weaken when confronted with this one.

To do right by such vegetables as hot beets, cauliflower, spinach, kale, broccoli, prepare a zesty sauce. Combine ⅓ c. mayonnaise, ⅓ tsp. salt and tbsp. prepared mustard in top of double boiler. Gradually add ¼ c. milk, stirring after each addition until smooth. Cook over boiling water for 5 min., stirring constantly. If over-cooked, sauce will curdle in best Hollandaise fashion.

For extra Vitamin A in cabbage shred a medium-sized head of cabbage. Place in skillet and dot with ⅓ c. of vitaminized margarine. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover tightly and cook over low heat for about 7 min. Serve at once. Cabbage should still be crunchy.

Starling Enjoys Central's Band By Evelyn Neil

Starling Junior High School held two assemblies on Apr. 27 so that the student body could hear Central High School's band.

The director, Robert D. Rockey, had taught music at Starling before he became a member of Central's faculty.

A number of the students in the band had gone to Starling during their junior-high years.

In Rochester a widow tried to stop the placing of flowers on her late husband's grave by three other former wives. "HE WAS MINE LAST and that privilege should be mine," she argued.

Carter Picks Four to Map 'Hilltop Plan'

The personnel of the four-member "Hilltop Plan" Committee was announced today by Russell Carter, president of the Hilltop Community Council.

The members are:

Elmer J. Hegenberger, 103 Binns-blvd, vice-president and secretary of Shank and Saunders.

Rev. C. T. Langholz, 204 S. Hudson-av, pastor of the St. John Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Ray Cave, 603 Crescent-rd.

Mrs. Roy Hastilow, 19 Midland-av.

"This committee, which has been assigned one of the most important tasks in recent community history, represents a good cross-section of the community and also represents all geographical sections of the Hilltop," Mr. Carter said in announcing the appointments.

Suggestions Coming In

Mr. Carter added that a number of good project suggestions already are coming in for screening.

The "Hilltop Plan" movement had its origin in a request by Mayor James A. Rhodes that the community present both its short- and long-range plans to the city in a single package

Mr. Carter said that the May 12 meeting of the Community Council will be devoted entirely to consideration of suggestions designed for incorporation in the "Plan." The May 12 meeting will be open not only to representatives of organizations affiliated with the Community Council, but to other groups and individuals who wish to present suggestions for community betterment.

Ideas Welcomed

Mr. Carter emphasized that comments and suggestions will be welcome from all quarters and that the sole function of the Council and the special committee he has appointed will be to screen the suggestions with a view to writing a final plan which will be acceptable to virtually all groups of the community

The May 12 meeting will be held at the Hilltop YMCA. Every organization on the Hilltop is urged to have at least one representative at the meeting, Mr. Carter said.

West High Nine Seeks Undisputed City Lead Today

By Dave Miller

This afternoon's scheduled baseball game between West High's Cowboys and the South High nine will produce a new, undisputed leader in the City High School League. West, South and Linden now are in a three-way tie for the top spot with four victories and one defeat each.

The Cowboys held the undisputed lead for 24 hours late last week after an 8-1 victory over Aquinas in the replay of their 7-7 tie. The Bulldogs and the Panthers, however, pulled up on even terms with the Hilltop school with victories on Friday afternoon.

The West nine unleashed a 13-hit attack behind the capable pitching of Right-Hander Phil Young to win the replay of the Aquinas tie last Thursday afternoon

Get Three Runs In First

The Hilltoppers hopped onto Pitcher Dick Lee of the Terriers in quick fashion, getting three runs in their part of the first inning. Four runs came across for the Cowboys in the big fifth frame and knocked Lee out of the box midway of the inning. Jim Managan replaced the latter on the hillock and pitched effective relief ball.

Phil Young went all the way for the locals on the hill for his fourth win as against only one setback. Phil pitched to only 27 batters in the regulation seven innings, striking out two batters every inning but the seventh, making a total of 13, walking only three and allowing only four hits. It was by far Phil's best game of the year. At bat, the Cowboys were also at their season's best. They slammed out 13 hits, with Dick Culbertson having a double and home run to pace the extra base hit department. Morris Dobbs was top hitter with three for four at the plate with Dave Caton, Culbertson, Catcher Bob Birle and Young all getting two hits.

Birle Hits in "Clutch"

The Cowboys battered Pitcher Dick Lee in the first inning when Dave Caton walked, only to be forced by Dick Culbertson. Dick Kirk, leading West hitter, was hit by a pitched ball, and Morris Dobbs loaded the bases with a smash off Pitcher Lee's glove, beating it out for a single. Bob Birle came through with his usual "clutch" hitting by knocking home two runs with a single to left. Dobbs also scored when Left-Fielder Jim Hord let the ball through him, but Birle was caught

West's Nine Wins First In Tourney

By Dave Miller

West High's baseballers rolled to their eighth victory in nine tries in the all-game department by defeating Grandview, 7 to 0, in the first round of the Central District Baseball Tournament at the West field yesterday afternoon.

The Cowboys have won over Mifflin, Grandview, East, Chillicothe, Central, North, Aquinas and Grandview again while losing only to Linden McKinley.

In the Grandview tilt, it was the effective pitching of Jim Hamrick which turned the trick for the latest win. The right-hander turned in a neat, one-hit performance, and in fact had a no-hitter until the third man of the seventh inning. Jerry Solinger and Jack Pickens were the big guns at the plate for the Cowboys. Between them they got 5 of West's seven hits. Solinger had a perfect day of three for three while Pickens had two for four.

Start To Hit In Second

After the Cowboys were set down in regulation order in the first frame by big George Linn, a freshman at Grandview, the Hilltoppers started to hit in the second and came through with five tallies.

Dick Kirk led the inning off by walking, and on the first pitch to Morris Dobbs, the next hitter, Dick Kirk was caught off first, with a rundown resulting, but Kirk was safe at second when Bill Thompson, Bobcat first baseman, threw wide on a relay toss to second.

Dobbs hit right back to Pitcher Linn, but the blow was as good as a sacrifice as it advanced Kirk to third base. Bob Birle hit to Third Baseman Bob Steffe, where he muffed the ball, scoring Kirk. Jerry Solinger then singled to left, sending Birle to third Jack

The clubs rotate in the honor of selecting the mayor; this year the honor goes to the Spring Street Hi-Y Club, whose members elected their president, Bennie Morris, 1488 Mt. Vernon-av, to succeed Mayor James Rhodes for the day.

Frey Sponsors Fete for Past Commodores

A. A. Frey, 254 S. Westgate-av, 1938 post commodore, was sponsor of the annual past commodores' banquet of the Navy-Marine Post No. 276, American Legion, held Apr. 27, at the Officers' Club, Fort Hayes Hotel.

Twenty-three past commodores of 24 in the city were in attendance. Highlight of the meeting was the presentation of the first life membership gold card to the first commodore, Post 276, George R. LaSauvage, an official of the Schraft Restaurant, Inc., New York City. Mr. LeSauvage was in Columbus especially for the meeting.

Twenty per cent of the members of Post No. 276 live on the Hilltop. Mrs. Marcus Long, 795 S. Eureka-av, was in charge of the luncheon served by the Post's Auxiliary after the meeting. Past Commodore Earl C. Struble, 235 N. Wheatland-av, was in charge of publicity for the program.

Oh, There's No Place Like Home!

Mrs. Russell Broyles, 400 Smith-rd, New Rome, is nursing cuts and bruises, but her greatest wound is to her dignity.

She was helping her husband install linoleum in their home the other day. She was working around a hot air register. Without warning, the register flipped over and Mrs. Broyles slipped into the resulting hole.

The Record's New Rome correspondent reports that, although Mrs. Broyles tore out some of the furnace pipes on her way down, Mr. Broyles, through manful effort, managed to extricate his wife without assistance.

Next Tuesday Is 'T-Day'; Traffic Survey Scheduled

Next Tuesday, May 10, is "T-Day" in Columbus and Franklin County, when every motorist can help do something about the increasingly serious traffic problem.

It's "T" for Tuesday, "T" for Traffic, and "T" for Trips, which are to be recorded by all persons driving cars, trucks or buses that one day

The project is all a part of the Origin and Destination Survey now being conducted by city, county and state highway departments, with the cooperation of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and other groups.

Success of the survey, which will depend entirely on the willingness of every motorist to cooperate on "T Day." Here what each motorist is asked to do on three days next week

MONDAY — Receive through the mail a double postcard, with full instructions.

TUESDAY—Make a record of every trip taken that day.

WEDNESDAY—Mail back the filled-out, prepaid postcard.

As a further step in the survey "road blocks" are being set up from time to time this month at every major highway exit from the county, where outgoing motorists are asked to stop and give information on their trips. Observers also will be placed at key intersections throughout the area to make traffic counts.

"Traffic is everybody's problem and helping to solve those problems is everybody's job," say the survey sponsors. "Filling out the card next Tuesday is a 'must' for every good citizen."

With postcards returned and the reports of all observers at hand, traffic engineers will plunge immediately into the task of interpreting the results and providing the information needed to improve local traffic conditions.

8 Public Hearings Set on Proposed Changes in Zoning

A series of eight public hearings, the first covering suggested changes in the Franklin County Rural Zoning Law adopted by the electorate last November, will be held late this month and early in June in the Hilltop area.

The Rural Zoning Commission invites all interested or affected property owners to attend the hearings. Any individual who wishes to be heard will be given an opportunity to speak for or against the suggested changes, the commission said.

The first case in which an actual zoning change has been asked will be opened to public hearing at 7 p. m., June 1, in the Norwich Township Hall in Hilliards. The case concerns the proposal of the Marble Cliff Quarries Co. of Columbus to change the zoning on several large tracts in Norwich, Perry and Franklin Twps. from light manufacturing to heavy manufacturing districts. A second hearing on the proposal has been set for 8 p. m., June 1, in the Perry Twp. Hall on Lane-rd between Riverside-dr and Reed-rd. A third hearing on the same proposal will be held at 8 p. m., June 7, in the Franklin Twp. Hall, Sullivant-av.

Two Hearings Slated

Two public hearings are slated for 7 p. m., June 2, in the Prairie Twp. Hall in Alton. The first will have to do with the proposal by Charles Williams, 1525 Kohr-pl, to change the zoning on a 500 by 600-foot tract at the northeast corner of W. Broad-st and Doherty rd from residential and farm district to a general commercial district.

The second hearing of the evening will consider the application of the owners of nine lots on W. Broad-st between the Rome-Hilliards-rd and Lawrence-dr to change the zoning on the property from residential to general commercial. The owners are Robert and Hattie McClure of 5404 W. Broad-st. The property is located in the National Pike Little Farms Subdivision.

The Zoning Commission also has ordered public hearings held in each township which adopted the zoning resolution pertaining to the deletion of a part of a section of the County Rural Zoning Resolution, as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to park any automobile trailer coach which is being used for dwelling or sleeping purposes, in any place other than a trailer coach park possessing a Use Permit as hereinabove provided (Deleting the following) "This section shall not be effective until three years after the passage of this resolution unless, prior to the expiration of that period, a sufficient number of trailer coach parks shall have been established within the county to accommodate all trailer coaches which may be parked from time to time within the county."

Public hearings in the Hilltop area will be held: in the Prairie Twp. Hall in Alton at 7 p. m., June 2; in the Norwich Twp. Hall in Hilliards at 7 p. m., June 1, and in the Franklin Twp. Hall on Sullivant-av at 8 p. m., June 2.

Three attendants, identically gowned in white organdy over Nile green taffeta and carrying baskets of spring flowers, preceded Miss Marilyn Louise Jones to the altar of Glenwood Methodist Church Saturday evening at 6:30 for her marriage to Mr. George Alexander Williams, Jr.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lewis Jones, 478 Nashoba-av, while Mr. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Williams, Cleveland Heights.

The ceremony, preceded by a half hour of nuptial music offered by Mrs. Clyde Moore at the organ and Mrs. Albert Calland, Jr., soloist, was read by Rev. Joseph B. Shellhaas before an arrangement of white lilacs interspersed with greenery. The church was lovely at twilight with its seven-branched candelabru at the altar and many cathedral candles along the bridal aisle.

Escorted by her father, the bride was wearing a gown of Chantilly type lace and clouds of net over white taffeta made with a portrait neckline and full short sleeves. The full skirt was inserted with panels of lace and ended in a circular train which fell from a lace insertion at the waist. Matching lace trimmed the mitts and the cap, from which fell a finger tip length veil of illusion. Her bouquet was centered with a white orchid surrounded by white spring flowers. Attached to the ribbon was the bride's Alpha Chi Omega sorority pin.

Matron of honor for the bride was Mrs. Donald W. Hanby; Miss Ellen Jane Lohr and Mrs. James E. Gump were bridesmaid and bridesmatron. Their gowns were designed with a cameo neckline and bordered by a shirring of the organdy. The short sleeves were also trimmed with a shirred band of the organdy. The basque bodice extended into the bouffant skirt, which was worn over an old fashioned hoop, and had a sash of Nile green velvet ribbon. They wore upon their heads complete circlets of flowers matching those carried in their baskets.

Mr. L. George Hoth, Jr., of Glenridge, N. J., fraternity brother of the bridegroom, was best man and seating the guests were Mr. James B. Lyles, Jr., Cleveland Heights, Mr. Roger L. Jones, Jr. brother of the bride, Mr. Louis K. Boswell, Jr., and Mr. H. Roger Secrest of Cleveland Heights.

Mrs. Jones greeted her guests wearing a floor length gown of aqua crepe with matching gloves. Mrs. Williams chose for the occasion a gown of sea mist green crepe to which she added gold mitts. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

A profusion of spring flowers decorated Balcony Hall, where the reception was held for 100 guests. Mrs. Robert Del Manzo, Miss Jean Phillips and Miss Sarah Whipple of Cleveland, Miss Patricia Goodall and Miss Mary Herbert served as hostesses.

Before the couple left for a trip through the Adirondacks, the bride changed to a melon-colored gabardine suit and hat, navy accessories and topcoat to which she pinned the orchid from her bouquet. After May 14 they will be at home at 148 Front-st, Berea.

The bride is a graduate of West High School and Ohio State University. She is with the Sherwin-Williams Laboratories in Cleveland.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Cleveland Heights High School and Colgate University. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity and is associated with the Philip Carey Manufacturing Co. in Cleveland. Mr. Williams spent three years with the United States Army in the CBI Theater.

OSU Mothers' Club Group A Hears Chillicothe Hospital Party Report

Group A of the Ohio State University Mothers' Club met at the home of Mrs. H. F. Remington, 123 N. Ogden-av, Tuesday, Apr. 26. A dessert luncheon was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. George Gusler, Mrs. Walter Hoelcher, Mrs. Carl Rucker and Mrs. George A. Springer.

During the business meeting, Mrs. Neal Acord, 375 S. Hague-av, was elected group leader for 1949-50, to succeed Mrs. W. O. Schubert, 52 N. Roys-av.

Mrs. Ed Hakola told the story, "It's Never To Late to Live," by Bess Streeter Aldrich.

The highlight of the meeting was the report of the group project chairman, Mrs. T. Bieber, of the party given Sunday, Apr. 24, for veterans of Building 35 at the Chillicothe Hospital. It had been arranged by Mrs. Bieber, assisted by Mrs. O. H. Lausa and Mrs. Acord. The ladies served approximately 375 patients with generous portions of 35 home-made cakes, together with ice cream and candy bars. It was the sixth time the ladies have given a party at Chillicothe and their home-made cakes have become noted among the attendants as well as the patients.

Al Bettinger's seven-piece dance band made up of young men from the Hilltop and Grove City played from 2 to 5:45 p. m. in the two ground-floor recreation halls of Building 35. Late in the afternoon a group of coeds from Ohio Wesleyan University came in and acted as dancing partners for the patients.

The group is already beginning plans for next year's party, with a number of cakes promised by ladies not members of the group.

Those making the trip to the hospital to help with the serving were Mr. and Mrs. Neal Acord, Mrs. T. H. Bieber, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clark, Mrs. C. B. Harrison (first vice-president of OSU Mothers), Mrs. O. H. Lausa and son, Ralph, Mrs. Luther Meeks, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Meinrod, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Schubert, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Schubert (group leader), Mrs. George A. Springer, Mrs. Lulu Tway, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Washburn, Grove City, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Weaver and son (Mrs. Weaver is president of OSU Mothers' Club) and Mrs. Elsie Wickcliffe of Grove City.

The group wishes to express sincere thanks to all who worked hard to make the party a success.

The next meeting of Grove City will be a joint meeting with Groups F and O, a pot luck, at Grove City, May 24.

West Nine Wins First In Tourney

Winnestaffer hit to first base, where Thompson threw to the plate in an effort to get Birle coming home. Birle was caught by at least three feet, so he came into the plate lit football style, knocking the ball out of Catcher Bob Gugliemi's hands.

Jack Pickens then singled to bring home Solinger, and Winnestaffer also scored when Dave Caton was safe on shortstop Linsey's two-base error. The Cowboys came out of the inning with five runs, only two hits, and four Grandview errors.

Hoped For No-Hitter

This lead seemed to make Pitcher Jim Hamrick work all the better. He started to mow the Bobcat batsmen in regular order, and everyone was hoping for a deserved no-hitter.

The Cowboys added two more with their run-making machine in the fourth when Solinger got his second straight single, and stole second. Winnestaffer popped out, but Jim Hamrick hit a blopper to center field, failing in for a hit; Jack Pickens then came through with his second single to left, filling the bases. Linn then walked Dave Caton to force in Solinger with run No. 6. The final tally came in a few moments later when Dick Culbertson flied out to left field, plating Hamrick after the catch.

In the seventh inning, Eddie Linsley hit a ball down the third base line that struck a pebble and hit Third-Sacker Jack Winnestaffer in the shoulder. It was questionable as to whether it was a hit or an error, with it finally being called an error in an effort to preserve Hamrick's no-hitter. However, after he struck out Tom Shell for the first out, Bob Steffe singled to right for the first and only hit of the afternoon of Hamrick.

Hits Into Double Play

Bob Gugliemi then hit into a twin killing, Pickens to Caton to Culbertson, to end the game with Hamrick coming through with a beautiful one-hitter.

Hamrick pitched against Grandview in the earlier meeting this year, and was touched also for just one hit in four innings. Jim pitched a three-hitter against Chillicothe in his other attempt. He has won three, lost none, struck out 18, walked nine and allowed only three earned runs. The right-hander's other effort was against Aquinas, being knocked out of the box in the third inning, but neither winning nor losing the contest.

The Grandview-West line score:

Grandview ....000 000 0—0	1
West .....050 200 x—7	7

Linn, Fowler (4) and Gugliemi; Hamrick and Birle.

Undisputed Lead Sought by West

at the plate, also attempting to score, and cutting off a Cowboy uprising.

In the second frame for Aquinas, the leadoff man, Jim Entz, playing outfield for Aquinas, walked and stole second. However, Young fanned both Ralph Stapleton and Jim Swepston. Jim Ort sent a single to right field, and Entz attempted to score. A perfect peg by Right-Fielder Jerry Solinger got him easily at the plate, and holding up hopes of a shutout for Young.

Aquinas, however, got to Young for a run in the third when, with two down, Outfielder Don O'Brien walked and advanced when Outland also was passed. Tom Kearns then singled to center to drive home O'Brien with Aquinas' only run of the game. Young then struck out Entz to end the inning.

Fifth Frame Settles It

The Hilltoppers sewed up matters with four runs in the fifth inning. Dave Caton led off with a single, but Culbertson forced him at second, and on a bad return throw in an effort to get "Culby" by Second Basemmn Outland, he took second base. Dick Kirk then singled to plate Culbertson and Dobbs also singled along with Bob Birle's one-baser to plate two more tallies. After Jack Winnestaffer walked, Young singled to center to plate Dobbs with the Cowboys' seventh run of the game and spelled exit to Dick Lee, with Jim Managan replacing him.

In the sixth inning, with one gone, Dick Culbertson laid into one of Managan's slow balls and knocked it over Mt. Vernon Ave. for a terrific homer. That finished the scoring.

The Cowboys have a tournament game this Monday with Grandview, a team they beat, 16 to 4, in a practice tilt earlier this season. They are scheduled in City League play Tuesday with South on the local diamond. If the Cowboys win Monday, they will play the South-Marion Harding tournament winner at OSU on Wednesday afternoon.

The West-Aquinas line score:

West .....300 041 0—8	13		0
Aquinas .....001 000 0—1	4		3

Just Garden Talk

By W. H. Lindberg

Last week's column covered some of the basic problems of landscape design. This will be a continuation of the same thoughts.

Since the fundamentals of the background have been covered, the next important step to be considered is the types of plant material to be chosen with regard to its shape and color. In the case of the more formal houses, in planning the foundation plantings, care must be used in selecting plants that are described as being of fine texture. This would be plants that have rather definite shapes and those that would appear soft in texture. The informal house can readily use the coarser foliaged plants with more or less irregular shapes.

It is always considered good taste to decide the scope of the house that is intended to make the over-all picture and then frame that portion with larger, heavier plants. Whereves the entrance is formal the planting should be carried out in formal lines using possibly a vine on one side or even both sides to achieve a softening effect.

It is a good thing to remember in planning to always consider color in the plant foliage and also its flower if it happens to be a blooming plant. A very good rule to follow is to avoid the use of plants of odd or striking color unless it is desired to feature that portion of the landscape where they are to be used. Then by all means use enough to gain this result.

The simplest rule to follow when in doubt is to consult someone who is supposed to know.

Easing of Credit Curbs Shows Strength of Nation

By John Kelly

(Second in a Weekly Series)

Still further relaxation of credit controls has been announced by the Federal Reserve Board. This was the second such move within the last two months, in which period the down payment also was substantially lowered on the purchase of securities.

This nation of installment buyers will find terms at least as enticing and just as comfortable as those of pre-war days. The only one to be satisfied now is the credit man, always a formidable character.

The action of the board certainly indicates that the federal authorities are determined to make our adjustment to normal times as painless as possible.

Proof of Strength

It is proof—if any were needed—that financially the nation is strong and liquid. All the way along the line we are backed by an unprecedented amount of quick assets, either cash or its equivalent.

The Federal Reserve System, through the purchase or sale of United States government securities, has the power to control credit. It can quickly relieve any strain by means over which it has full control. The fact that it has moved to ease credit without resorting to other powers is one of the strongest elements in the nation's business health.

The feverish pace of the post-war years was largely caused by our rush to replenish inventories. Neither home nor industry finds it easy to get along on a day-to-day basis, hour-to-hour, if the truth were known of many hardy souls. We didn't like it, and the buying spree was gorgeous to behold. It now seems clear that industry has finally caught up with the rush. Our factories no longer have to await a daily shipment of parts and we have more than one cake of soap in the cupboard.

Restraint Possible

That there is no limit to human wants is an economic truism. However, it is equally true that one's yen for a specific thing at a specific time can, sometimes—with a heroic effort, of course—be restrained. Consumers have inventories just like anyone else. The long period of "catching up" has, at long last, placed the consumer in a competitive position. He or she can go bargain-hunting once more, and if one can't be found the money can always go into the savings account.

People are still receiving record breaking incomes. So the slackening in our hectic career can hardly be attributed to lack of buying power. Retailers agree that bargain offerings are well received. Well-made goods, at prices within reason, move rapidly.

The truth is—each of us has priced himself out of the other's market. The problem is to fit each product to the wants and purse of each buyer. Random thoughts on possible ways to achieve this happy solution—within the limits of "the American way"—will be thrust upon you from time to time.

And Have Not Love

SYNOPSIS

Porter Parish has become so disagreeable to his wife, Beatrice, and their child, Marianne, that divorce seems inevitable. She realizes that her husband is not happy under the cruel domination of his employer, Mr. Ramey, a rich grasping industrialist. He receives patiently that their child shall not be the victim of a broken home like poor frustrated Jane, teen-age daughter of Bee's best friend, Libby. One afternoon Bee meets Libby's latest swain, David Jordan, whom she finds "dangerously" attractive.

CHAPTER SEVEN

IT WAS sometime before Beatrice met Mr. and Mrs. Ramey, though from various sources she had learned that though they were fabulously rich, they were socially impossible. Any number of people told her that Rufus Ramey was a tyrant, a man insensitive to the feelings of others, merciless and uninterested in anything save the making of money. He had, they admitted grudgingly, the Midas touch. Beatrice was told that Mrs. Ramey had come from one of the first families of the state, a fact she never let anyone, particularly the man she married, forget since Mr. Ramey had begun as a laborer in her father's business, the same business that Rufus Ramey had swollen to an industrial empire.

Thus it had been with mixed feelings that Beatrice had gone to dinner the first time she and Porter were invited to the massive stone house of the Rameys. And there in an atmosphere of Victorian elegance she had found to her consternation and bewilderment that everything she had heard about them was true.

Pity, however, had at once tempered her feelings for the irascible, ugly man, with white hair like bristles, and with shoulders so broad and neck so thick he seemed almost deformed. Mr. Ramey's attitude that night was that this was something he supposed had to be done since there had to be women in the world, but that he couldn't wait for tomorrow's working day to begin.

No one had told Beatrice that Mrs. Ramey was a handsome, imperial looking woman with restless dark eyes and softly waved white hair who walked with a cane that she thudded noisily against the floor when she was angry. Mrs. Ramey had dominated the conversation not only with searching questions but also with so seeking, so inquisitive a stare that Beatrice had felt weak from a sense of her own unworthiness. "You are a self-contained little thing, and your husband is obviously gently born," Mrs. Ramey had said that night. She smiled rather often but there was no mirth in any of her smiles. It was more a muscular movement than a smile. Beatrice had had to hear about her illustrious forebears at whose portraits on the wall Mrs. Ramey had pointed with her cane. She learned, too, that Mrs. Ramey regarded poverty as the incurable disease of the stupid. Mrs. Ramey had said also, "I have a perfect house. I am a perfectionist. My husband and I don't entertain very often. Entertaining upsets the routine of my housekeeping." There had not been a flower or a green thing growing in that great mausoleum of a house.

Beatrice had been prouder of Porter than ever that night, and when Mrs. Ramey had not been monopolizing her, she had seen that Porter was everything that Rufus Ramey would want his son to be if he'd had a son. But the Ramey's were childless. Beatrice had understood then why she was here, and why Porter's salary was such that she was wearing a dress bought at a shop into which until only recently she had longingly glimpsed. From then on the Rameys were a part of her existence.

In the beginning she had acquiesced gladly to Mrs. Ramey's demands upon her time partly from compassion for the lonely childless old woman and partly from thankfulness. She had even thought that Mrs. Ramey was genuinely fond of her, though it wasn't long before she came to know that Mrs. Ramey was as frugal as her husband and that Mrs. Ramey's idea of a gift was a fifty cent handkerchief, or at the most a pair of stockings of a color that Beatrice could not bring herself to wear. When she and Porter had bought their first car she had not objected to taking Mrs. Ramey wherever she wanted to go. And Beatrice had been agreeable when, when she was pregnant, Mrs. Ramey had telephoned every day to tell her of children being born with birthmarks appropriate to their mother's unfulfilled desires. Mrs. Ramey had heard of more children who had been born idiots. And when Marianne had come, rosy and perfect, Mrs. Ramey had said, "This is my baby." When Porter had gone into the Navy, Mrs. Ramey had read Beatrice the casualty lists over the telephone every morning, and her good-bye to him when he left for California had sounded like an obituary. If Porter had had any idea of being killed, Mrs. Ramey had certainly done her best to intensify it.

Thus Beatrice had accepted the Rameys as a part of her material plenty, and had been prepared to continue to do so until of late when she had begun to see Mrs. Ramey in a new and disturbing light. Though Mrs. Ramey said she didn't go anywhere, it seemed to Beatrice that Mrs. Ramey knew everywhere that she, Beatrice, went. "You were at the Lambert's tea last Saturday. Oh, I know!" or, "You bought a new hat at Antoinette's last week, didn't you, Beatrice?" It was not what she said but rather what her tone implied—that Beatrice had all the fun while she, Mrs. Ramey, had none and that if it were not for her, Beatrice would still be living on thirty dollars a week. Nothing pleased Mrs. Ramey more than to hear that someone had suffered a severe financial loss and Beatrice had begun to suspect not only a threat, but also a curious and frightening sugar-coated sadism in the woman. Meanwhile Mrs. Ramey's demands upon her had so grown that Beatrice now hesitated before committing herself to daytime social engagements. "I thought you'd never come," Mrs. Ramey would complain if Beatrice were only a few minutes late. "If I'm too much trouble, do, please, tell me that I am. I've never been as popular as you are, my dear." The inferences to hurt and to deprecate was all too clear.

Beatrice had known, she had known from the first, that though Mr. Ramey had given Porter his opportunity, Porter had earned his salary. While the title of the "fair-haired boy" might be applied to Porter by those jealous of him at the vast and sprawling Ramey plant, Beatrice knew that Porter could not have worked under a more exacting, more ruthless, more impersonal taskmaster. She had seen Porter exhausted. She had more than once heard him called from sleep several times in one night when something had gone wrong at the plant. She had seen him return from a long and arduous business trip and, sleepless after hours in the air, go directly to the plant and work all day. There were few nights that he did not bring work home with him. He was on call twenty-four hours a day. Nor was he free of telephone calls and reports mailed to him while on his annual vacation.

And now Marianne's acute dislike of Mrs. Ramey was aggravating an already strained relationship. For Marianne frankly did not want to go to see Mrs. Ramey. She felt so strongly about it that tears welled up in her eyes if the subject were mentioned. "I don't like her," Marianne had cried vehemently. "I don't like what she gives me to eat. You know what she does, Mother? She gives me a magazine and tells me to look at the pictures. It's dumb . . . I won't go there anymore. I won't!"

Not for a long time had Beatrice become conscious of the act of undressing at night, the sensation of being bereft of jewelry and her body bare under the satin gown. If anyone were to see her now, she thought, looking at herself in the vanity mirror, at the line of her bare shoulder and at her cascading hair, they would have thought her vain. Would they ever suspect that her appraisal of herself was not prompted by vanity, but rather by a sense of futility? Why . . . why the thick untrammeled hair and the soft bare shoulders when Porter would come up and go silently to his restless sleep? What was she good for except to see that Marianne was healthy and happy, and that the house was in beautiful order? The hair and the shoulders and the lips and the body, the woman apart from the mother and the housekeeper, seemed such a waste. She was alive. She was not all mother and homemaker. She was a woman, too, and appreciative of her own gifts of beauty. She wanted to be loved, Beatrice thought; not for Marianne, not for the house, but for herself. Even when it wasn't like this, even when Porter missed her, it was not as it once had been. There was no tenderness.

She was in her bed and her eyes were open when Porter came in the room.

"Did you see that Marianne was covered?" he asked. "It's getting lonely colder."

"I put the comfort over, her." You are looking at me, Porter, but you are not really seeing me because you are not thinking of me. "Porter, I'm sorry I blew up about Mrs. Ramey."

"She's getting hard to take, isn't she?"

She smiled. "Or I'm just a case of arrested development. I'm just beginning to see through her." How much should she tell him? She used to tell him everything.

He was standing before the mirror. He didn't speak at once and when he did his voice was angrily cold. "You have to take it . . . or else. I'm tired. To sleep . . . just to sleep."

She pulled the blanket up as if to hide herself and turned on her side.

But she did not sleep.

SPRING SONG

Kids on wagons, kids on scooters—
Springtime's earliest commuters.
Out before the birds returning,
Kids on wheels are sidewalk-spurning.

Thronging thick as daffodils,
Darting, swaying, taking spills;
Scarves and sweaters, yellow, red
Rival any tulip bed.

Whiz of bike and roller-skate,
Song of Spring inviolate;
Surer sign than any crocus
Winter's ceased his hocus-pocus.

THE ORDERLY SOUL

I like things to be neat and tidy;
That's my doom.
I like things pigeonholed, correctly labeled,
In every room.
I'm always busy with a broom
In mental corners,
Jerking out the whimsies, penitents
And cobwebbed mourners.
Then when I get things all shipshape,
Each in its place,
I envy someone with a catch-all brain—
And merry face.

THE [illegible]

A white cat on the picket fence,
An empty birdhouse on a tree,
A black squirrel on a leafless limb—
And me . . .

A hollow drenched with a hapless brash,
A wall's austere, defending tane,
A window and an open door
And me—alone.

The cat has disappeared within;
The squirrel has found a buried nut;
The spring will find the birds at home
And me—alone. The door is shut.

Hilltop Relays Marks Due To Fall May 10

By Eddie Sensenbrenner

Several track and field records are in danger of being shattered at the coming Hilltop Relays May 10 at Magly Field, Coach Rufe Glass believes.

He stated that the 440-yard dash record was almost sure to fall as Bob Cooper, star Negro speedster from Central, should run it in less than the present record time of 53 seconds.

The 220 dash is also in imminent danger, Glass said, as Bill Smith, also from Central, and Don Eitle of West have been timed around the 22.2 second mark. Campbell of North may break his pole vault mark set last year. He managed 11 feet 4 inches at the relays last year.

It has been learned that the trophies to be presented at the relays are of permanent possession and not rotating prizes. They are to be given to the schools which finish first and second in the meet. Trophies will also be presented to the winning teams in the Junior High Relays.

A gold track shoe will be awarded to the individual high point man of the meet. Each trophy will have an ivory base with a Sun Ray finish. The championship trophy will stand 15½ inches high with the runner-up trophy standing 12½ inches high. A figure of a track man will be at the top of each trophy.

Tickets for this only night track meet of the season will cost 35c. The gates of Magly Field will open at 6:15. The field events will start at 6:30 p. m.

PTA Notes

St. Aloysius PTA will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday, May 5, at 2:30 p. m. in the school annex. The Girl Scout and Brownie troops will entertain with songs and dances and a display of their handicraft.

Election of officers will be held and the first grade chairmen, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Skufza, Mrs. Hassey, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Wilson, will serve refreshments.

West Junior Notches Two More City Loop Victories

By Dave Miller

West Junior's baseball nine notched two more City Junior High League wins in its collective belt last week and therefore remained one of the three unbeaten Junior High League nines in three sets of games. The other two are Everett and Barrett.

On Tuesday they defeated Mound, handily, 5 to 1, on the local diamond and on Friday they downed Roosevelt, 5 to 0, on the Aquinas field.

In the Tuesday tilt, Mound tallied its only run in its half of the first off Right-Hander Bob Thornton. The locals tied it up in the first when Jimmy Vincent, a seventh grader for the locals, playing shortstop, walked, advanced on a passed ball, moved to third on an infield out, and scored on an error.

Tie Is Broken

They broke the tie in the fourth with two away after Jimmy Vincent again walked and another error in the infield advanced him, and the little shortstop scored on Bob Thornton's timely single. In the fifth, three straight singles by Russ Gardner, Durwood Vincent and Jimmy Vincent, along with a walk and two errors, tallied three more runs for the Broncos in the inning to sew up the game.

In the Roosevelt tilt, it was Lefty Fred Laderer who paced the way for the locals by pitching shutout ball, allowing only four hits, and striking out 10 batters.

The Broncos scored in the third when Laderer singled, advanced on a walk to Vincent and Hutchison and scored after the catch of Waalt Meredith's drive to right field.

Two more runs came through in the fourth when Dick Orr, batting for Easterly, singled, but was forced at second by Laderer. Jim Vincent was safe on an error by Roosevelt's shortstop and Dick Hutchison doubled down the right field line to clear the bases.

Final Run In Sixth

Run No. 4 came in the fifth when Eddie Gliebs singled, stole second, came to third on Durwood Vincent's life on another Roosevelt error, and Gliebs scored on Bob Thornton's triple to right-center. In the final inning, the sixth, the Junior Cowboys scored their final run on a single, two errors and a passed ball.

The locals are scheduled to visit Starling at the State Hospital field this afternoon, and they will visit Crestview Tuesday, May 10, on the Indianola field to end the league season.

In a practice tilt last Wednesday afternoon, the locals downed Upper Arlington Junior, 5 to 1.

The line scores:

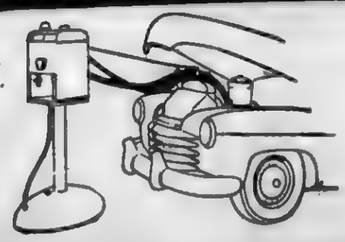
Mound 100 000	1	2	5
West Junior 100 18x	3	6	1

Grossin, Finnerty (7) and Martin; Thornton and Meredith.

West Junior 001 211	5	8	0
Roosevelt 000 000	0	4	7



Laderer and Meredith; Keller and Yorde.

Mrs. Lucy Caldwell, Veteran Baseball Scorekeeper, 'Retires'

By Myron T. Seifert

West Side and Hilltop baseball fans in particular will miss the familiar face of Scorekeeper Mrs. Lucy Caldwell at Red Bird games this spring and summer, following her announcement of "retirement" last week. For 32 years she was official scorekeeper in Columbus amateur and semi-pro baseball.

Mrs. Caldwell began her career as a scorekeeper in the Saturday Afternoon League back in 1916 and since that time she has officiated in numerous softball and baseball games.

The veteran woman athletic enthusiast also will retire from her duties at the Industrial Commission, where she has been employed for the past 33 years. Her retirement from her position will take place July 1.

After her retirement Mrs. Caldwell will visit her brother in New York City and then make a trip to Denver, Colo.

In announcing her retirement as a scorekeeper, Mrs. Caldwell said: "I have enjoyed my association with the boys I have known in the Saturday Afternoon League since I started in 1916 and certainly shall miss them. I really love baseball more than any other game and shall attend all the games I can whenever I am in Columbus."

A preacher was asked how large his congregation was. The clergyman said, "Two hundred." Then he was asked, "Is there much activity in the church. Is it a real going concern?" "Yes, suh," the preacher replied. "A hundred's for me and a hundred's against me."

Believe me, every man has his secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

Savings, Production Called Remedies for High Prices

By O. M. Craft
(Second of a Series)

A short time ago it was suggested down at Washington that a reduction of 10 per cent in prices straight across the board would enable people to buy more. It might have been a better suggestion that people straight across the board save 10 per cent so they would have more to buy with, or better still raise production 10 per cent. Prices are not adjusting themselves on any such silly procedure.

In any commodity you can think of, more will have to be produced than people are willing to absorb at prices asked, or there will have to be a combination of reluctance to buy with increasing supply. I happen to be in the real estate business. Great changes have taken place during the past year, although it still is almost impossible to rent a house or an apartment. One year ago if I had a listing it did not make much difference what it was or what the price, if I could deliver it, two or three people were ready to buy it. Today houses will sometimes stand vacant four to six weeks before being taken, and not altogether because of the price being asked. Buyers' reluctance, plus difficult financing and the dwindling number who are in a sufficiently strong cash position to meet the requirements are the chief factors.

Autos Absorb Reserves

The automobile is absorbing cash reserves at a rapid rate; it is the one commodity which does not seem to have run up against stiff buyer resistance. There are still many people who would prefer to live in one room and have an automobile than have a six-room house and no automobile. It's their choice of what matters. Deferred payment on automobiles has become quite a sizeable sum, still growing at a rapid rate. The greater proportion of these purchasers will be out of the market for other commodities, aside from food, shelter and clothing, for some time to come.

Very few people have ever won out by gambling on a lucky strike to wipe out accrued shortages caused by expensive and wasteful habits. If they did recover, it was on a basis of buckling down to personal management; and if they had the fortitude to succeed it turned out to be a lot of fun and satisfaction in accomplishment.

We have come into possession of so many new instruments for modern living, and so rapid has been our reaching out for added thrill and achievement that we have failed to learn how to realize the most out of the things we have.

Perhaps we have lost the art of living. We have driven ourselves until we are all but shattered, and our perspectives are clouded. Money does less and less of the things our growing habits demand. The page we have been writing is about full. Soon we will turn to writing a new one. We have explored the glories of high living and in many respects have found it wanting. Wisecracking witticisms have been widely explored. Copycatting has all but destroyed our personalities. Our dependence upon a Santa Claus government has withered our ambitions until initiative is hamstrung. We have been living a paradox of the first magnitude. There is a vast difference between mis-directed driving force enmasse and a managed determination of composite individuals.

Rifled From Moorings

Economic quackery, derivatives of social science and political economy, has pulled us from our moorings, and our safety and security depend upon it. Science and invention will go right on, minds will be keener; the big improvement will come in attitude and use. We will be more considerate and discriminating of persons and things. The channel of thought will find it easier to solve that which might have seemed insolvable. Politicians, instead of taking it upon themselves to melt the heart of business, will find themselves seeking the mourner's bench.

If government by law is to survive, those who administer the law must live a worthy example of its benefits.

Evidence of thinking about the laws of cause and effect is taking form, though not too perceptible, we may expect to see a lot of sail trimming for new wind that is blowing. Those who can't adjust themselves are going to find the way hard.

The field of political science and government is going to be no playground from here on out. The rank and file are going to become more articulate in their disapproval of legal dishonesty and this goes for special groups too that think they must have everything their own way regardless of how it affects other people. The yardstick will be a growing sense of fairness and less monkey-business. We have had plenty of the latter and it has brought nothing but woes, individually and collectively.

Sees Education Changes

Our educational system will get a good going over. Lower grades will revert to fundamentals so that a youngster will at least know his multiplication tables when he graduates from high school. Higher schools of learning will teach what students go there to learn in half the time it takes now by eliminating the non-essentials and breaking down the strangle hold of formalism that deadens the senses.

Movie moguls and $500,000 per year salaries are going out the window unless there is a great change in that corner. For years second and third rate stuff has been grinding out a visual education to youngsters and oldsters, too, for that matter. The movie houses have been packed with kids, ages 8 to 20, who have fed upon the cheap side of life until they have gotten so they will not sit through a picture any more unless the subject matter is some crime of violence.

It's no wonder juvenile delinquency is a growing problem. We have been dumb enough to feed upon this kind of stuff until we don't know how to break it up. We ruin a handful of people by paying them to perform for us at fantastic wages, eventually, one by one, bringing them to ruin. Hollywood has glamorized bad taste beyond the pale of decency.

Yet who is it that supports such antics? The public in most cases—the very same people who howl at the infraction of the moral code or social ethics. The most distressing thing that can be said of us is that we have not been very consistent. Good pictures are possible and once in a while one is turned out. It is a wonderful way to teach.

Navy Seeking Stenographers In Columbus

The Navy Department is urgently in need of stenographers for civilian positions in the nation's capital. Katherine Grant and Mabel Prophett, navy representatives from Washington, D. C., are in Columbus to interview interested applicants.

The positions are in navy bureaus dealing with scientific research, aeronautics, ships, and with the Marine Corps. Salaries range from $2284 to 2498 a year. To qualify for these positions, applicants must be able to type 40 words a minute and take dictation at the rate of 80 words a minute. Persons accepted will earn 26 working days paid vacation a year and, in addition, are allowed 15 days paid sick leave a year.

Living expenses are no higher in Washington than they are elsewhere, the navy representatives say, and housing is guaranteed at $24.50 a month in the government residence halls for girls. Girls who work for the navy may participate in the navy department's recreation program, which includes tennis, bowling, movies, dances and other activities.

Applicants are being interviewed at the navy recruiting office, New Post Office Building, fifth floor, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and at other times by special appointment. For further information, phone MA. 6411, extension 298, or MA. 8844, extension 1.

It's Y Drive Time Again

Numerous residents of the community have received letters asking financial support for the Hilltop YMCA for another year. Regular voting membership requires a payment of $5 which goes toward the operating expenses of the organization here. Anything over this amount goes into the building fund.

In the past year of operation the local Y has become better established and reached out to provide services for a large number of youngsters in the community. Most recent of the expanded activities has been the establishment of ten grade school Y clubs which provide weekly meetings and programs for a large number of grade school age boys. The recent addition of a hobby and plastics department at the Y building is also being well patronized.

Now that softball time is here again a lot of high school age boys will have an opportunity to enter league competition which might otherwise not have been possible. Numerous groups of oldsters are also availing themselves of the Y building for a meeting place.

These are but a few of the activities of the Hilltop Y. It is merely a beginning. The current year will find this list expanded many times as additional volunteer leadership is made available.

But those of us who visualize the fine type of program that can be made available here in a period of four to five years of growth realize full well that the wheels must be set in motion now to collect money that can be used for building purposes. Last year nearly $2000 went into this fund as a starter. This year it is hoped this nest egg will grow many times over that figure. It is desired that more and more substantial citizens and business firms and organizations of the Hilltop will realize what an asset the Y can be to the Hilltop and will start making annual contributions to the building fund. Now is a good time to start. All such contributions are deductible from your income tax, too, which lightens the burden of any such gift.

Members of the Y board and a large number of volunteer solicitors were busy starting to make a canvass of the community. Your generous response will be appreciated. The ultimate realization of a successful Y program here and the erection of proper facilities will be a real asset to the Hilltop and consequently be one more item that adds to real estate values here.

If you are not solicited soon, make it a point to see a member of the Y board and advise him of your desire to subscribe or better yet offer your services in assisting with the drive.

'Action' Promised At Relays

By Eddie Sensenbrenner

Plenty of action will take place from 7 p. m. until 9:25 on West High's Magly Field next Tuesday night as the Hilltop Relays will be in its third annual running.

With field events starting at 7 o'clock and running events a half hour later, the meet will follow a fast and furious pace as events are scheduled in rapid order.

Coach Rufe Glass, who originated the relays three years ago, believes that this one will be the best ever.

Central Pirates are the defending champions. They nosed out West for the championship last year. They are favored to take the honors, as they are once again a powerhouse in the track sport.

The order and time schedule of events:

7 p. m.—All field events; shot put, discus throw, high jump, broad jump and pole vault.
7:30—120-yard high hurdles.
7:40—100-yard dash.
7:45—880-yard run.
8:05 — 880-yard relay (junior high).
8:15 — 880-yard relay (senior high).
8:25—440-yard dash.
8:35—Shuttle-hurdle relay.
8:50—Two-mile relay.
9:00—220-yard dash.
9:05—Mile-relay.
9:15 — 440-yard-relay (junior high).
9:25 — 440-yard-relay (senior high).

Queens Selected

At an election held last Thursday afternoon, the West track squad elected the queens who will reign at the Relays. Five lovely girls were selected: Marilyn Valentine, Betty Roederer, Sue Glass, Pat Bates and Dolly Charas.

These girls will present the winners their ribbons and trophies.

Gates open at 6:30 p. m. with tickets on sale at the gate for 35c.

Only one contestant from each high school will be permitted in individual track events, with two contestants from each school permitted in the field events. One team may be entered in each relay from each school.

In order to speed up the relays only four tries for each contestant will be permitted in each field event.

Chances Damaged

Central's chances in the "Relays" were badly damaged last Saturday when Bob Cooper, star sprint man, pulled a muscle in his leg while competing in the Ohio Wesleyan Relays. Cooper is the defending individual high point champion. His injury will hurt Central in three relay events, the mile, 440, and 880 relays, besides the 440-yard dash. Cooper was just recovering from an ankle injury at the time. It is very doubtful if he will be able to run by Tuesday.

Pop, popcorn, ice cream and candy will be sold at popular prices at the relays by the 12B senior class. The 12B's are selling concessions at the spring sports this year for a money-making project.

A band concert will enliven

Work Starts Soon On Shelterhouse At Westgate Park

Work will be started immediately on the new $12,500 shelter house for Westgate Park, City Recreation Department officials reported Wednesday.

Work on the new structure has been let to contractors Brock, Sanders, and Westlake, officials said.

The new improvement program slated for Westgate Park is part of an over-all city recreation program planned for the next two years.

The contract let calls for a concrete one floor structure, with cement floor, which will include office space, a small play area, storerooms, and toilet facilities.

Arrangements have been made to clean the present playground of debris and to improve the tennis courts and wading pool. A new hard surface play area will be installed some time this spring.

Work will be started soon on other West Side recreation centers, according to recreation directors. Relocation and installation of playground equipment at Glenwood, Sunshine and Westgate Playgrounds, a new swimming pool at Sunshine Park, developing of new playgrounds at Columbian, construction of a hard-surface play area at Glenwood, and modernization of wading pool at Sunshine, are a few of the improvements scheduled for this year.

High-Flying West Nine Takes a Rest

By Dave Miller

West High's baseball nine, co-leaders in the City League race, will take a well-needed rest the remainder of this week and part [illegible] playing three games in three evenings the earlier part of this week.

On Monday, the Cowboys won over Grandview for their first win of the Central District Class A baseball championship; on Tuesday, the turned in a well-earned win over South, 7 to 3, and yesterday they lost out in the tournament to Marion Harding, 10 to 3. All three of these games were at West.

In Tuesday's encounter, the West sluggers made the great pitchin' Paul Ebert of South just look like another twirler as they slammed him for nine blows in six innings. Jack Pickens, Bob Birle and Jack Winnestaffer paced the hitting attack on Ebert, each getting two blows.

Young Allows Five Hits

The Cowboys got three in the first, and two each in the second and third and that was all they needed as Phil Young, West's mound ace, was allowing the Bulldogs only five hits throughout his seven innings.

In the first inning, Jack Pickens, leadoff man, popped out to third-baseman Pat Dalton, but Ebert walked Dave Caton and Dick Culbertson, and then, before he knew it, he was three runs behind.

He worked the count down to 3-2 on West's big slugger, Dick Kirk, and on the next pitch Kirk sent it sailing high and far into the football stadium deep in left field for a three-run homer.

Morris Dobbs grounded out and Bob Birke singled, but Jerry Solinger flied out to end the inning.

The Cowboys got to Ebert again in the second when Win-

Hilltop Boys' Voices Help Swell Chorus of Boychoir

By Myron T. Seifert

When you hear the trained voices of the Columbus Boychoir at a concert or via radio, you are listening to a dozen Hilltop boys, along with many others, who have been selected by virtue of their natural musical aptitude, beauty of voice, character and scholarship, to become members of a singing group in many ways unique.

These boys will take part in the annual concert May 11 at Memorial Hall, Eleanor Boardman, publicity agent for the group said today.

The concert, which is always looked forward to eagerly by residents of the community, will be divided into three groups. The first group will be sung in vestments and will consist of early polyphonic church music and a ceremony of carols. The second part will be a Mozart operetta in costume. The third will be made up of semi-classical and popular music.

The alumni chorus will sing with the boys in the first and last group. Herbert Huffman is director and founder of the school. Richard Johnson is assistant musical director and Dwight L. Musselman is headmaster of the school.

Excellence Established

The musical excellence of the Boychoir has established it as one of the finest singing groups in America. Radio helped give the choir its national reputation, and the praise heaped upon the choir by music critics has confirmed it. At first the boys made frequent appearances on local Columbus stations and then were featured on many CBS programs, commercial and sustaining.

In the third year of the school (spring, 1943) the choir sang its way to fame. The boys had been singing as frequently as possible around Columbus to enlist interest in the school but up to then, their reputation was local.

One day Siegfried Hearst, a representative of the National Concerts and Artists Corp., passed through Columbus and dropped in on a rehearsal. He was delighted at the musical excellence of the choir and insisted on an immediate New York debut for the boys.

The choir went—as they went

Beekeeping Lesson At John Burroughs Strictly Impromptu

Pupils at John Burroughs School got an unscheduled lesson in beekeeping Tuesday morning.

When the children arrived on the school grounds they were met by a swarm of bees which had gathered around a hive placed in the playground. Police Cruiserman Ray McClain was summoned, but he admitted he was baffled as to how to move the swarm.

Max Shipley, 706 S. Ogden-av, a taxidermist and former beekeeper, had the answer, however. He simply picked up the hive and carried it to a nearby home where it belonged.

Turns out that the owner of the bees had moved the hive to the schoolyard when the swarm had decided to leave home. He was just trying to keep his bees together, he said. Police advised that he think up some way of keeping his honey-makers at home.

Conservation Club Planning Clubhouse

Preliminary plans were made Tuesday night for the financing of the proposed new clubhouse by members of the Hilltop Conservation Club at a meeting held at the Hilltop Sporting Goods Co., 2461 W. Broad-st.

Site of the proposed clubhouse is expected to be a tract of land along Big Darby Creek. The club has taken an option on the land. Marion Moseley, president of the organization, reports that he expects the land to be taken over by the club in June.

Initial plans show the grounds adjoining the clubhouse will be improved to include a trap shooting range, a rifle range, a ball diamond and a picnic area.

West High's 'Grand Old Man' To Pass 76th Milestone May 12

By Myron T. Seifert

Otto H. Magly, West High's "grand old man" and founder of the Hilltop school, will pass another milestone in his busy life next Thursday.

Mr. Magly, who lives in Kenyon Brook-dr, Worthington, will be 76 years old on that day.

For 27 years of Mr. Magly's three-score and 16 years, he directed the destinies of West High School as principal.

Mr. Magly originally studied for the ministry. He was graduated by Baldwin Wallace College in 1895 with a Ph. B degree. In the same year he began teaching at East High School, where he organized the commercial training department and coached the baseball squad. In the latter capacity he was especially successful, winning a championship, defeating the Ohio State University nine, and having the Columbus professional team refuse to play his aggregation.

At that time East High occupied the second floors of the Felton and Ohio Elementary Schools. In April of 1898, the schools moved into a new building, [illegible] Franklin, and the first of three new structures Mr. Magly was destined to enter as a member of the faculty.

Ten years later he was appointed principal of West High School on Central-av.

In February, 1929, the present edifice was opened on S. Powell-av., Mr. Magly watched 3,000 high school youths pass from under his supervision and file on into the outer world. His name is engraved both on the parchments of their diplomas and on the hearts of his boys and girls.

13 Unlucky? Midland Ave. Mother of 13 Calls Mother's Day One of Thanksgiving

Raising 13 children is no easy job but Mrs. Everett M. Grabill, 119 Midland-av, smilingly has proved that hard work reaps its own satisfaction.

Today the mother of seven sons and six daughters, Mrs. Grabill has much to be thankful for as Mother's Day approaches.

Holidays are family reunion days in the Grabill household. Last Thanksgiving all members of the family were present to enjoy the well-basted Thanksgiving turkey "that only Mom could prepare." All are looking forward to the family meal on Mother's Day.

The 13 children of the Grabills range in age from eight to 27 years. Mother Grabill's greatest worry came during the past war when five of her sons, Rex, 27, Carl, 26, Jerry, 24, Ray, 22, and Paul, 21, left to answer the call to duty.

Besides taking care of her children Mother Grabill is an active schoolyard and church member. She is a member of the Glenwood Unit of the Blue Star mothers, of which she is sales tax chairman. All money collected under her supervision is used exclusively for the veterans at the Chillicothe Hospital.

The following roster of the Grabills names and identifies each member of the family.

Mrs. Everett Grabill

Rex: Married Gloria Fox from Seattle, Wash. Lives in Detroit, where he is personnel manager of the Ferry Morse Seed Co.

Carl: Married Nora Dwyer, former West High student. Lives in Valleyview. He is an auditor for the Ohio National Bank.

Jerry: Married June Theall from New Orleans, La. Has one son, Bill. They are now living in Fayetteville, N. C.

Ray: Engaged to be married in September to June Sturgeon from New California. Lives at home. He is associated with the Gulf Oil Co.

Paul, 21 is associated with the Shell Oil Co. in Columbus.

Phyllis, 19, is private secretary to the advertising manager at Cussins & Fearn Co.

Ann, 17, Lee, 16, and Nyla, 14, are students at West High School.

Her four youngest children, Clara, 11, Nancy, 10, Mary, 8, and Dean, 7, all attend Highland Avenue School.

Father Grabill, who has welcomed his responsibility, is a city policeman with 23 years service behind him.

Scottish Bride-to-be Visits Hilltop; Plans Wedding in England in June

Miss Jean Faull, pretty Scottish bride-to-be, left this week from the home of her fiance's aunt, Edith Dines, 145 S. Harris-av, for England, where she will make plans for her wedding there, June 9.

Jean's marriage will climax a five year friendship and a whirlwind courtship, which began in November, 1948, when she came to the States to visit relatives.

She first met her fiance, Edward W. Hope, of Greenfield in Gahuti, India in December, 1943, where he was stationed with the 82nd Quartermaster Battalion. Miss Faull was living in India with her parents, her father being employed as a river boat agent at the time.

The couple corresponded, but it wasn't until five years later that they met again, this time in the states. She visited Edward and his father in Greenfield and on January 21, they announced their engagement at his parents' home.

A graduate of Ohio State University, Edward is now junior high coach and mathematics instructor at Hamilton Township High School.

Jean is a graduate of Cheltenham College for Ladies and a business school. Her father is associated with the Mine Evaluation Board of the Scottish government.

While on the Hilltop, Jean visited Edward's cousin, Mrs. David Brown, 145 S. Harris-av.

Plenty of Action Promised For Hilltop Relays Tuesday

activities at the relays. The band, making its first outdoor appearance under the direction of its new director, Clair Barnard, will play from 7 to 7:30.

The Shuttle-hurdle relay will again be held on the grass of the football field, where it was held last year. This relay has proved the most popular event in previous meets as it is seldom seen by most fans.

As the gun sounds, contestants start off at one end of the field; when they reach the other end a second man starts back; when the second man reaches the original starting point, a third man carries on until he reaches the other terminal point, where the fourth and anchor man races for the finish line and glory.

West won this event last year, but has small chance to retain it this year, as their entire team which set a record last year has been graduated.

Clarence Bateman, popular shop instructor at West, has been busy getting the field in shape. Mr. Bateman has a crew of boys who have been working hard in order to spruce up the grounds for this meet.

All of the City League teams will be in action except Aquinas, which does not have a track team. This leaves Central, East, North, South, Linden and West to battle it out for the trophy.

Bob Cromwell, a West senior, who did such a fine job of announcing last year's relays, will again serve in this capacity.

Former Students To Race

Some former West students will be running for other schools at the relays. Gibby Winebar is probably the best known of the former students who will be seen in action next Tuesday. Gib is a good hurdler for South. He recently won both hurdle events in a dual meet with West. He also high jumps.

Sammy Ellis, a dash man for East, was a letter winner on the cinders for West last year, but he has since moved to East.

Bob Roshon, a South pole vaulter, also got his start in track at West.

Bill Hariston and Sandy Hariston two "real fine" track men from Central are not related to each other as is commonly believed. Both also play on Central's basketball team.

Former OSU Star and Olympic Runner Charles Beetham will serve as starter for the meet.

Eitle To Be Pressed

Don Eitle, who is unbeaten so far this season in his specialties, the 100- and 220-yard dashes, will need all the speed he can beg, buy, borrow, or steal when he comes up against Bill Smith of Central, who is "plenty" fast.

Smith, Eitle, Minus Sowards of East, Bill Hariston and Sandy Hariston are the ones likely to battle it out for the gold track shoe which is given to the individual high point winner of the meet. Bob Cooper of Central won the honor last year.

The Hilltop Relays afford the business people of the Hilltop a chance to see the West athletes in action as it is run at night. It is the only night track meet scheduled this season.

"Campbell, North High star pole vaulter, is likely to prove the sensation of the meet," is the opinion voiced by West Coach Rufe Glass. Campbell set the present relays mark last year when he vaulted 11 feet, 4 inches. He has consistently bettered that this year and can do 12 feet on his good days.

Track managers add much to the success of the team. Serving this season are Wes Edstrom, Ronald Guyton, Joe Wallace and Jim Snyder.

West High Nine Earns Brief Rest

nestaffer and Young both singled and Pickeds attempted a sacrifice. However, he beat it out for a hit and the sacks were full with none gone. Dave Caton hit to First-Baseman Dick Ruh, who threw to catcher Christ Treneff, forcing out Winnestaffer.

Bulldog Muffs Grounder

With the infield playing in to cut off a West run, Dick Culbertson hit a hard grounder to Second-Sacker Dick Wagner, who muffed it bringing home Young with run No. 4. Dick Kirk then filed deep to Clyde Trumbull in center field, with Pickens scoring from third after the catch.

South got to Phil Young in its half of the third when Pat Dalton, first batter up, walked. Bill Camp singled to center, sending him to second. Dick Ruh then hit to Dave Caton at second base, who touched the sack and threw to Culbertson at first for a double-play, sending Dalton to third. Ebert plated him on the first pitch with a single to right. Chris Treneff singled, and Ed Lindsey walked to load the sacks, but Young forced Wagner to ground out to end the enning with only one run.

Score Two In Third

The Cowboys made it 7-1 with two more tallies in their half of the third. Solinger and Winnestaffer both singled, and Young's bouncer back to Ebert advanced the runners to second and third, where Pickens quickly delivered a single to bring home two runs. From there on, Ebert was almost invincible with only two men reaching base against him, Birle with a single in the fourth, and Kirk on a walk in the sixth.

South picked up two runs on just one hit in the fifth when Dick Ruh walked, and both he and Ebert were safe when Caton dropped Pickens' toss to second in an effort to start a twin killing. Treneff then sent both runners home with a long triple to left-center field. With still none away, Young walked Ed Lindsey, who on the next pitch stole second. Young struck out Bob Hewitt, a pinch hitter, on three pitches, and Trumbull lined to Shortstop Jack Pickens, who tossed to Dave Caton, standing on second base for a double-play, making the second time that West's keystone combination bad got Young out of holes with double plays.

Marion Hurler Is Master

In the Marion game, it was simply the superbe pitching of Right-Hander Don Johnson that turned the trick. He held the West sluggers to a mere three hits, downing them, 10-3.

Paul Ellingsworth, the starter on the hill for the Cowboys, was knocked out of the box in the first inning when Harding scored five runs on a walk to Jim Wolfe and Bob Seiter. Big George Stoffer forced Seiter at second, but Wolfe came home on Third-Baseman Winnestaffer's error. Two singles by Jim Cramer and Dick Thomas plated two more home. Jim Hamrick then replaced Ellingsworth on the hill and Jack Daum hit his first pitch for a single to center, scoring Thomas, who had stolen second, Hamrick then got pitcher Johnson on a strike-out to end the inning.

They scored two more in the second on two walks, a duo of wild pitches and a single by Merle Daum, and making it 9-0 in the third on a walk, fielders choice, triple by Johnson and a double by "Squint" Rossberry, the latter being cut down, Kirk to Pickens to Winnestaffer attempting to make it a triple. In the fifth, the visitors tallied their tenth run on Jack Daum's single and Johnson's double.

Meanwhile, Johnson was setting the Cowboys down with only one hit, that a broken-bat single by Winnestaffer in the third. However, the locals finally got to Johnson in the sixth for two runs. Relief Pitcher Bill South walked, advanced two bases on Third-Baseman Jim Wolfe's two-base error, and scored on a wild pitch. Pickens came in a moment later on Culbertson's single to left field. The third run came in the seventh when South singled, after Ed Easterly had walked and the later scored on another wild pitch, the third of the game by Johnson.

The Cowboys are idle until next Tuesday when they play host to East's Tigers to start the second round in the City League.

"Someday Bill Will Thank You . . ."
So said the Sun Life Agent when he delivered my son Bill's Junior Adjustable policy — but he didn't have to tell me that. I know what a help it would have been to me if, when I was twenty-one, I had been given a life assurance policy that could be continued as Whole Life, Life Paid-up at 65, or Endowment at the same age, for as much as five times the original amount without increasing the premium. Especially when that premium was based on rates for a child. I didn't have this great advantage, but I'm making sure my son has it. How about you?

Jesus Clashes With Authority — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 11:27-12:44.

As Jesus was walking in the temple chief priests and scribes asked Him by what authority He performed miracles. He asked them one they dared not answer, and He refused to answer them.

Jesus told a parable of a man who planted a vineyard, and when the harvest was due he sent servants to collect, but the husbandmen beat or killed them, and even slew his only son.

The Pharisees were sent to ask Jesus was it lawful to pay tribute to Caesar. Asking for a coin, and seeing Caesar's head depicted thereon, He told them to render to Caesar his due.

Near the treasury, Jesus saw a poor widow casting in two mites—her all. He told His followers she gave more than the rich—all she had.

everywhere at the time—wondering how the expenses would be met, and apprehensive of their reception. So under the direction of Herbert Huffman, the choir made its eastern debut at Town Hall in May. They were acclaimed as a choir and praised as gentlemen.

Make Transcriptions

From this outstanding success they received a special request from the State Department in Washington to make a series of radio transcriptions for distributing in Latin America, and their laurels became international.

In the spring of 1946 the Columbus Boychoir went on its first organized tour through the East and won the plaudits of music critics wherever it sang.

Perhaps the boys' own choice as their most outstanding accomplishment would be the meeting with Albert Einstein. When they discovered that Princeton was on the itinerary, they clamored to see the great scientist in person. Huffman, of course, laughed and said that many Princetonians had never had that opportunity. Refusing to take "no" for an answer, a group of the more adventuresome spirits in the choir revealed their desire to a local minister and by some deed of under-cover diplomacy, Einstein was persuaded to desert his work for a moment. Their wish granted, the boys showed their appreciation by performing the Sanctus by Chesnehoff.

Turn and Go Back

The boys had no sooner returned from their triumphant tour of the east when a wire arrived from the program committee of the National Chamber of Commerce requesting a concert at their Atlantic City convention. The Boychoir has always taken advantage of every opportunity, so the buses were turned around and the motors roared for Atlantic City. As with previous performances, the Boychoir proved to be the highlight of the convention.

The Boychoir itinerary included more than 40 concert engagements, traveling as far east as Worcester, Mass., and as far west as Breinard, Minn., winning the sincere praise of the critics and delighting thousands of music lovers across the country.

After the boys' New York debut and the Latin American transcriptions, Columbus began to perk up its ears. People were talking about the famous choir in their own backyard. The Broad Street Presbyterian Church donated quarters to the school and the future assumed a rosier glow.

Columbus, never slow to recognize talent, pledged funds for the maintenance of the school and from other sections of the country came contributions to further the work of the school. By 1946 two-thirds of the salaries had been paid back with the remainder in the offing. Through the generosity of its firm believers, the school, which started on faith and a $6,000 budget, has now embarked on a building campaign and during the past year over $100,000 of the $150,000 needed has been raised.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

Member of AA Plans Talk At West Tuesday

A successful Columbus business man and member of Alcoholics Anonymous by virtue of assistance given him during his days of alcoholism, will be guest speaker of the West High Allied Youth Movement meeting at the Hilltop school at 8 p. m. Tuesday in room 317, to which the public is invited, adviser of the Allied group, Orrie Lehman, said today.

This is another part of the Allied Youth program to bring to West High pupils temperance education, Mr. Lehman said.

Alcoholic Anonymous is a mutual group of ex-drinkers banded together in groups, or sometimes working alone, to help fellow drinkers recover their health.

The organization requires no foes from its members and has no officers. Experience gained from the "AA" principles are passed on to other alcoholics in need of attention.

Approaching the problem introspectively the recouperated alcoholic has learned much from medicine and psychiatry in his search for cures and attributes much of his recovery to "spiritual principles common to all creeds."

Four Top Salesmen for Postcard Pictures of West High School

MOST ENERGETIC in the sale of 2500 photographs of West High School were four Junior High pupils (left to right): Mary Haudenschield, Gayle Acker, Carole Cristee and Phyllis Phillips.

West High School, especially the Junior High department, is well represented in practically every Hilltop home, since a campaign of selling 2500 photographs of the exterior of West High School in postcard form by West High Student Council members was launched.

Money derived from the sale of these pictures was divided between the junior student council and the Junior High School general fund to be used exclusively for school purposes.

Five rooms, according to Student Council Adviser Mary Baker, sold in excess of 100 post cards each; 138D, Mrs. Velma Millhone, teacher; 138E, Mrs. Winifred Hughes, teacher; 231, Mrs. Margaret Harold, teacher; 237, A. W. Elliot; 239, Edna Smith.

Top individual salesmen included Mary Haudenschield, Gayle Acker, Carole Cristee and Phyllis Phillips.

Arthur Miller, industrial arts teacher, promoted the sale of the pictures, mounting them artistically on paper pennants.

Mr. Gillespie's Indian name is Matoska meaning White Bear.

Everyone's Chance to Help

It's only a few minutes of each motorist's time which is asked next Tuesday, but those few minutes, multiplied by thousands, will repay everyone many times over in the years to come in time and tempers saved.

The city, county and state highway departments are co-operating Tuesday in an Origin and Destination Survey in Columbus and Franklin County. Every person driving a car, truck or bus will be asked to make a record on a postage-free card of every trip he makes that day.

What is to be gained by such a survey? Information on the flow of traffic in the county, information which can lead to some solution for the pressing traffic problems which are increasing our communal blood-pressure month-by-month.

It is seldom the average motorist has an opportunity, aside from exercising everyday caution, to do anything about traffic problems. This is your chance to contribute your mite which, added to the small contributions of others can give our traffic engineers a basis on which to untangle our traffic snarls.

No one has any basis for complaint if he will not act when he has an opportunity to help. We are confident the Hilltop will co-operate to the fullest in next week's survey.

Not So Funny

A theatre usher walked down the aisle and whispered to a man in the fifth row. Then the usher and the man walked toward the exit together.

"What's the matter?" one of the spectators asked the usher. "Are they putting him out for laughing too hard?"

"No," replied the usher, "the manager sent for him to find out what he was laughing at."

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

SYNOPSIS

Porter Parish has become so disagreeable to his wife, Beatrice, and their child, Marianne, that divorce seems inevitable. She realizes that her husband is not happy under the crue dominance of his employer, Mr. Ramey, a rich grasping industrialist. She receives patiently that their child shall not be the victim of a broken home like poor frustrated Jane, teen-age daughter of Ray's best friend, Libby. One afternoon Ray meets Libby's latest swain, David Jordan, whom she finds "dangerously" attractive. More and more enslaved to Mr. Ramey's selfish whims, Beatrice begins to rebel.

CHAPTER EIGHT

BEATRICE and Marianne were in the latter's room when Jane arrived the following afternoon, and Beatrice knew that Marianne's arithmetic lesson was over.

"Hi," Jane said. "Mother dropped me off but she was in such a hurry she couldn't come in. I'll just put my bag in the guest room I always use. I'm a little early but, well, you see, Mother wanted to bring me and it gets dark so early now and everything."

Libby's daughter spoke quietly. She spoke almost as if she apologized for herself, as if indeed she apologized for being alive. Though she dressed as did all of her contemporaries—the pleated plaid skirt, the hooded jacket, the inevitable sweater under the jacket—and though in the small face with the chestnut-colored eyes there was promise of startling beauty, Jane was unhappily, Beatrice feared, quite different from the girls she knew at school. It was not only that Libby refused to permit her to have simple movie dates with boys of her own age, but also as if Jane were overshadowed by her more vivid and vivacious mother. And Jane, liking books and genuinely interested in her piano studies, had uncomplainingly acquiesced to Libby's insistence that she remain a child. Beatrice recalled now amused Libby had been when Jane had asked if she could be a "sitter" because so many of the girls she knew did it of necessity for spending money. Beatrice had been pleased that Jane didn't want to be classified as being too rich—Libby's parents had left her a sizable fortune—to do the things that other girls did.

Yet of late Beatrice had seen Jane's deep dark eyes turn wistfully to the house next door to which young Paul Mather came home for weekends from boarding school. She had seen Jane and Paul meet casually in the garden, and she had known the girls suffering, the suffering of one who knows she isn't pretty or popular or appealing to boys and that the boy, eager to hurry off, is only being polite. Didn't Libby see it, too? Didn't she see that Jane was repressed and unhappy? For a girl of fifteen there was no misery greater than the feeling of being "different" and "left out."

Marianne adored her. It always took Marianne a few minutes to rise up to the occasion of being with this almost grown-up person who wore clothes that Marianne thought the most divine in the world. Marianne had insisted on saddle shoes before her feet were large enough for the smallest size made. They were still in her closet waiting for her feet to grow into them.

When Jane came back, she said, "I'm awfully glad you asked me, Bea. I was just dying for you to ask me. This is such a beautiful house. I wish . . . well, I wish we lived in a house, and not in an apartment."

"I wouldn't go to Mrs. Ramey's," Marianne said triumphantly. "I'm not going there anymore. You'll always come and stay with me when Mother and Daddy go out, won't you, Jane?" Her eyes teased Beatrice. "Do you hear that, Mother? Jane is always coming."

Jane's little laugh was too controlled, too subdued, Beatrice thought.

Jane said, "Maybe you'd like to take a walk, Marianne."

"A walk? Oh, sure, I'd love it. I'll go get my things right now."

When Marianne rushed out Jane said, "She gets such a bang out of everything, doesn't she?"

"She loves you very much, Jane."

"Really?" She seemed puzzled and embarrassed as she gave a nervous little toss of her head that stirred the almost shoulder length dark hair to motion. "I . . . I guess I love her a lot, too."

Beatrice arose. "If you like Paul while you're out walking, why not ask him in? There are some new records down in the recreation room that he might like to hear."

Jane stood still, her hands locked behind her back.

"He . . . he wouldn't come, Bea. I asked him once before." The tears were starting in her eyes when she said, "I guess it isn't very respectful of me, but I . . . well, I can't feel that you're old, Bea. I don't feel that way about Mother's other friends. Only about you. I don't know why I said it. It's silly, isn't it?"

"No, dear, I liked it. I'm enormously pleased."

"You and Porter have everything . . . just everything. And this is what I want, to be married, to have a home and children. But, of course, if it doesn't work, I suppose you . . . you just get a divorce."

You just get a divorce! Just like that, Beatrice thought! As if marriage is not intertwined with family and traditions and citizenship and religion. Have we of our generation shown marriage to be so lightly entered into without regard to family, children, state and church, that our children accept divorce as a matter of course? Take off a hat you don't like. Get rid of a husband. Whose fault is it that a girl of Jane's age says, "You just get a divorce"?

I could tell you about my mother, Beatrice thought. I could tell you why my own marriage has been sacrosanct, why I have prayed for it to endure, and why with all the love and intelligence I possess I have tried to preserve it.

Marianne, breathless, ran in. "I'm ready, let's go. Oh, Jane, you should see Mother's new dress. It has diamonds all over it!"

"Not diamonds, dear. Sequins."

"They look like diamonds. What's the difference?"

"The difference between the true and the false."

The difference between Porter and me two years ago when he came out of the Navy and as we are now estranged, our marriage in crisis. This is a house of sticks, Beatrice thought. My security is an illusion and I am sitting on a powder keg.

* * *

At seven o'clock when Martha and Bart West came, Beatrice was in the living room and Porter, who had come in late from the plant, was still dressing. Bart was one of those effervescent, hail-fellow sort of men, who was certain that it was his "personality" that sold insurance.

"You look good enough to kiss," he said to Beatrice.

"Go ahead," his wife said. "See if I care."

After Bart had given her a mild kiss on the cheek, he asked for Porter, and a drink.

Martha was small but the muscles in her thin brown arms attested to her excellent tennis game. She wore her reddish hair short, was uninterested in clothes, was about antiques, and worked indefatigably for her college alumni. She and Bart had a son and a daughter.

Selecting a straight little Victorian chair with petit point, Martha sat down and lifted her simple black dinner frock—a few of the beads were coming loose—and asked for a cigarette.

To Beatrice she said, "Remind me to sell you some tickets to a play the church is giving. It's going to staff early so the children, if they're not too young, can come."

Porter still had not come down when Rhoda and George Dalton arrived.

"That was some game today," George said, meaning a football game. "But did I need sunglasses? We had to look into the sun the whole time. Where's your boy friend, Bee?"

"He came in late from the plant," Beatrice said.

"Everything looks just beautiful," Rhoda exclaimed. "I declare I never come in this house that it doesn't look absolutely perfect. How do you do it, darlin'?"

Rhoda's gown, an anemic blue, covered her spindly legs. Her fair hair was baby-fine and softly waved, her eyes large and wide, her teeth somewhat irregular. She spoke in a hushed breathless voice as if she were always telling secrets. Sweet and solicitous, she had a vague southern background, and had had two years at a college of which no one had ever heard. She and George, a small, wiry, dark and intense young man, had a chubby boy of ten. In trying to minimize the fact that they had a great deal of money, they succeeded only in calling everyone's attention to it.

"The Good Shepherd Giveth His Life For His Sheep"

The Good Shepherd in Biblical history might be likened to our world leaders today in all of the many fields of human endeavor. Leaders must point the way to accomplishment of the most worth-while objectives.

The truly permanent things of life find their roots in the teachings of the churches and Sunday Schools of the world. Few men attain immortality without the faith that is founded on a rock, the anchor of all civilization, GOD.

We are taught that it is "more blessed to give than to receive," and the greatness of charity as a human characteristic. Leaders must serve and give. They do not reach eminence through being served and taking the cream from the top of the bottle.

International Rotary's slogan is, "He profits most who serves best." Such idealistic utterances have been scoffed at by many, but the fact remains that the greatest leader and teacher of men, Jesus Christ, won millions to His way of life, because He served and gave to humanity more than anyone in all the history of the world.

It is important that the children of today, who will be the leaders of tomorrow, be given the training that our churches have to offer. They must be taught to love their fellow men, for wars are bred by hate and selfishness. We are warned that another war would destroy civilization.

Every age of living man must be brought within the realm of God's teachings and His love. Faith founded on such a rock will produce leaders in the constructive phases of human endeavor. Love, not hate, is the only force through which humanity can survive.

Competition's Return Puts Many Back in the Market

By John Kelly
(Third in a weekly series)

Many people who were priced out of the market are finding merchandise once more within their reach, thanks to the return of competition. The increasing volume of such purchases is an important offset in our economy as it gets back to normal levels.

The latter stages of the postwar boom was marked by caution on the part of retail merchants and industrial purchasing agents alike. Every effort has been made to control and reduce inventories. Men who expect to stay in business have to be prudent, or else.

At times it seems that most of us have been preparing for the readjustment ever since those hectic years began. It is hard to see how enterprise generally could have improved its status for the inevitable change.

Reach Practicable Limit

A good many retailers already have smaller inventories than a year ago. Recent reports indicate that they have gone as far as practicable in their hand-to-mouth buying.

Manufacturers are of the opinion that some dealers have carried caution too far. These suppliers feel that some retailers surely must be losing sales because of inadequate and insufficiently varied stocks.

The present situation is a far cry from the aftermath of World War I. The cave-in of 1919-1921 was caused by the frenzied speculation in commodities, just as the debacle of 1929-1932 was touched off by wild, unreasoned get-rich-quick schemes in securities.

Those two disastrous corrections—all too fresh in our memory—collapsed because the supply of money was insufficient to finance the orgies indefinitely. There is absolutely no credit stringency today as we all know, which would require other than a gradual return to normal.

Proof of Inexorable Law

The present recession from stratospheric levels is merely proof that the inexorable law of supply and demand is still in working order. It is too infrequently recognized that it started to favor the consumer more than two years ago.

The highest priced luxuries were the first to feel the change. The transition to normal—industry by industry—has continued right on down the line to the present. The piece-meal character of our readjustment is a most reassuring strong point. Obviously, a savage deflationary period is unnecessary.

In the sense that we are coming down to earth again, certainly business has declined from the peak of the boom. But no collapse is imminent for the reason that there appears nothing available to collapse.

HOW MANY MISTAKES make everything just Ok?

PROPONENTS in Washington are urging Compulsory Health Insurance, to be financed by heavy Federal taxes on payrolls and salaries. Such a program would empower a Federal Bureau, and thousands of bureaucrats throughout the country to regiment our Doctors, Pharmacists, Hospitals, Nurses, Technicians and all health services.

Such a mistake—once enacted into law—would be hard to undo or correct. It would put tremendous power into inexperienced, political hands. No real American would advocate such a mistake, by either his silence or influence, if he realized the INEVITABLE result would be regimentation by dictatorial Federal employees . . . BUT, in addition, experience has PROVED that in countries where such mistakes have been made, health standards and quality of medical service are lowered. We have the highest health level on earth—let's KEEP it going forward!

The Legend Of The Dogwood

Three years have passed since we have printed the famed legend of the dogwood, a favorite of this department for a long time. Now that the trees are in bloom again it is appropriate to recall this story.

In the time of Christ, so the legend goes, the dogwood attained the size of the oak and other trees of the forest; and so strong was the wood of the tree that it was chosen as the member of the cross.

This of course distressed the dogwood mightily, and Jesus, sensing regret at having been chosen to serve such cruel purposes, made this promise:

"Never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used as a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted, and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross—two long and two short petals—and in the outer edge of each petal there shall be nail prints brown and rust stained with blood, and in the center of the flower shall be a crown of thorns.

"All those who see it will remember it was a dogwood tree that I was crucified on, and this tree shall not be mutilated or destroyed, but protected and cherished as a reminder of my agony and death upon the cross."

Down in the hills and round about the dogwood is out in all its glory, growing as the legend promised, with slender branches, bent and twisted, with its snowy blossoms.

What Is So Rare As A Thank You Note

A Hilltop business lady came to our office this week to proudly display a note of appreciation she had received from a very satisfied customer. It was a matter of letting the lady knew that she had done a good job.

Such gestures are rare and really stand out. Those of us who deal with the public day in and day out have many, many opportunities to please people but a greater portion of said persons seldom go out of their way to express any appreciation. The service is taken for granted.

We agree with this lady, that such gestures of appreciation go a long way in making the day a lot brighter.

Give More Youngsters A Chance To Perform

A year ago we suggested in this corner that some organization had an opportunity to provide a real service to a lot of youngsters on the Hilltop by sponsoring a community wide amateur talent show. Such a show should be open only to those who have not participated in the Hilltop Minstrel and West Band Variety Show.

Hundreds of local youngsters would like an opportunity to appear on the stage before a large audience.

We still feel that such an idea is a good one and we'd like to see some group come to the fore and sponsor it, with the proceeds of the affair going to the building fund of the Hilltop YMCA. It would be a double service to Hilltop youth.

Today Is T-Day; Do Your Part!

Just as a gentle reminder, Mr. and Mrs. Motorist, today (Tuesday) is T-Day.

Yesterday you received a double postcard in the mail. It carried full instructions.

Today, you are asked to make a record of every auto trip you made in Franklin County.

Tomorrow, please drop the filled-out, prepaid postcard in a mail box.

That's all there is to it. But the information the city, county and state highway departments receive from the mass of travel records may repay every motorist a thousand-fold in increased driving convenience in the future.

Hilltop Loses New Fire Truck, But It'll Be Back

The new "quad" fire truck, a combination ladder and pump, has been transferred from the Wheatland-av and W. Broad-st fire engine house No. 17 to the No. 10 house at Glenwood-av and Broad-st.

Fire Chief Walter Strickfadden explains that the shift was made to give the multiple-purpose equipment a more central location and thus increase the fire-fighting potential of the equipment.

An older pump truck has been moved into the Wheatland-av house. Chief Strickfadden said the "quad" probably will be returned to No. 17 when the new fire house at Sullivant-av and Brinker-av is completed, since the Wheatland-av location then will be the more central location under the new setup.

Big Push On For Saturday Scout Circus

The last big push is on this week for the Southwest District Scout Circus which will be held Saturday afternoon and evening at the Fairgrounds Coliseum.

Scout officials and the Scouts and Cubs themselves are busy checking last-minute details in the tremendous effort to put on a full-scale circus by a single district rather than by the local Scout Council as a whole.

Demonstrations, competitive work and novelty acts have been rehearsed and re-rehearsed near [illegible] in the preparation of the various concessions which will be operated by some of the troops and packs participating in the circus.

Enterprises Listed

Cub Pack 37 will sell candy of a circus variety and present a tight-rope walker and clowns for the entertainment of the Coliseum crowd. Pack 43 plans handicraft exhibits and will present "Custer's Last Stand."

Pack 186 will sell coffee, pop, potato chips and corn fritters at its concession stand and for the circus itself will present clowns, a strong-man act and an animal act. The pack also plans a side-show featuring its den mothers.

Pack 214 will sell popcorn as its part of the concession business. Its contribution to the circus will be a tramp baseball game in pantomime, clowns, a wild animal act and a tumbling act.

Activities Start at 1:30

The activities will start at 1:30 p. m. Saturday with side-shows, exhibits, clowns and concession stands. The evening show will get under way at 7:15 p. m. with a grand entry of all units.

Tickets are available on the Hilltop through local units, Martin's Food Store, Thrift Finance, Hilltop Record, and downtown at the local Scout office, 26 N. Grant-av. Children under 12 will be admitted for 10 cents; adult tickets will be 25 cents.

Light Standards Erected at West High Entrance

FOUR SENTINELS OF LIGHT now illuminate the portals of West High School, after months waiting. They weigh 700 pounds each, stand 15 feet high and are reinforced with steel rods. Their total cost was approximately $600.

Traffic Improvements Top Hilltop Plan Suggestions

Community Council Meets Thursday To Consider Ideas; Attendance Urged

Suggested improvements in traffic routing and in public transportation facilities highlight proposals so far received for possible incorporation in the "Hilltop Plan" for long-range community betterment.

These suggestions will come before the Hilltop Community Council Thursday when the group meets at 8 p. m. at the Hilltop YMCA. Russell Carter, president of the Community Council, has announced that the entire meeting will be turned over to discussion of the various proposals for the future of the Hilltop.

Elmer J. Hogenberger, chairman of the special Hilltop Plan committee, urged today that individuals and groups with suggestions to make send them either to him or to Mr. Carter at once so they might be discussed at the first meeting.

Urges Representation

The Hilltop Plan idea springs from a suggestion by Mayor James A. Rhodes that the community "get together" on a written plan which would represent the Hilltop's aspirations for several years to come. The Community Council now is in the process of drawing such a plan with all possible dispatch.

Mr. Carter emphasizes the importance of having at least one representative from each Hilltop organization at the meeting Thursday in order that decisions taken by the council may be truly representative of the community's desires.

Chief among the traffic routing changes to come before the council will be one suggested by the Franklin County Planning Commission and presented to the Columbus Traffic Commission. It involves the relocation of three state routes in the Hilltop area.

Seek Route 40 Shift

The first proposal would take Route 40 off W. Broad-st entirely at a point approximately [illegible] of the city limits. The route would be brought into the city via Maryland-av instead of E. Main-st from the east, then proceed east in Atcheson-at to Jefferson-av. The route then would turn south in Jefferson-av to Long-st, swing west in Long-st, cross the Scioto River on a new Long-at bridge, proceed west to pick up McKinley-av at Davis-av, follow McKinley-av to a point due north of the State Hospital grounds, continue west along Valleyview-dr, then bear southwest until it meets W. Broad-st west of the city limits.

Such a boulevard would give a through route to the downtown area in addition to making a more convenient outlet to the Grandview section by way of Grandview-av.

Another suggested change would send Route 3 south in Sandusky-st, instead of Central-av, to Mound-st, thereby taking Route 3 traffic off W. Broad-st from Sandusky-st to Central-av.

Ask Route 33 Cutoff

The third proposal would set up a Route 33 cutoff to avoid the downtown section. Under the proposal, the Route 33 cutoff would swing west on Refugee-rd from the Columbus-Lancaster-rd, connect with Frank-rd at Lockbourne-rd, swing north on the present Route 104 (Harmon-av).

Variety is the Spice

By Betty Barclay

ARE you tempted to serve the tried and true favorites often at your table? Well, why not? The family will not tire of them if you add spice — variety, that is. Take, for example, tapioca pudding — a deservedly popular dessert in most homes. But have you ever added crushed peppermint candy to it and served it with chocolate sauce? Taste is a treat! So simple, yet so good! The family will love it, and don't hesitate to serve it when you have guests — it is quite worthy of a place at your company dinner table.

Peppermint Tapioca Cream

1 egg yolk; 2 cups milk; ¼ teaspoon salt; ¼ cup quick-cooking tapioca; ½ cup crushed peppermint candy.

1 egg white; 2 tablespoons sugar.

Mix egg yolks with a small amount of the milk in saucepan. Add remaining milk, salt, quick-cooking tapioca, and candy. Place over medium heat. Cook until mixture comes to a full boil, stirring constantly — this takes 5 to 8 minutes. (Do not over-cook . . . mixture thickens as it cools.) Remove from heat.

Beat egg white until foamy throughout; add 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, and continue beating with rotary egg beater until mixture will stand in soft peaks.

Add hot tapioca mixture, stirring constantly. Cool, stirring after 15 to 20 minutes. Chill. Serve with chocolate sauce. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

SYNOPSIS

Porter Farish has become so disagreeable to his wife, Beatrice, and their child, Marianne, that divorce seems inevitable. She realizes that her husband is not happy under the cruel domination of his employer, Mr. Ramey, a rich grasping industrialist. She resolves patiently that their child shall not be the victim of a broken home like the one frustrated Jane, 16-year daughter of Bee's best friend, Libby. One afternoon Bee opens Libby's letter to David Jordan, whom she finds "dangerously" attractive. More and more sensitive to Mrs. Ramey's selfish whims, Beatrice begins to rebel. Jane remains overnight with Marianne, while the latter's parents dine at their club.

CHAPTER NINE

AS BEATRICE lured the cocktails and heard the conversation gather momentum, she felt curiously like a ghost moving in a vacuum. How carelessly the word "friend" is tossed about, she thought. For she was certain that neither Martha nor Rhoda were truly her friends. Since Martha talked about Rhoda to her, "Won't Rhoda ever grow up?" and since Rhoda said of Martha, "Martha just doesn't care how she looks," Beatrice was positive that they in turn talked about her to each other. Doubtless they considered her an unworthy upstart, since her background was unconventional and she was the only one among them who had not gone to college. "What can you expect?" they probably said to one another about her shortcomings. "After all, she isn't anybody." Certainly there was no mutual affection among them, and no bond other than membership in the same country club. They would forget her without a qualm, Beatrice thought, observing Martha's hard little eyes and Rhoda's fatuous expression. She wished that Libby were here—Libby often maligned, often misunderstood and indeed often wrong even from her own tolerant viewpoint, but unquestionably loyal. What is the matter with me, Beatrice asked herself? She had often sat and looked at these same people, and had thought how pleasant it was to know such nice people and to have such devoted, congenial friends. What was wrong with her was a nameless thing. She could not yet put her finger on it. She knew only that it was making her rebel. But what were the beckoning depths beyond?

"New dress?" Martha asked crisply of Beatrice's wine-colored gown. When Beatrice said that it was, Martha nodded. "Um . . . luscious. When I go to buy a dress I think they hide all the good-looking things from me. But, after all, I'm not a glamor girl like you, dear, so why should I bother?"

She was beginning to be concerned lest Porter had fallen asleep, when he came down and into the living room. Beatrice lifted her remarkable eyes to him and it amused her in some odd, tender way, that it was almost shameful to look at your husband after ten years as she was looking at Porter with her pride and love unconcealed. His coming brought vitality into the room. Life, Beatrice thought. He brings life into a room when he enters. It was black eyes that too seldom lost that inexplicable look of deep inner disquiet sought them, his glance remaining briefly and knowingly upon each one. He noted Beatrice's gown . . . but as though she were not in it, as though no woman were wearing it, as though no one wore it, as though it was just a lovely gown of a rich warm color sprinkled with glitter.

"I'm terribly sorry for being as late as this," he said. "But I can see that Bee has been taking care of you."

"Bee always does," George said. "What would you do if you had a wife who waited for you to mix the cocktails?"

"They never taste right when I do them," Rhoda said helplessly. "You're so wonderful at things like that, darlin'. That's why I let you do them."

Martha turned to Beatrice. "I saw Libby at the club yesterday having a very charming tete-a-tete with a stunning man. I don't think I know him."

"She'll be there tonight and with the same man."

"Really?" Rhoda cried. "Oh, Libby is such a dear and so much fun. She always looks so wonderful in her clothes."

"She looks like a Christmas tree to me," Martha observed acidly. "And doesn't she ever stay home? No matter where I go, I always see her. She's always the main attraction, always in the limelight."

"Anyway," Rhoda said, "I do wish she'd get herself a nice husband. Whenever I see Dick and Helen I think what a shame it is about Libby. She must be lonely. Of course, Helen is so broadminded she has no bad feelings toward Libby because Dick married Libby first. But it is difficult. And Jane is such a darling. Yes, I do wish Libby would marry again."

"She'd better hurry up," Martha said. "She's not getting any younger. But stop wasting sympathy on Libby. She doesn't need it. Why should she? She's got everything."

Beatrice said, "Jane is upstairs. She's spending the night."

That would stop it. Yet there was, she had to admit, a good deal of truth in what Martha had said. Libby was the star attraction at parties, and she was scarcely ever at home. There was a panic stricken urgency about Libby these days.

When they left, they went in Rhoda's and George's station wagon because it was new and George insisted they must see how smoothly it rode.

The country club was invariably crowded after an important football game and tonight was no exception. As a consequence, they had some difficulty in finding a cozy corner in which to have another round of cocktails before going into the dining room to dinner. Squeezed finally on a sofa between Martha and Rhoda, Beatrice perceived the familiar scene all the while not only looking for Libby and David Jordan, but also hoping that this would not be one of those nights that Mr. and Mrs. Ramey would decide to come to the club.

There was the usual debutante set, who never failed to attract her interest because they always made her visualize Marianne as she would be at eighteen. At such moments Beatrice's thoughts invariably went back to those terrifying days in California. Porter had gone. She knew not where. "At sea," you said to people then. "My husband is on active duty . . . at sea." He had gone before Beatrice could tell him that she was going to have another child. He had gone before Marianne had been stricken with polio and Beatrice in her despair over Marianne had lost the baby. Would she ever forget those days at the hospital when she had wondered if Marianne would ever be one of those shining haired girls dancing with a boy after a football game? Would she ever forget the kindness of strangers in a strange town, and the profound eloquence of silence that had made unnecessary the question, "I have no baby now, have I?" when she had awakened and found herself looking into the grave face of a young doctor. Thank God, thank prayer, thank the skill of science that Marianne was not a cripple. And even now she could not look at Marianne running or riding her bike or skating without sweeping sensations of humility and thankfulness.

Apparent, as always, were the few who had been drinking all afternoon, the few who were self-conscious new members and, therefore, wanting desperately to know people and to be liked, and the ones who seemed to have no homes except the club.

The exigencies of war had made dress optional, a rule still unrelaxed, so that tweed suit and bare shoulders were socially compatible. Since the orchestra would not begin playing until nine o'clock, the rumble of voices was unrelieved by music.

Her glance came at last to rest on Porter. He was standing against one of the large white columns that punctuated the room, and while Bart and George were talking animatedly about their favorite subject, "the government in Washington," what little interest Porter had in what they were saying was obviously feigned. Beatrice had never seen him in a group, for he was a social being and an incomparable host in his own home, look so desperate in his compulsion to escape. It would have been more understandable if he had seemed tired. He did not appear to be in the least tired. Rather Beatrice could not remember when she had seen him look more spirited. She saw him take his fourth cocktail. He never drank that much and, as a matter of fact, scarcely drank at all. Apprehensive, she glanced away just as Martha tartly announced that they should be going in to dinner.

As they arose and walked toward the brilliantly lighted dining room, Beatrice felt a warm hand upon her arm. She turned quickly.

"I like your dress, Bee," Porter said.

Yet he had said it sadly.

"I wanted you to," she said. The words coming from her tight throat quavered slightly.

But when his unsteady hand knocked over a water glass and sent it crashing to the floor, she knew that though he had at last seen her, it had been through an alcoholic haze.

West Nine Seeks To Keep Lofty Perch; East Is Foe

By Dave Miller

West High's baseballers will attempt to hold up their lead in the current city high baseball race this Wednesday afternoon when they play host to the last-place East Tigers, in a game originally scheduled for Tuesday, then moved up to Monday because of the local Hilltop Relays on that date, and finally rescheduled for tomorrow because of rain and wet grounds on Monday.

The Cowboys currently are in a two-way first-place tie with Linden-McKinley's Panthers, the only team in the city loop to take the measure of the Cowboys this season, by a 9 to 3 verdict. The Cowboys were scheduled to meet the Panthers this Friday afternoon, but the game was postponed to a date to be announced later, because the Linden nine has advanced to the finals of the Central District Class A baseball tournament. Linden will play Marion Harding, the team which knocked out West in the tournament, this Friday in what should be a good game at OSU.

Linden defeated Mt. Vernon, 16-1, Bexley, 11-3, and North, 4-2, to gain their honors while the tough Marion nine defeated South, 8-1, West, 10-3, and Central, 19-6. By comparison, in the City League activity, West defeated South, 7-3, the only team able to beat Linden-McKinley this year, that by a 3-2 edge.

Young To Pitch

In tomorrow's battle, Phil Young will probably face Pat Fallon or Phil Linhart. In the first round, Linhart allowed the Cowboys only five hits, two by Catcher Bob Birle. Young twirled for the Cowboys and allowed the East Siders only five hits, three of the quintet coming off the bat of East's fine shortstop, Kenny Mizelle.

Top hitter on the West team at the moment is Birle with a .423 Birle has classified himself as one of the better catchers in the city with his batting average to prove half of the statement. In addition to being a great clutch hitter the stubby receiver has proved himself as a great team player with his constant line of chatter Don Nafzger, another good catcher on the team, is a good sub, and could easily be a first string catcher on any other team not having a fellow like Birle.

Dick Culbertson is still holding down first base with his great hitting and good fielding, making, in all, only one miscue in 67 chances this season. Dave Caton, one of the better fielders on the team, holds down second, while Jack Pickens, returnee all-city shortstop last year, holds down the post again this season.

Shifted After Thrush Is Hurt

Jack Winnestaffer, normally a first baseman, was moved to third base after Bill Thrush broke his ankle on Apr. 7, and is doing a good job of filling in at the hot corner position. In the outfield it's Morris Dobbs in left and Dick Kirk in center. Right field this year was Coach George Williams worry, with three boys fighting it out for post. They were Jerry Olinger, Paul Ellingsworth and Tommy Wright. Ellingsworth, a lefty, was needed at pitching. Olinger finally wrapped up the job in the Grandview game last week with a 3 for 3 day.

A comparison of team records shows East lost to Linden, 5-0, West lost to the Panthers, 9-3, South downed East, 4-0, in a no hitter; West beat South, 7-3; Central was thumped, 11-0, by the Tigers for the East Siders' only win of the year, while West downed the Bucks, 10-4. North defeated East, 5-3, as West was a winner over the Polar Bears, 5-2, and Aquinas downed the Tigers, 4-2, and the locals trounced the Terriers, 8-1.

The Cowboys, after Linden, are scheduled to play host to Central on Monday, May 16.

St. Aloysius Wins First Two Games In League Play

St. Aloysius has won the first two games in league play. The opening game was pitched by Jim Derby. St. Mary Magdalene, the opposition, was limited to four hits. The score ended 4 to 3.

Jack "Herman" Wihl pitched a no-hit no-run game for St. Aloysius May 2 at the State School diamond. His teammates collected eight hits and scored 18 runs. Bill Nye obtained three hits for four trips to the plate.

A bee was the cause of an auto accident May 3, when H. H. Moler, 309 Midland-av, lost control of his car as he attempted to shoo an annoying bumblebee.

Mr. Moler was uninjured and his car suffered minor damages, when it careened over a steep embankment and struck a wire fence and tree, near Starr Post Office.

Girl, 6, Hurt, Aided by Squad On Another Run

The condition of Georgia Rose Hodge, six-year-old granddaughter of Mr and Mrs. Harry Harless, 1863 Little-av, was reported good by Children's Hospital attendants Monday.

Georgia was struck by a car in the 1140 block of Marlaburg-pk Saturday while en route to her home from a neighborhood grocery.

A motorist took Georgia in his auto and at 854 S. Wayne-av spotted No. 1 emergency squad, which was answering a call at that address. The squad took the girl to Children's Hospital.

Georgia suffered broken bones in both legs, a compound fracture of the right arm, severe head and body cuts and possible internal injuries.

Deputies said the auto which struck Georgia was driven by Joseph Ewing, 22, 1758 Richmond-av. The emergency squad which transported the injured girl to the hospital had been called for Robert Brown, 20, 854 S. Wayne-av who fell from a ladder and broke his leg. He was taken to Mt. Carmel Hospital for treatment by Emergency Squad No. 2.

Traffic Dominates Hilltop Plan Ideas

...ross W. Broad-st at Sandusky-st, and then swing west on its present route, Dublin-av.

Another proposal presented to the Hilltop Plan committee would give Hilltoppers a direct link with the Grandview area. It would involve an extension of Eureka-av north of its present terminus at Harrison-rd to the present intersection of Fisher-rd and McKinley-av, and the extension of Fisher-rd across the Scioto River to connect with the western end of Goodale-blvd.

Such a plan would involve the construction of a bridge and would involve the co-operation of the county, since all of the proposed work would be outside the city limits. The plan would, however, give Hilltoppers ready access to Grandview, Upper Arlington and the Olentangy River-rd and the north end of the city.

Propose Cross-Town Bus

Another feature of the Eureka-av, Fisher-av, Goodale-blvd plan would involve a cross-town bus line extending from Eureka-av and Mound-st, through the Hilltop and all the way north to Grandview and King-avs.

Also revived in the discussion of the Hilltop's public transportation needs is the proposed Sullivant-av and W. Broad-st loop bus system which would facilitate the movement of shoppers throughout the Hilltop area.

Also the subject of comment is the need for a great deal of street repaving throughout the area.

Horse Show Set Sunday At Academy

Hilltoppers are invited to witness a western horse show at 2 p. m. Sunday at the Hilltop Riding Academy at 2547 Eakin-rd. Admission is free.

The show is sponsored by Al... Ept, new owner of the academy, who is back in the saddle ... time again after 39 years as a railroad engineer for the Hocking Valley and Chesapeake and Ohio Railroads. Mr. Ept, as a youth, was with the 101 Ranch Wild West Show owned by the Miller brothers. He worked with Buffalo Bill and attended that legendary figure's funeral on Apr 16, 1917, at Golden, Colo.

Mr. Ept, who lives at 136 Hadley-av, has been a resident of the Hilltop 20 years. During that time however, he always has maintained a string of ponies, so it was only natural that, at his retirement, he should return to give full time to his avocation.

Sunday's show will be divided into an even dozen classes. They are: 1. Plain Class; 2. Boot Race; 3. Pleasure Class; 4. Balloon Race; 5. Trail Class; 6. Roping Class; 7. Egg Class; 8. Musical Chairs; 9. Box Race; 10. Neck Reining Class; 11. Spotted Class; 12. Bareback Class.

Entries in the show probably will include a number of horses regularly boarded at the Hilltop Academy, including those owned by Floyd Born, "Andy" Anderson, Mrs. Helen Gaffney and Dee Conway.

A platform accommodating more than 200 spectators is being built at the show ring at the academy, and a public address system is being installed to give the audience a full description of the show as it progresses.

Red Pressure on Satellites For Collectivization Seen

Legislation Would Deprive Communists of Citizenship

WASHINGTON—State department experts are convinced that Moscow will insist upon full-scale collective farming in all the satellite countries.

The Kremlin has put on the heat for collectivization in Poland and Romania. So unpopular is the step with the peasants who make up most of the population in Russia's orbit that even the most dedicated Communists quail at the thought of confronting their countries with such a program.

The State department believes that an absolute insistence on collective farming will bring America new allies among the mass of people of Iron Curtain countries.

Rep. Francis E Walter

• • • •

● BLOW FOR REDS—The Communist party in the United States would be dealt a crippling blow if legislation sponsored by a House Democratic leader is enacted.

Rep Francis E Walter (D)., Pennsylvania, is pushing a bill to deprive Americans who join the Communist party of their citizenship.

Naturalized Americans would be subject to deportation after being divested of their citizenship while native-born Americans would become "stateless."

As "stateless" residents of the United States, they would lose many of the privileges they now take for granted, such as voting, holding public office, running for public office, obtaining a passport and in many states, practicing as an attorney or physician.

• • • • •

● TREE FOR HOFFMAN—A tree, bearing the name of European Recovery Director Paul G Hoffman will be growing in Holland shortly But it very definitely will not be in Hoffman's "memory."

The matter came up when the Economic Co-operation administrator greeted 33 young Dutch farmers who are in the United States for six months to study American farm techniques first hand.

C. W C. Van Beekom, who is heading the group, suggested that a tree be planted in the land of tulips commemorating Hoffman's work. Van Beekom suggested the island of Walcheren in the Netherlands as the ideal spot for the tree.

He pointed out that the island was flooded during the war as an anti-Nazi move and is now a "desert." However, he continued, funds are being raised to replant the island.

Hoffman, reaching for a five dollar bill, said he was aware of the program but added, "There is one thing that disturbs me." At this point Van Beekom protested that five dollars was too big a donation, that one dollar would be enough.

"No, I want to give you five dollars," Hoffman insisted. "But that is not what distresses me What I don't like is that you want to name it the Paul Hoffman memorial tree.

"I'm not dead yet," Hoffman said, adding quietly, "not quite."

Van Beekom promised it would be named simply the Paul Hoffman tree.

• • • •

● TRUMAN TO TAKE LESS—Congressional opinion is that President Truman will get far less than he has asked in the way of national health legislation but that he will sign on the dotted line in the belief that something is better than nothing.

Cool to Tax For Health Program

A good many members of both major political parties object to the payroll tax of the Truman health program. It would bring all Americans under the plan.

Leaders say privately that some compromise measure probably will be sent to the White House It will put participation on a voluntary rather than a mandatory basis.

Starling Trims West Junior For Second Place Tie

Starling Junior High baseball team proved to be Bronco busters in their game with West Junior at State Hospital Grounds last week by turning back the Hilltoppers, 3 to 2, for their first defeat of the season.

Bill Henthorne on the mound for the winners fanned 14 batsmen and allowed but two hits, while Laderer and Thornton, on the mound for West, fanned three and allowed four hits.

Earl Spriggs, playing third for Starling, made a sensational one-handed diving catch of Kimball's foul in the fifth.

Starling and West Junior have both won three and lost one which throws them in a tie for second place.

W. Broad Sixth Grade Class Writes, Produces Chinese Play

Mrs. Roma Waymer's 6A Class of West Broad Street School has been studying about China. As a culmination of this unit class members wrote and produced a play about the Chinese people called "The Coins of Lin Foo."

On the morning of Apr. 29, the class presented it to the entire school and a group of parents.

The plot in brief: Wing Soong, a poor Chinese widow, makes fritters for her little son, Lin Foo, to sell at the market place. Lin Foo sells the fritters and hides the money under a rock, then goes to visit the fair. When he returns for his money, someone has stolen it. The wise magistrate, using her wit and cleverness, helps to solve the case and returns the money to the rightful owners.

Lin Foo was played by John Noerr; his mother, Wing Soong, by Nancy Turner; the Chinese chorister, Marilyn Kropfhauser; the great magistrate, Anni Li, by Judy Swartz, and the villain was Billy Calhoon.

The announcer was Richard Dorr. The manager of the fair was ably portrayed by Cliff Holtzman. His troupe consisted of tumblers from Canton, China, who were Robert Reeves, Charles Waldo and Jean Simonson; dancing girls from Shanghai, who were Sheila Albery, Marjorie Seagle and Sandra Scott, and the baton twirlers from Peking, Beverly Wilson, Marilyn Shroyer, Linda Lease, Patty Smith, Judy Ward and Helen Guyton. The guards were Anne Brock and Bernice Uhl.

The villagers who helped with the trial were James Pruden, Joseph Muehmore, William Hansen, William Greene, Charles Dailey, Richard Conrad, Dorothy Hageman, Sue Jackson, Judith Jackson, Paul Neil, Jane Baker, Jean Purkey, Yvonne Birkhead, Harry Carson, Carolyn Mattox, Barbara Bolen, Joan Jenny, Ronald Forrer and Richard Izzard.

During the entertainment, Chinese music was played by Sandra Scott and Bill Greene. Nancy Turner and Judy Swartz composed and played a duet they named "Ting-Ling Tong."

Hilltop Takes Circleville

Fifty Hilltop Kiwanians were in attendance at the inter-club meeting with Circleville at that town's country club Monday evening and outnumbered the Circleville attendance. As a greeting to the standing Circleville group the Hilltop delegation sang:

Circleville, Circleville, we've been thinking,
What a great gang you are.
We're glad to be your guests
this evening,
Let us be your guiding star.

The song was concluded with a rousing "SIT DOWN."

Short talks were given by Herbert Deems, Ed Planck, Dr. R. J. Miller and Jack Sensenbrenner. Lee Koontz entertained with several numbers.

Central Trackmen Keep Stranglehold On Hilltop Relays

By Dave Miller

Central High's power-packed track team racked up seven first places and got at least a point in every event as it took its third straight in the third annual Hilltop Relays Tuesday evening at West High's Magly Field before a crowd of 1597 persons.

The Bucs shattered four records as they left five other City League teams 'way back in the dust with a 105-point total. East's Tigers were runnersup with 74½ while North's Polar Bears were third, having 51½. West came in third on their own cinder track with 34½, beating out South by a fourth of a point. Linden McKinley was last with 21¼.

Bill Smith, Central speedster, was the outstanding individual of the relay. He won the 100- and 200-yard dashes in unbelievable times. He nosed out West's Don Eitle, last year's 100 record holder at 10.0. Smith passed Eitle at the stretch to win by 9.9. In addition he set a new record in the 220-yard dash, doing it in 22.4, smashing the record set by Bob Cooper of Central last year in 23.2.

Wins Individual Honors

Smith, in all, garnered 15 points to give him high individual honors for the meet. His teammates, Sophomore Bill Hairston and Sandy Hairston, came through with 14 and 13 points respectively. Marvin Hairston added to the Central point making by doing another record-breaker in the high jump of 5 feet, 8 inches. The old record previously was held by Dick Lanigan and Walter Hicks, both of West, with 5'7".

In the junior high 440- and 880-yard relays, Crestview won both events with Jim Lawyer being the strong anchor man of the Blue and Gold. Everett Junior placed runner-up both times while Linden got a fourth and fifth with West duplicating the feat. Two other junior highs were entered, Champion and Barrett.

Two other records were included in Tuesday's proceedings. There was a 15.4 effort in the 120-yard high hurdles by Minus Sowards of East. Bill Hairston of Central broad jumped the record distance of 22 feet, 6 inches, smashing the old record set by Walter Hicks of West last year with a 21 feet, 9 inch effort. Sowards broke his own record set last year of 15.5.

Other Records Stand

Other records that still hold include 440-yard dash in 53.0 by Ralph Lockwood of North last year; shuttle hurdle in .59.9 by West in 1947; 880-yard run set by Bill Fox of Central last year; 440-yard relay in 46.8 by Central in 1947; shot put of 40 feet 10 inches set by Dick Seiller of North in 1947; discus, also by Seiller, by 149 feet 10 inches, also in 1941; pole vault by Joe Campbell of North with 11 feet four inches, last year; 880-yard relay in 1:31.5 by Central last year; 2-mile relay set by Central last year in 8:38.6; and the mile relay set by Central last season in 3:39.6.

Bob Cromwell, a senior at West, acted as master of ceremonies at the relay and the announcer of the winners when they received their ribbons from West's relay queens, Pat Bates, Sue Glass, Helen Charas, Betty Roederer and Marilyn Valentine.

Official Scorer Dan Barton was really in a mess when he found out that Central had three Hairstons, Marvin, Sandy and Bill. Therefore, in the record-breaking high jump by Marvin Hairston, he had put it down as Sandy because of no first name place on the field sheet, but he found out about the Marvin Hairston when the ribbons were presented.

The scorer is, without a doubt, the busiest man around the place when the relays are going on, including the trackstere. In addition to keeping all the points and summaries in the official book, he must keep an individual total of all players so that the officials might know at the end of the track meet who is the individual high point man.

Band In Good Form

The West High band, now directed by Clair Barnard, gave out with some fine music previous to the running events, starting at 7 p. m. Managers of the host team are Wes Edstrom, Ronald Guyton, Joe Wallace and Jim Snyder, and they did a fine job . . . Hats off to the West coach and Hilltop Relay manager, Rufe Glass, for the splendid way he had the track meet completed in the promised time of 9:25. In fact the last event ended at exactly 9:15, but by the time tro-

West Trims East, 5 to 1, Ties Again for Loop Lead

By Dave Miller

West's baseballers moved back into a two-way, first-place tie with Linden McKinley in the City League play yesterday as they defeated East, 5 to 1, on the local diamond, behind Right-Hander Phil Young's three-hit twirling.

Young definitely pitched his best game of the season. The three hits were well scattered, Ralph Cheney's in the third, Ken Mizelle's in the sixth, driving in East's lone run, and Jim Kauffman's in the seventh. Two double plays helped the cause considerably for the Cowboys.

The Cowboys got their run-making machine started in their half of the first with one tally, and got another in the second on no hits, and finally sewed up the contest in the sixth with three tallies.

Dick Culbertson, West first baseman, was, without a doubt, the hitting star with a single, double, and a triple in four trips to the plate. His double was at first a triple, but East appealed that he had missed second base, and Culbertson could be credited only with a two-bagger. He drove in four of West's five runs, the other coming home on a wild pitch.

Use Up Three Hurlers

The visitors used three pitchers. Little Tom Fallon, a right-hander, started, Phil Linhart relieved him in the second with Anthony Komadina coming on to quiet West's uprising in the bottom half of the sixth.

The Cowboys started off proceedings in the first when, with one gone, Don Natzger, West's catcher, doubled down the left-field foul line, and Culbertson tripled him home on a long drive to left center. However, Culbertson was out on appeal play mentioned above. Dick Kirk was safe on Third-baseman George Powers' error, and stole second, advancing to third when Fallon threw the ball into center field trying to pick him off, but was left stranded as Morris Dobbs lined out to Second-Baseman Ralph Cheney.

In the second, with one gone, Jerry Solinger and Jack Winnestaffer both walked, and Phil Young forced the latter at second, Mizelle, unassisted, and Solinger scored on Pitcher Tom Fallon's wild pitch, making it 2-0.

The score remained that way for three more innings, but West came back with three runs to sew up the game in the sixth.

Score On Squeeze Play

In the East half of the sixth, Ralph Cheney, the lead-off man, walked and stole second while pitcher Phil Linhart was striking out, and went to third on Kenny Mizelle's timely single to left field. He scored on a beautiful

'Hilltop Plan' Meeting Set For Tonight

The Hilltop Community Council, faced with the task of drawing the "Hilltop Plan" for presentation to City Hall, will meet at 8 p. m. today at the Hilltop YMCA.

The entire meeting will be devoted to discussion of suggestions for community betterment, according to Russell Carter of the Broadview Linoleum and Tile Co., president of the Council.

Elmer J. Hegenberger, chairman of the special committee named to screen suggestions for the Hilltop Plan, said today that his group still is open to suggestions and urged that those for incorporation in the plan will be welcomed. They should be directed either to him or Mr. Carter, he said.

Mr. Carter emphasized the importance of having at least one representative from each Hilltop organization present at tonight's meeting. He also stressed the fact that the meeting will be open, also, to unaffiliated individuals who are interested in the long-range planning for the community in order that the final plan be representative of the thinking of the entire Hilltop.

Commencement Plans Laid For Seniors at West High

By Myron T. Seifert

Communications were addressed to parents of West High graduating seniors this week by Principal I. F. Young, informing them of commencement plans at the Hilltop school, from May 20 through June 8, and asking their full cooperation.

At an earlier meeting of the seniors this semester, Principal Young reminded students that they might have a fine social affair, but cautioned them regarding a repetition of last year's tragic experiences.

Asking cooperation of all to see that hazards incident to a senior party are eliminated, Mr. Young was emphatic in his intention to make this year's social affairs safe for all.

Four Prime Events

Four special commencement activities loom large on the senior social calendar, Mr. Young pointed out in his letter to parents.

Listing the time and place of senior red-letter dates, the calendar embraces a well-rounded program for the graduates.

Parents were urged to note in particular the reasonable time schedule of events on the year-end senior agenda so that they might better advise their sons and daughters following conclusion of the activities at the local high school.

The senior year-end calendar follows this pattern: Senior Dance at West High gym, Friday, May 20, 9-12 p. m. Senior Banquet at West High cafeteria, Thursday, June 2, 6:30-9:30 p. m. Baccalaureate at West High School auditorium, Sunday, June 5, 3:30 p. m. Commencement at West High auditorium, Wednesday, June 8, 8:30 p. m.

Then, too, commencement and baccalaureate dress came in for its share of attention to parents in the note written by Mr. Young.

For baccalaureate Mr. Young said commencement dress is preferred.

For commencement it is suggested that boys wear conservative street suit, coat, trousers, white shirt, tie (four-in-hand), shoes and hose suitable with suit. No sweaters are permitted.

Girls are expected to wear either a plain all-white tailored dress, one- or two-piece, or a white tailored suit. Short sleeves are acceptable, but not too short. Material should be cotton or its equivalent. Avoid sheers, material with a sheen or eyelet dresses.

Shoes should be white, or white with trim, and medium heels. Hose required. No flowers permitted. No conspicuous jewelry.

Burglar Caught In Third Sally At Dana Ave. Home

A burglar who tried three times to break into a Dana-av home Tuesday was caught by police on the third try.

James McAndrews, 70, 58 Dana-av, said someone tried to break into the back door of his home at 1:10 a. m. Tuesday, and when that didn't work, tried the front door.

Mr. McAndrews called police who, caught the man attempting to break into the side door. He was taken to City Prison for questioning.

City May Fill Lake At Westgate Park; Pollution Is Cited

The Westgate Park lake probably will be filled in and obliterated this summer unless city officials can arrive at a quick solution to the health menace it now appears to present.

This fact became apparent this week in the wake of continuing protests from residents of the park area against the stench which from time to time is wafted across the immediate neighborhood. The stench arises from polluted water which trickles into the lake from an open ditch.

The pollution, city officials say, comes from partially treated sewage which enters the ditch from a drain tile which originates outside the western city limits in the Josephine-av section.

Fears Illnesses

City Service Director, Elmer Keller frankly is fearful of possible illness to residents of the area, especially of children playing around the lake, as a result of the pollution. He, understandably, has no desire to be a party to any such occurrence. He has, therefore, suggested in a letter to City Council that the lake be filled in if no other reasonable solution to the pollution can be found.

Mr. Keller suggested two other alternatives:

1. Build a link between the drain entering the city and the city's sanitary sewer, bypassing the lake entirely, or

2. Ask the county to force the residents in the area served by the offending drain tile to tap in to a sanitary sewer.

City Councilman Henry A. Koontz has taken up the fight to retain the lake in Westgate Park, if possible. He already has been in contact, he says, with state health officials in an effort to get state backing for a program which will force residents of the area immediately west of the city limits to cease the use of septic tanks and run their sewage into a sanitary sewer. As of today, he has not obtained concrete results and is awaiting a report of the state health department's findings.

Both Mr. Koontz and Mr. Keller reported that Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe, city health commissioner, is of a mind at present to order the lake filled in as a menace to the health of residents of the Westgate area.

Course of Ditch

The open ditch in question travels a fairly straight course due west from the west end of the park lake. It runs through a culvert beneath Demorest-rd about 150 feet south of Wicklow-rd to a point about half way between Demorest and Derrer-rds. There it meets a large drain tile coming in from the west. The ditch turns north at that point, crosses under Wicklow-rd and meets two other large drains coming in from the northwest at a point near the northeast corner of the intersection of Wicklow and Derrer-rds.

Orris Beaney of the City Engineering Department describes the pollution in this ditch as "sewage between 40 and 50 per cent treated."

The pollution of the water in the ditch appears to grow less as the water moves eastward. Since the tiles feeding the ditch also open into the Josephine-av storm sewers, however, a heavy rain would carry the partially treated sewage now in the ditch directly into the park lake. The lake, in turn, empties into a city sanitary sewer catch basin at the lake's east end.

'Y' Drive Will Open Sunday

The 1949 membership campaign of the Hilltop YMCA will be launched Sunday afternoon in a meeting scheduled for 1:30 p. m. in the Y Building at 2585 W. Broad-st.

Jerry Spears, Sr., chairman of the drive to complete the membership of the YMCA, today urged churches and other organizations to send representatives to the meeting as well as extending an urgent invitation to individual volunteer workers.

Funds obtained from both new and renewed memberships will go toward expansion of the institution's service to the youth of the Hilltop, Mr. Spears said. He added that classes in photography, plastics, radio and television are being considered as additions to the Y program if sufficient funds become available.

$3000 Is Needed

The Hilltop YMCA received a $7500 appropriation from the Community Chest for the current year. Approximately $3000 beyond that amount, however, is needed to maintain present services of the institution and allow sufficient margin to expand the services.

Mr. Spears emphasized that the value of the YMCA to the community lies in the activities the Y can present to the youth of the Hilltop in a proper atmosphere.

He, therefore, urges the public-spirited citizens of the community who desire to extend the coverage of the YMCA to attend the Sunday meeting and arrange to do their part in conducting the campaign.

Adopted Hilltopper Is May Queen Of 1949 at Ohio State University

Looking pretty as a picture Patricia McCluskey beamed when told she was the 1949 May Queen of Ohio State University.

Raised in San Bernardino, Calif., Patty moved last summer to the Hilltop, where she lives with her guardians, Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. E. M. Doran, 162 S. Powell-av.

Patricia McCluskey

California has nothing on the Hilltop according to Pat who has made new friends and acquaintances readily with her winning smile and pleasing personality.

A real queen, Pat a freshman student at Ohio State, has won several similar honors at the California high school where she graduated. Elected queen in her senior year, she was runner-up in several other beauty contests.

Pat isn't interested in getting ahead on beauty alone. Her one ambition is to get through four years of college. She hasn't mentioned modeling or dramatics at home, the usual ambition of beauty queens, but seems interested only in the personnel management course she is pursuing at Ohio State.

Five feet, six inches, with brown hair and green eyes, Pat is a typical American coed. Only 18 years old, she is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and of the Ohio State Browning society, a dramatics organization.

Selected queen from 27 entries and 10 finalists, Pat could hardly believe her good fortune when notified that she had won the contest.

Crowned by last year's May Queen Betty Hamner Hayes, she was attended by five Ohio State coeds, Rosemary Chandler, Mollie McCurdy, Guy Heath, Nancella Jones and Sarah Burd.

SMALL TAXPAYER FINDS A PAL

Arkansas Congressman Would Create Settlement Board

By JAY RICHTER
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — There is a movement afoot on Capitol Hill to ease the burden on, of all people, the small income taxpayer. Which is to say, upwards of 50 million Americans.

Lower taxes aren't what the lawmakers have in mind this time. The big idea is to protect taxpayers against over-enthusiastic "revenooers" from the Treasury Department's Internal Revenue bureau.

Legislation to that effect has been introduced by a young Arkansas congressman, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills.

Mills has nothing personal against the bureau agents who want to know have you paid all the taxes you should. As a matter of fact, he thinks they show commendable zeal and efficiency in collecting what is due the government.

What, he asks, of the small income taxpayer who has an honest difference of opinion with Uncle Sam's agents?

If you disagree with the United States on the size of your tax bill, says the congressman, there are two things you can do, neither of which is likely to bring much satisfaction.

You can first sit down with members of the Internal Revenue bureau's technical staff. If they back their agents, your only recourse is the Tax Court. Chances are, you'll pay up.

Last year, approximately one million taxpayers were notified that they owed Uncle Sam more money. Less than one in 200 appealed to the court.

"IT WOULD cost most citizens more to appeal the bureau's decision than to pay up," says Mills. "Taxpayers accept settlements they consider unjust because the amount involved, even though important to them, does not justify the expense of a lawsuit."

Mills' bill (H. R. 2983) calls for a 25-man Tax Settlement board, appointed by the president and apart from the Treasury. It would be empowered to set up meetings in every city where there is a tax collector's office.

The idea is to consider your case informally, and to give you a quick decision at low cost. Your first appeal still would be to the Internal Revenue bureau, Mills points out, and the Tax Court still would be available to large-scale taxpayers who can afford long legal battles.

Such a board might come in handy during the current season on income taxpayers.

This year, in contrast to last when most checkups were confined to high-income and phoney-looking returns, an enlarged staff of 22,000 revenue agents is making an intensive cross-study of the 95 per cent of returns in lower and middle income groups.

The agents are on the trail of an estimated two and a half billion dollars which nearly one million citizens held out on March 15 through mistake, fraud, or honest difference of opinion.

Past experience makes it quite certain this sampling of the average taxpayer will uncover little fraud, says Mills.

However, many disagreements between government agents and private citizens probably will be turned up. That is the precise point at which his proposed Tax Settlement board would yield dividends, Mills emphasizes.

Some taxpayers would save money, he thinks, and the rest would be satisfied they had had fair treatment. In the end, the Treasury probably would also profit, since satisfied taxpayers are less inclined to chisel on Uncle.

Mills' bill is attracting a big mail, mostly favorable. Many letters recite case histories of unsatisfactory income tax settlements.

"I HAVE a tax refund coming to me dating back to 1940," wrote a Florida realtor, "which the tax department admits is due me but says that, because of technicalities, it cannot pay until I sue them.

"The amount is $932 yet one attorney asks $1,000 to start the suit and another 50 per cent of all funds recovered."

From an Oklahoma businessman:

"My greatest complaint is when the tax examiner . . . in an endeavor to make a mark for himself, sets up a tax amount due of from $100 to $200, knowing well that if I care to handle through the courts, it will cost me more than to settle on his basis."

From a Pennsylvania tool maker:

"Can you find 100 tax experts(?) in the income tax bureau that can figure out your own tax return—and two of them come up with the same answer?"

From a Minnesota accountant and tax consultant:

"Deputy collectors work on a 'quota' basis . . . They are allotted an approximate amount of tax to be recovered each year. This procedure places a premium on fraud."

Heart of the trouble, says Mills, is that laws have been changed to create millions of new, small taxpayers, but collection machinery is still geared to needs of big taxpayers.

"Americans will take almost anything except shoving around," he declares. "Our system of income tax collection rests upon the confidence of the average citizen that he is getting fair treatment."

REP. WILBUR D. MILLS

Fire Fighters Plan Jubilee At Red Bird Game

There will be extra attractions with the Toledo-Columbus ball game at Red Bird Stadium on the night of Thursday, May 26. The special events will be a part of the Franklin County Fire Fighters Jubilee, third annual event of the sort staged by the 19 fire-fighting departments, outside Columbus proper, in Franklin County.

Tickets are on sale at all suburban and rural firehouses.

Prizes are to be given every half-inning, or at least 18 times during the ball game, with one grand prize awarded at the end of the game and fireworks will be the grand finale of the evening.

Twelve high school bands will furnish a program of music at pre-game ceremonies, to start at 7:30, with the game scheduled for 8:30 p. m.

Place Cards You Can Eat

By ALICE DENHOFF

IF there are youngsters in the house, what nicer way to greet the happy Spring season than by giving them a beautiful party? And it will be nicer still if they have a hand in it, making edible place cards, for instance.

A clever friend of ours has become enthused about wonderful instant frostings, quality tested for goodness and carrying out their promise of performance. So, to amuse her little brood, she had them help her in the pleasant task of using the frostings for their party. We liked her ideas so much that we would like to pass them on to you.

Pussy Cat Favor

A big hit with the little guests was a clever pussy cat face favor, which, we confess, was gobbled up by us, pronto. Make up one package instant vanilla frosting as directed on package, and frost tops of 10 round cookies (about 3½ inches in diameter). Make up strawberry frosting as directed, and frost 20 oysterette type crackers, placing 2 on each cookie for ears.

Make up chocolate frosting as directed, for piping, that is, adding less water. Using pastry tube or cake decorator, make eyes, nose and mouth on each "face." This is the part the children love, and they soon become adept at handling the tube or decorator. Press a few shreds of cocoanut in place for "whiskers." Decorate outer edge of cookie with strawberry frosting.

Carousel Place Card

A carousel cookie place card should win applause, too. Make up vanilla frosting as directed on the box. Frost tops of 10 round cookies (about 3¼ inches in diameter). Make up package chocolate frosting as directed for piping. With pastry tube or cake decorator, outline or frost 20 animal crackers. Stand 2 "animals" on each cookie near edge, put upright toothpick, topped with tiny colored gum drop between animals. Write child's name on cookie and decorate outer edge with row of chocolate frosting.

Beautiful for a Spring luncheon would be a batch of flower garden place cards. Get 8 donuts (about 2¼ inches in diameter) and slice crosswise to yield 16 donut halves. Make up vanilla frosting as directed, and frost cut tops of donut halves. Make up package of vanilla frosting into tiny candies, color in pale pink, pale green, with vegetable colorings, and shape into tiny flowers with green stems. Press flowers on frosted donut near top edge. Make up chocolate frosting as directed, and write guest's name on donut near the bottom. Decorate outer edge of donut with double row of chocolate frosting.

Girl Scout Dance Festival Set Sunday at Central High School

Folk dances of 12 different countries will be included in the program to be presented at the southeast athletic field at Central High School, Sunday at 2 p. m. by the Girl Scouts of Columbus and Franklin County Council.

The fourth annual dance festival climaxes months of preparation of dances, costumes and fun for more than 1000 scouts in Columbus and 250 on the Hilltop.

Eleven troops from John Burroughs will participate. They are 146, 117, 143, 252, 113, 180, 145, 192, 178, 152 and 185. Four troops from St. Aloysius school, 248, 249, 250 and 251, are among those participating.

Troop No. 146 led by Mrs. Frank Brady and Mrs. H. C. Booth, will present a specialty number entitled "Mexican Hat Dance," the national dance of Mexico.

Troop No. 249 of St. Aloysius will give a special dance entitled, "Coming Around the Mountain." Admission is free to parents and friends. In case of bad weather, the dance will be held in Central High School auditorium.

Action Seen Sunday At Horse Show

The western horse show Sunday at the Silver Horseshoe Riding Stables, 2547 Eakin-rd, with the entry of two out-of-town clubs into the picture, promises to give Hilltoppers entertainment aplenty.

The 12-class show is being sponsored by Albert Ept and his niece, Talmadge Thomas, new co-owners of the stables.

Foster Gossard, president of the London Western Association, has informed the Silver Horseshoe that he is bringing his club and horses for the show. The Ranch & Saddle Club of Chandlersville also has announced its intention of participating in the show. Other groups are expected to enter by post time.

Sunday's show is scheduled for 1 p. m. Entries probably will include a number of horses regularly boarded at the Hilltop stables. Classes are: 1. Plain, 2. Boot Race, 3. Pleasure, 4. Balloon Race, 5. Trail, 6. Roping, 7. Egg, 8. Musical Chairs, 9. Box Race, 10. Neck Reining, 11. Spotted, and 12. Bareback.

Mr. Ept is a retired C & O engineer who, in his youth, was a member of the 101 Ranch Wild West Show. Mrs. Thomas has been riding horses for about the last 12 years. She has participated in many western shows and, with her daughter, Romagae, 13, has won a number of mother-daughter riding trophies.

ACQUITTED, BEGINS NEW LIFE

BOWING HIS HEAD, 14-year-old Howard Lang listens as Rev. Raymond J. O'Brien says grace at a dinner in Chicago following the lad's acquittal in bludgeon slaying of his playmate, Lonnie Fellick. The jury found Howard innocent because he could not understand difference between right and wrong, so now he will take up life anew in a new locale and under a new name. (International) squeeze play, executed at the plate by George Powers and Cheney was home before Pitcher Phil Young had picked up the ball.

However, the Cowboys mowed up matters in their half of the sixth with the big three tallies Jerry Solinger led off with a single to left, and was sacrificed down by Jack Winnestaffer. Phil Young walked, and Don Nafzger was called safe at first on a very close play, beating out an infield hit.

Then it was time for big Dick Culbertson to bat 'em around as he drilled a three-bagger to the stadium, clearing the sacks and sending Pitcher Linhart to the bench. Komadina, East's relief pitcher, threw one pitch to Dick Kirk, the next hitter, that going on an infield ground out.

West Racks Up 10 Hits

The Cowboys had their hitting togs on by slamming out 10 blows, three by Culbertson, two by Dobbs and Nafzger and one each by Kirk, Solinger and Winnestaffer. A change took place in the West lineup, with Bob Birlé, the regular catcher, moving to second base to replace Dave Caton and Don Nafzger replacing Birle behind the plate. Birle still bats sixth, while Nafzger takes Caton's batting position of second.

The date of the Linden-McKinley game has not yet been set, but in the scheduled City League, the next game should be with Central, on the West field next Monday.

Starling Nine Wallops Champion

Starling Junior High School's baseball nine had little trouble in turning back Champion, 14 to 2, in a loosely played game at Harley Field.

Earl Spriggs with three hits in four trips to the plate and Bill Henthorne with three hits in five trips were the hitting stars in this last game of the season.

Starling holds wins over McKinley, Indianola, West Junior and Champion, and lost only to Everett, 6 to 5.

HBA Studies Participation In Blood Bank

A committee composed of Joe Briggs, Dr. R. J. Miller, Harriett Huff has been named by Phil Stout, president of the Hilltop Business Association, to determine whether members of the association will participate in the Franklin County blood donors program.

Tony Swenz, director of the local blood bank, addressed the meeting of the association Tuesday evening at Westgate Methodist Church. He stated that 92% of the war casualties are alive today due to the aid provided by the Red Cross Blood Banks.

"If Columbus were to be attacked by atomic bombs it would take three million pints of blood in three weeks time to aid the wounded," he claimed. At present there is need of 500 pints per week in Franklin County, he estimated.

Johnny Jones, Dispatch columnist, was the featured speaker of the evening. He told of his trip to the Olympics and commented on the lifting of the Berlin blockade.

A scund movie projector was presented to the Hilltop YMCA by the association and Dr. R. J. Miller of the Y board expressed thanks of that group for the gift. Averille Thorn, Y secretary accepted the projector.

Westgate Electric Nearly Done With Arlington Lights

Nearing completion is the $80,000 electrical street lighting job in Arlington, it was reported this week by the Westgate Electric Co., contractors for the work.

The Westgate Electric Co. now is in its 28th year. A specialty of the firm is industrial and residential wiring of all types.

The Arlington job consists of the installation of 147 new boulevard lights and relocation of 42 old residential district standards.

All wiring on the new electrical project will be underground in trenches adjacent to the curbs. All streets and driveways are crossed by pushing a pipe underneath by means of a special hydraulic equipment. The cable is put through these pipes. Lights will be controlled from a central switching station in which new equipment is being added to take care of the additional circuits.

The project, which started Feb. 1, is expected to be finished the last of June.

Class Orators Are Selected At West Junior

Two 9A students will represent the West Junior High class, as commencement orators, Wednesday, June 8, Vice Principal Ruth Bachmayer announced today.

Speakers will be Shirley Mercer, 14, of 274 Wrexham-av, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph O. Mercer, and Gerald Witherspoon, 15, of 2988 Wicklow-rd, son of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Witherspoon. Gerald's cousin, Virginia Witherspoon, was selected as senior high speaker last June.

Both of Gerald's parents are West High alumni, and four uncles, Ed, Chet, Ralph and John, are West High graduates.

Gerald is president of the West Junior High Student Council. His mother was secretary of that body during West High's first year on the present site.

Shirley, by virtue of membership in a family where clergymen abound, likewise aspires to the ministry. Both his father and grandfather prepared for the ministry. Gerald plans to attend Wheaton College.

Shirley, whose nickname is "Shug", attended Highland Avenue Elementary School.

One sister, Alice, a West High graduate, is now attending Bob Jones University in South Carolina.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

I sincerely appreciate the honor you gave me and we all enjoyed the flowers. I feel a great part of the praise really goes to the kids in the West High Band Variety show, Mrs. Hall and the stage crew. It took all of their cooperation and desire for a good show to make it what it was.

It also took a lot of work by the parents and teachers who helped. I'd like to thank every one of them publicly for helping me put it over.

Being my very first venture in that kind of work, I think everyone worked just a little bit harder, and it's really nice to work with people like that.

Sincerely,
Clair Barnard

Hurt In Crash, Life of Boy, 2, Still In Balance

Suffering a brain concussion resulting from an auto accident, the life of two-year-old John Clark, Jr., grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Calentine, 737 S. Eureka-av, has hung at a balance since May 4.

Never once regaining consciousness in seven days, the little boy was injured when the auto in which he was riding collided with another at Northwest-blvd and Fifth-av.

An emergency operation was performed on the child Monday, but until Wednesday evening he had not rallied to treatment.

Driver of the car was his father, John Clark, Sr., 20, 883 Timberman-rd, who was unhurt. Also injured in the collision was the boy's mother, Mrs. Marjorie Clark, the former Marjorie Calentine, a graduate of West High School. Mrs. Clark suffered a broken nose, shock, cuts and bruises. She was released from University Hospital late Tuesday evening.

Driver of the second car involved in the accident was Herbert Carroll, 54, 1091 Stanford-rd.

Adventist Fund Drive Progressing

Good progress is being made in the Seventh-Day Adventist drive for funds to help extend and support their around-the-world medical, educational and missionary projects, Richard T. Minesinger, local pastor of the Eastwood Seventh-Day Adventist Church, said today.

He reported that approximately $2500 of the $4000 local goal has been raised. The Ingathering goal of the denomination of North America is $2,500,000.

This is the 41st consecutive year that Seventh-Day Adventists have conducted a house-to-house drive for contributions to assist in the church's world-wide humanitarian work.

Only one or two offspring each maturity from the millions of eggs produced yearly by a single fish.

Man of Letters

ASTOUNDED Los Angeles post office inspectors find nearly 5,000 undelivered letters in the apartment of William E. Lilley, Jr., 48, who is cooling his feet in a bucket of water after his arrest. The inspectors said Lilley "got tired of walking" and, during the past 18 months, carried his letters to his apartment instead of delivering them. Lilley, a postman for 20 years, said he "fully intended" delivering them "in the course of time." (International)

Kent Bros. Champs

Last fall I predicted Allen Milk, Schroeck's and Seiller's would finish in that order in the Recreation League. At that time George Phillips and some of the others from the Kent Bros. team hopped all over me for not including them in the top three. Well, I guess I should have because last Monday evening they took the league championship. Needing only one victory over the second place Schroeck team, they took the first game, thereby giving them an undisputed championship. Schroeck's finished second and Allen Milk finished third.

Dick Ardle

Team members of the Kent's team are George Phillips, Hube Seitz, Lloyd Leasure, Kenny Morris and Tony Borowski.

Vee Dee-ers-McCullough Tie

On Thursday evening it was a different story as the second place Vee Dee-ers upset the first place McCullough's team two games to throw the league into a tie. McCullough's and the Vee Dee-ers will roll off the tie tonight. Paul Kayderer was the big man for Vee Dee-ers as he totaled 225-614 while the team had 972-2691. McCullough won the first game, 908-866, but the Vee Dee-ers came back to take the next two games 972-929 and 854-788.

Incidentally Kaye Seitz, daughter of Hube Seitz, was the top money winner in the Hilltop Mixed Doubles Tournament as she walked off with $63.

WIBC Convention Notes

Last Wednesday evening I saw a brand of courage displayed at the WIBC Tournament at Riverview which I don't think will ever be equalled in the bowling world. Zoe Nixon, rolling in the leadoff spot on the Standard Savings and Loan No. 5 team, rolled games of 97, 96 and 91. This may not seem like much to some of the hot shots of the lanes but let me finish. There was one thing different about this woman. She has only one leg. That's right, this 48-year-old kegler lost her left leg some 20 years ago but rather than give up, as so many would have done, she became more determined to overcome her handicap.

Not only does she bowl but also swims and is athletic director where she works. She recently rolled a 168 game in practice down at the Swan alleys. That is what I call courage, don't you?

Last Monday I had the pleasure of attending the opening of the WIBC convention being held at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel. At the time my team, McGregor Sports Wear, and the Bobbie Brooks Girls' team were being honored as Ohio State junior bowling champs. First we were introduced to the Yuma, Ariz., girls' junior bowling team, which won the national telegraphic tournament.

The girls were dressed in typical cowgirl outfits from the hat to the boots. These girls bowled in the WIBC tournament at Riverview and as one of their members put it, "We were scared to death." After the Yuma girls received their trophies the Bobbie Brooks team and my team received our trophies for the state championship and also the fellows received medals for being sixth in the nation.

In the afternoon a match game developed at the Olentangy alleys between Bobbie Brooks and the girls from Yuma, with the Arizona lassies coming out on top.

My team took on a pick-up team of some of the best women bowlers in the country and was also beaten badly. Here's the way we scored:

McGregor
D. Ardle	216	212	[illegible]	818
H. Beidel	167	152	192	491
J. Ritter	185	179	181	535
C. Latsche	142	140	154	436
P. Fetzko	159	182	196	537
	869	847	883	2597
Girls
M. Shaw	176	200	160	536
M. Place	209	223	186	618
S. Weinecke	193	182	180	864
J. Fiala	118	215	148	481
D. Brichta	174	166	241	581
	870	986	924	2780

Had these girls been in league competition their 986-2780 total would have been tops for the city this year. Millie Shaw is from Cleveland, where she averages 170 and rolls with Shanks Recreation. Helen Place averages 176 with the Brand Motors team of Chicago.

Shirlee Weinecke is also from Chicago, where she bowls with the Blatz Beer team and averages 177. Shirlee is the WIBC singles champion of last year when she rolled a 698 scratch score.

Jacquie Fiala rolls on the Youth Moore team of Chicago, where she averages 148. Dottie Brichta rolls on the Gearsby Enterprise team of Detroit, which is considered the best women's team in the nation, and averages an amazing 185.

I guess we should have gotten beat, don't you?

The 'Hilltop Plan'—an Opportunity

For the time being, let us disregard any political overtones which some may wish to read into the request made by the city fathers that the Hilltop present its desires and aspirations to City Hall in a single "package." For if we of the Hilltop do not ignore politics long enough to get in some really good licks on the "Hilltop Plan," we may pass up a golden opportunity which may never knock again.

The fact which some members of the community seem not to have recognized is that this is the first chance, and perhaps the last, for the Hilltop to get its "order" in on any other than a piece-meal basis.

The "Hilltop Plan" is the document to which city officials will turn when there is cash available for community improvements. It will be regarded as the official priority list for community projects. In other words, the planning done now probably will influence the destiny of the Hilltop for years to come.

Russell Carter, president of the Hilltop Community Council, has selected a special committee to screen suggestions for incorporation in the over-all plan. It is a good committee, but it is not superhuman. It needs help. It must have the sincere suggestions of all Hilltoppers willing to give some thought to the future of the community. Otherwise, the final plan would be representative of the thinking of only a handful rather than the community as a whole.

The Community Council is meeting tonight. It will devote its entire meeting to a discussion of ideas for community betterment. It will not be the last meeting, but it is important because it probably will set the pattern for the entire community effort.

A good start tonight will pay big dividends for the future of the Hilltop. The deliberations will be off to a good start only if YOU are represented. Make sure you are.

And Have Not Love

SYNOPSIS

Porter Farish has become so disagreeable to his wife, Beatrice, and their child, Marianne, that divorce seems inevitable. Beatrice realizes that her husband is not happy under the cruel domination of his employer, Mr. Ramey, a rich grasping industrialist. She resolves patiently that their child shall not be the victim of a broken home like poor frustrated Jane, teen-age daughter of Bea's best friend, Libby. One afternoon Bea meets Libby's latest swain, David Jordan, whom she finds "dangerously" attractive. More and more enslaved to Mrs. Ramey's selfish whims, Beatrice begins to rebel. Jane remains overnight with Marianne, while the latter's parents dine at their club, where Porter imbibes too freely, causing his wife a new anxiety.

CHAPTER TEN

AFTER dinner, when they had found two sofas and the orchestra had begun to play, Porter asked her to dance. They danced without speaking. Beatrice guided him gently away from congested areas on the floor and trying as much as possible to keep him near an open window. He had eaten little at dinner, and the effect of the cocktails was still potent. Knowing how he detested a scene, she knew how his clumsy act at the table had embarrassed him. After a bit, she thought, she would plead a headache and they would go home. Then she remembered that they had come in the Daltons' car.

"Mr. Ramey," Porter said.

He straightened at once and lifted his head. Beatrice felt his deep intake of the cool night air at the same time that she saw Mr. Ramey sitting with a man who could easily have qualified as a "Man of Distinction." For the comparison between the hunched and scowling Mr. Ramey and the other man would have been ludicrous if it had not also been pathetic.

"That's W. B. McGraw," Porter said.

"The New York banker?"

"Yes," Porter said. "We'll have to stop and speak to them of course."

At least Mrs. Ramey was not with them. Indeed, Mrs. Ramey came to the club rarely and only when Beatrice and Porter invited her. It was not uncommon, however, for Mr. Ramey to bring out-of-town business men to the club for dinner.

She wanted to ask Porter if he were all right, but decided against it. A quick glance at him as they separated and walked toward the [illegible] told her that she need not worry. Once again Porter was everything that Rufus Ramey had seen in him eight years ago.

Mr. McGraw welcomed them with relief and unsuppressed affability, especially Beatrice. Obviously Mr. McGraw [illegible] like to spend his weekends exclusively with men discussing business. They must join him and Mr. Ramey. They must. His insistence was that of a man of suavity and power. Beatrice would not have been surprised if he had kissed her hand. Mr. Ramey's attitude toward her and all women was that they, like the common cold, must be tolerated because there was nothing you could do about them. His chin sank deeper into his collar, and his piercing eyes were almost lost under a perpetual frown.

Mr. Ramey said, "Good evening, Mrs. Farish," as it had never seen her before.

Mr. McGraw said, "I had no idea your city had so much charm, Mrs. Farish."

Though Beatrice demurred, Porter took another drink.

Seeing Libby and David Jordan across the room was the perfect excuse. Beatrice arose, slipped her arm through Porter's in what she hoped would seem a casual gesture of wifely devotion. She was afraid that Mr. Ramey would see that Porter couldn't walk straight.

Halfway across the room Porter said, "You're good, Bea. You had McGraw eating out of your hand. You're really wonderful."

And again that strange melancholy in his voice.

Libby and David Jordan had joined their party. And tonight Beatrice noticed less what Libby wore than her obvious bid for attention. There seemed to be in Libby some terrible necessity to be the cynosure of all eyes, and she wasn't being at all subtle about it. It was all right to be a party girl, to be glamorous and popular, to be seen everywhere and invited to every party, but it was quite another thing when you were seemingly drugged into the urgency to be conspicuous. Libby had absolutely everything in the world that she wanted, and she lived exactly as she pleased. Beatrice knew no one more envied for her freedom and her total lack of dependence upon anyone. She worries me, Beatrice thought. What is she after? What does she want? She has told me time and again that she wants to marry no man she knows.

"We did make it," Libby said gaily. "How are you, darling? Is Jane all right? David, you haven't met Porter, Beatrice's husband."

The men shook hands.

They were so different, Beatrice thought. While Porter was unaware of David except as a new man Libby had met, David was forming an impression of Porter and taking his measure both privately and professionally. David knew that Porter had been drinking too much. He knew also that Beatrice's concern would grow to humiliation if Porter didn't stop. David knew them all for what they really were. He saw them with microscopic thoroughness as if he had been in their bedrooms when the door had been closed for the night.

Porter said, "The bar's downstairs, Mr. Jordan. You don't have to wait as long to be served down there. Would you care to join me?"

Later Beatrice wondered if she had stopped Porter from going downstairs to the bar with David that night perhaps none of what was to follow during the months to come would have happened. Yet now, she supposed that Porter and he would be gone only a few minutes.

But David came back alone, and he and Libby went across the room to join some people who were motioning to Libby.

Porter did not return at all.

She did not know how long she endured it, dancing with Bart who laughed too loudly, and with George whose jokes went flat, seeing Rhoda's "you-poor-thing" glance, and feeling Martha's anger that Porter had had the audacity to spoil her evening. And just when she felt she could bear it no longer, she saw David standing over her. His voice fell pleasantly upon her, and she did not know why at a time like this she should think of David, not here in this smoke-filled room, but as a man standing in the sun.

"Libby has deserted me," he said. "A fellow who writes detective stories came and took her away to help him with a plot, he said. She's much too popular. I've come to take you away, Beatrice."

There was no use to pretend. "Will you take me home?"

"You know I will."

She said to Rhoda and Bart, "David is taking me home." When she arose and walked beside him, she felt at least seven feet tall. The room had become a purgatory of staring eyes, especially those small burning eyes of Mr. Ramey. She left David only long enough to go to the powder room for her fur jacket and to give Anna, the maid, the customary tip. Then she joined David in the foyer.

Outside as they walked along the gravel path to the parking space, she stopped.

"I can't go," she said, aware of the deep distress in her voice. "I don't know where Porter is."

"I saw him get his coat and leave," David said.

She looked up at him, seeing his sunburned hair against the cool complete heavens.

"You're very kind," Beatrice said thickly.

He smiled. "Where you're concerned, I'm going to be the most selfish man you've ever known, Beatrice. Your husband will hate me for doing this. We always hate people who do things for us that we can't reciprocate. Free gifts always make us feel like [illegible]. Incidentally Libby knows I'm taking you home. She saw your husband leave, too."

When he opened the door of Libby's car, and she got in she said, "You don't know where I live."

His chuckle was spontaneously young and uninhibited. It cheered her at once. "That's what you think. On a typical tourist's tour of your city Libby pointed your home out to me. Don't tell me how to get there. I like to find my own way."

She sat back and held the little collar of her fur jacket high about her throat. The ride from the club to her house was so familiar that she had long ago ceased to notice the quickly passing vistas. Now she was seeing them as if she had never seen them before. The visualization of Porter's leaving her came and went. She tried to keep it with her, tried not to let it go because it was so much her concern and [illegible] and she must try to understand it. Yet it seemed to vanish in a kind of mental explosion because of something that was happening to her that she could understand no better than she could understand Porter's leaving without a word. It was as though her senses had been alerted, not for impending danger, but for exciting living. When David stopped the car before the house she had to remind herself sharply that she was home. Until then she and David had not seemed to be going anywhere in particular. There was a strange completeness in the fact of their just being together.

Shall We Trade Individual Enterprise for U. S. Rule?

By John Kelly

(Fourth in a weekly series)

Current issues are far deeper than they appear on the surface. Too often it is the case any more. So frequent that all of them hardly could be accidental. There is not and has not been enough old-fashioned straightforwardness.

That our way of life could be at stake is rather plainly seen upon examination of "The Economic Stability Act of 1949." In any event it is difficult to explain away the President's request for vast new, far reaching powers. Administration sponsorship does not help business any.

The Council of Economic Advisers, of which Leon H. Keyserling is vice chairman, is made up of three men. If each was the worlds' foremost economist—undoubtedly a questionable assumption—they are still human beings. Just because they work for Uncle Sam is no reason for their being mistake-proof.

Broad Responsibility

Mr. Keyserling's testimony before a congressional committee is much too long to detail here. He would make the government responsible for the state of business at all times. In Mr. Keyserling's view, the Government should set its policies and take specific steps in accordance with the general trend.

This doctrine, which happily has little chance of adoption, would throttle our price system. It would bring the practical decisions of business—vitally important to the success or failure of individual enterprise—under an unprecedented degree of government control.

The fundamental error in this doctrine is that it imposes more responsibility than the government can properly assume or exercise. It vastly exaggerates the power and capability of the government to stabilize and direct business.

Questions Raised

Who and where are these all-wise controllers of such powers? What analytical and forecasting methods can they rely upon? What economic doctrine and theory will these tyros follow? And most important of all, how in the world could they be free of political interference in this or any other governmental set-up?

This doctrine goes far beyond the American conception of the function of government. It shows little or no regard for its effect on our productive organization. To say the least, industry would be seriously impaired.

As far as we can make out, the doctrine would destroy the independence of thought and action as well as the incentive leading to the world-famed American enterprise.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Jesus Teaches of the Judgment

Scripture—Mark 13: 14:2-9.

As Jesus went out of the temple, one of His disciples said to Him, "What manner of stones are here?" Jesus answered, that there should not be one stone of that great building left upon another.

Four disciples asked the Master when the day of judgment would come. When the fig tree puts forth leaves, ye know that summer is near, He said, but no one knows the day of judgment but God.

"Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is . . . Watch, lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch," Jesus warned.

A woman poured expensive ointment over Jesus' head, and when the disciples murmured Jesus said she but anointed Him beforehand for His burial.

Spent for all types of MEDICAL SERVICE
In 1942—divided as follows:

DRUGS	$5.93
DOCTORS	8.17
DENTISTS	4.03
HOSPITALS	4.69
NURSES	.90
MISCELLANEOUS	5.00

MOST OF US are generally under the impression that doctors and dentists receive most of the money spent for medical purposes. As the charts and tables will show, this is far from true. One of the total national medical bill for 1942, (according to Medical Economics Magazine) 57 per cent of every dollar was spent for drugs, hospitals, nurses and other supplies and services.

America's level of health is the highest in the world, but our physicians, dentists, pharmacists, hospitals, nurses and technicians are constantly striving to make that medical dollar buy MORE health for you.

PREPAID medical and hospital insurance plans, the VOLUNTARY American way, are now available to more than 100,000,000 workers. . . . Ask your doctor about it.

SUN LIFE of CANADA
SECURITY BY CO-OPERATION

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

HARRY S. DRAGO, the author, was engaged to write a series of Westerns for a cowboy star. The day Drago reported for work, the star embarked on a wild spree and disappeared from sight. While the studio sleuths were trying vainly to track the star down, Drago did nothing but sit in the sun and draw twelve hundred dollars a week.

After four weeks of this, he sought the producer and protested, "This sort of life is not for me. I'm going back to New York." "Wait," pleaded the producer. "We're closing in on our missing star now. We'll soon have him back. If you must keep busy, I've got a job for you that, as an author searching for human interest stuff, should have appeal. We get women's clubs out here and have to show the members through the studio. It's a must, for these Hokinson characters can kill a picture dead if you offend them. Why not take over these tours?"

"Might as well," agreed Drago. He assembled his first group and began pointing out the sights. One dowager pointed to a building he had neglected to mention. "What's that?" she demanded. Drago explained, "That's just a place where we store spoiled film." "Fine thing," snorted the dowager. "The whole country has a building shortage, and you use a fine house like that for the storage of spoiled film."

"You don't know the half of it," agreed Drago. "They are also paying me twelve hundred dollars a week just to point it out to you."

THE BIBLE IS A CATHOLIC BOOK

People differ radically in what they think about the Bible.

Some seem to think it was handed down from Heaven written in English and bound in morocco. Many accept it as the inspired Word of God without knowing why they are justified in doing so. And others say that the Bible is full of contradictions and must be taken "with a grain of salt."

A proper understanding of the Scriptures can exert a tremendous influence for good in your personal life. You should, therefore, know where we get the Bible . . . what it means . . . why you can believe its every word.

Nowhere in the Bible text will you find a list of the 73 inspired books of which it is composed. This list was given to the world by the Catholic Church almost three full centuries after the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. Between the time of the Crucifixion and the time that the Scriptures were gathered into a single Book, millions had received and accepted the teachings of Christ . . . and had died without ever seeing the complete Bible.

Established by Christ Himself and rapidly spread among the nations of the world, the Catholic Church was carrying on Christ's work for the salvation of men some 60 years before the Apostle John wrote his book of the New Testament.

For more than a thousand years afterward, the Scriptures were preserved and circulated by Catholic monks and scholars who laboriously copied the sacred text by hand. And the Bible authorized by the Catholic Church was the first book produced by Gutenberg upon the invention of printing.

Yes, the Bible is truly a Catholic book. They were members of the Catholic Church, who, under God's inspiration, wrote the New Testament in its entirety.

It was the Catholic Church which treasured it and gave it to the world in its original and unaltered form. It is the infallible authority of the Catholic Church that always has been the only sure guarantee of its inspiration.

There are obscure and difficult passages in the Bible, some of which may seem confusing. But with the complete revealed truth of God, delivered to her from the beginning, the Catholic Church has faithfully unfolded the meaning of the written Word of God to past generations of mankind—and does so today.

Those who are familiar with the Bible, as well as those who are reading it for the first time, will find many important questions concerning it clearly answered in a free booklet which we shall send you on request. Ask for Pamphlet No. 3-N.

"Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee."

The memory of mother lives on. It is one of the sweetest and most indestructible of man's recollections.

For it was mother who rocked us to sleep with an angelic lullaby when our baby hearts were breaking. Mother taught us the difference between right and wrong, and how to pray.

When we grew into adolescence, she sacrificed the material things that could give her comfort and pleasure that we might have more of them to brighten our own paths.

If we fell ill, mother patiently comforted us and nursed us back to health. She watched over the sick bed, a cheerful smile on her face, a silent prayer on her lips.

Sometimes we wonder how much of life's sweetness would have escaped us had it not been for mother's prayers. Somehow we like to think that in the years and days when we ourselves were unable to pray, that mother's intercession with God called His attention to our needs in a very special way that we believe only a mother's prayers can do.

Even those of us who have none or little cause to regret our efforts to show mother our measure of appreciation, feel that no matter what sacrifices we made for her, none of them could begin to measure up to those inspired by the depths of her love for us.

God bless mother. Thank God for the sweetness of her. Bless God for a memory that lives.

Magly Field Seats Getting 'The Works'

When West High students and patrons return to Magly Field, newly painted stadium seats and foot-boards will be in evidence.

A score of boys, under the leadership of Clarence Bateman, faculty adviser, for the past month have been sanding, planing, treating and painting the planks, which will add to the comfort of the athletic enthusiasts who attend the school's contests.

More than 320 of these huge planks, for purposes of preservation, have been dipped in a paint and creosote solution. A huge tank, 30 feet in length, holds the preservative paint in which the planks are dipped.

More than 6000 feet of seats and foot-boards have received the attention of the boys, Mr. Bateman said.

Boys aiding Mr. Bateman on this project include: Rich Beard, Dave Bill, Richard Brown, Harold Jack, Rich Kruczynski, Byron Ridenour, Ray Stevenson, Garth Trappe, Rhoney Chapman, Calvin Green, Frank Policaro, Carl Thomas, Bob White, Ronald Smith, Bob Reed, Fred Battiger, Earl Redman, John Smalley and Jim Alkire.

Poppy Day Approaching

In numerous veteran administration hospitals and soldiers homes, throughout the country, disabled veterans have been engaged in the task of making poppies.

All disabled veterans, who can participate in the project are paid for their labors. This opportunity to convert their idle hours to profit is a vital factor for improved morale.

May 27 and 28, poppies will be on sale in Columbus. The project will be sponsored jointly by the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Discussions Open For 'Hilltop Plan'; Traffic Top Topic

The Hilltop Community Council got off to a flying start last Thursday night in its discussion of various projects which may be incorporated in the "Hilltop Plan" for community betterment.

Most suggestions, as was expected, centered around the growing traffic and transportation problem that is being felt not only on the Hilltop but throughout the city.

Preliminary discussions touched on numerous problems, but, as Elmer J. Hegenberger, chairman of the special "Hilltop Plan" committee, puts it:

"We, so far have scratched only the surface. We of the community must get our thinking caps on. This is our opportunity to get all our long-range wants before the city government. We must 'think big' and let the petty things slide for a little while. What we need mostly right now is a lot of ideas for big community projects on sound, constructive thinking."

Mr. Hegenberger stressed that the "Hilltop Plan" will not be a hastily drawn document. The door will be open, he indicated, to ideas for the Hilltop's betterment for several weeks.

Back Rt. 40 Relocation

Probably the most important action taken at last week's Community Council meeting was a resolution, intended for incorporation in the Plan, supporting any moves the city government might make to take State Route 40 off W. Broad-st.

The council backed a proposal brought before it by E. O. Melvin, 107 S. Warren-av, a member of the city traffic commission, to reroute State Route 40 over a proposed W. Long-st bridge, McKinley-av, and a proposed boulevard roughly paralleling Valleyview drive to a point well beyond the western city limits.

The council, at the same time, indicated its willingness to go along with any modification of the proposal to the end that through trucks be taken off W. Broad-st and that a ready access to the downtown area other

Belvidere-av Swamp Action Is Demanded

The Hilltop Community Council has decided to press immediately for the elimination of the swamp condition which exists in a portion of the undeveloped land lying between Belvidere and Wrexham-avs just south of Floral-av.

Community Council has decided to take the matter directly to the City Council as a menace to the health and safety of residents of the neighborhood. City Council will be asked to demand that the city department of public service fill in the low ground in compliance with a resolution approved by Council about two years ago.

City rubbish trucks began filling in the swamp section about a month ago, but the work was stopped when the owner of the land objected that humus which he obtains from the low-lying ground was being covered by the rubbish. The work had been about one-third completed when the protest was lodged.

The Hilltop Council has sought unsuccessfully to get an order from the city department of health to proceed with the fill as a menace to health and safety. Russell Carter, president of the Hilltop Council, says he has the name of one child who fell into the water in the bottom of the [illegible] saved only through the presence of mind of an older brother.

Residents of the neighborhood also complain of a stench emanating both from the stagnant water in the hole and from unwashed tin cans lying uncovered in the sun amid the rubbish which partially fills the hole.

Y Campaign Needs More Volunteers

More volunteer workers are needed to push the Hilltop YMCA membership drive through to a speedy and successful conclusion, Averille Thorn, Hilltop Y secretary, said today.

Mr Thorn estimated that at least 20 more men or women must give a few hours of their time within the next few days in order that all present and prospective members of the Y might be contacted.

The campaign was launched last Sunday at a meeting of volunteers at the Hilltop Y building. Volunteers who reported on that date have been assigned their work, but a great deal more work remains to be assigned, Mr. Thorn said.

Volunteers were urged to get in touch with Jerry Spears, Sr., chairman of the membership campaign, or with the YMCA office, JO. 4841, and offer their services.

Workers who received their assignments last Sunday also were urged to make their reports to campaign officials as soon as possible in order that the committee might keep a close check on the progress of the drive.

West and Linden Nines Meet Today; Eye '49 City Title

By Dave Miller

West High's baseball nine will travel to Linden McKinley this afternoon to play the Panthers in a game that may decide the City High baseball title for 1949. The Cowboys, yesterday, defeated Central, 4 to 1, on the local diamond.

Currently, Linden and the locals are in a two-way first place tie for the City Loop's first place possession. Both nines have won seven and lost one. West lost its only one to the same Linden team last month, 9-8, while Linden's lone setback was at the hands of South, 3-2, earlier in the season. The Panthers avenged the defeat yesterday afternoon by edging the Bulldogs, 2-1.

In the Central game, Jim Hill, Pirate moundsman, was very effective in his control, walking only one man, but the Cowboys' batters were again at their best in hitting with men on base. They came through with eight hits in all. Dick Kirk and Bob Birle got two apiece, the former getting both doubles. Birle was again effective in hitting with men on base, knocking in two runs with his two singles.

Hamrick Wins First

Jim Hamrick started on the hill for the Cowboys and was the first Cowboy to win a game besides Young in the loop play. He pitched for five and one-third innings before Phil Young was brought in to stave off a Central threat.

The Cowboys picked up the opening run in the second frame after the opening round uprising was killed by a double play. Jack Pickens led the inning off with a single, advanced on Hill's wild pitch, and after Don Nafzger struck out, Dick Culbertson smashed a line drive right at Shortstop Jim Towler, who threw to the second sacker, Howard Cassady, doubling off Pickens.

The Cowboys picked up single runs in the second and third innings, both coming on two hits, and sewed the ball game up in the third with two more tallies, on the same number of safeties. The Cowboys' sixth, their last inning, was the only frame that they were unable to collect a hit. Central's lone tally came in the fourth.

Score In Second

The Cowboys started off in the second when the first batter, Kirk, smashed a double to left center. He stayed at the keystone sack while Morris Dobbs was grounding out, but scored when Birle sent a single to left, past shortstop. Jack Winnestaffer was safe on Shortstop Towler's miscue, but Hamrick grounded out to end the frame.

In the third, with two away, Dick Culbertson singled, stole second base, and plated on Kirk's second consecutive two bagger to left-center, making the score 2-0. Central made it 2-1 in the fourth when Jim Towler, leading off the inning, was safe on Hamrick's boot of his grounder. Third Baseman John Wolfe singled Towler to second while Ralph Readout popped out to Catcher Don Nafzger. Jim Hill then singled to left field to send Towler to third, where he scored after Dobbs' catch of Harry Hoffman's long drive to left. Hamrick then proceeded to get himself out of a hole by picking John Wolfe off second base to end the inning.

Fifth Inning Is Clincher

The Cowboys sewed up the ball game in the fifth with two tallies. Nafzger started it off with a single to left field. After Culbertson had filed out to left, Kirk hit to Third Baseman Wolfe, who threw to second in an attempt to get Nafzger, but the latter beat

1000 See Western Show; Plans Laid for Fall Rodeo

More than 1000 spectators crowded the bleachers and around the show ring of the Silver Horseshoe Stables Sunday afternoon to watch the Western horse show in which horsemen from Columbus and eight towns participated.

The size of the crowd and the number of participants was so gratifying to the co-owners of the stables, Albert Ept and his niece, Talmadge Thomas, that immediately began to lay plans for a Western Horse Show and Rodeo complete with calf-roping, for next fall.

Sunday's program was launched by a grand parade, led by Bob Cardwell, 126 E. Eleventh-av, one of the judges. The other judge was Harold Hughes of Alkire-rd.

First place winners in the 12 scheduled classes:

Plain Horse Class, Bob Myers, Mt. Starling; Boot Race, Harold Reed, Ashville; Pleasure Class, Bailey "Stretch" Bradly, Hilliards; Balloon Race, Bill Irwin, Columbus; Trail Class, Jim Shato, Mt. A special showing of the Palomino Class was won by Ernie Hendrix.

The show was preceded by an exhibition of trick and stunt riding by three members of the Mt. Sterling Riding Club, Lee Tracy, Bob Myers and Charlie Bliss.

Roy Redifer, 879 Brown-rd, was ringmaster for the Show. The public address system microphone was handled by Don Fisher.

The eight towns aside from Columbus, which were represented by contestants were Ashville, Hilliards, Mt. Sterling, Groveport, Chandlersville, London, Briggsdale and New Concord.

West High School Soprano Signed For Weekly Station WRFD Show

You'll be hearing "Twilight Songs by Marilyn Ring"—if you haven't already — over station WRFD for a 15-minute program every Wednesday at 7:30.

Last week, youthful and attractive Marilyn Ring, 681 S. Wayne-av, West High senior and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ring, was auditioned by the local station. Her engagement was arranged immediately.

Already well-known on the Hilltop for her many public musica appearances, it is a compliment to Marilyn, the school, and the community, that her lyric soprano voice is in demand elsewhere.

Marilyn has studied voice for three years under Miss Lelia E. White. Singing in many recitals, Miss Ring has also participated in many local musicals, taking part in the recent Band Variety Show.

Her start was in a little show given by John Burroughs School when she was a student in the seventh grade. There she sang "Ava Maria" and surprised her friends and family who encouraged her to continue vocal training.

The golden-throat vocalist is identified with many school activities; she is a member of the French Club, "Y" Teens, Dramatic Club, and is a soloist in the West High Choir.

Marilyn Ring

Realizing the responsibilities and sacrifices incident to a career, Marilyn acknowledges that this is "just the beginning," and "I have much hard work and studying ahead of me."

Future plans, following graduation, include attendance at Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York.

Hilltop Cub Scouts Visit Aircraft Plant

HILLTOP CUB PACK 37 BOYS were among the thousands of visitors who toured Curtiss-Wright's airplane division plant here during its recent Community Day open house. They are shown here as they entered the big aircraft factory, surrounded by a group of Hilltop and West Side citizens. In the center is W. E. Langdon, leader of the group, and in the background are several of the sponsoring adults who are now attending a Cub training class conducted by Vernon Sanford, 277 N. Ogden-av, who works at Curtiss-Wright. The family at the right are Mr. and Mrs Chester Bell, 711 S. Terrace-av, and their two children. Mr. Bell is employed in Curtiss-Wright's machine shop. Pack 37 meets in the Hilltonia United Brethren Church.

Miss Katherine Gress, West High English Teacher, Retires in June

By Myron T. Seifert

Katherine Gress, 2034 Berkshire-rd, popular English teacher at West High School and globe-trotter, will retire from her teaching post at the Hilltop school on Wednesday, June 8.

Known to thousands of West High students who have been enrolled in her classes, her more than a quarter century of service to the local school has merited wide recognition.

Scarcely a family in the community has not heard of the name "Miss Gress," whose universal knowledge and sympathetic understanding of youth and their problems, marked her as a pedagogue of no mean ability.

Always commanding the respect of her pupils, she has had that rare faculty of injecting much humor and sunshine into her classes, making them interesting to her pupils and cultivating an appreciation for the finer values of life.

Bowing out in her natural, modest manner, "without any fuss," is Miss Gress' idea of "retirement."

Retirement, however, means a change, and in her particular case, more travel—leisurely followed — in Florida, California, and perhaps other parts of the world.

She has been abroad on two occasions. She has visited England, France, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Scotland and part of Spain.

Miss Gress can point with pride to the legion of fine Hilltop boys and girls, whose friendship she has developed through the years; and "her boys and girls," in return eagerly return the compliment by always looking her up upon their return to some alumni or school activities.

Previous to her West High appointment 26 years ago, she taught at Bephos High School, at Circleville, and came to Columbus to teach at Roosevelt Junior High for a short time.

She obtained her degree from Ohio State University, and has done work at Columbia University in New York.

Upon embarking on her new life, thousands of Hilltop well-wishes follow Miss Gress, and all join in saying, "Bon voyage in your well-deserved travels, Miss Gress."

'Hilltop Plan' Talks Center On Traffic

than W. Broad-st be furnished the residents of the Hilltop area.

Seek One-Way Streets

Another important proposal still in the discussion stage is the suggestion that all north-south streets on the Hilltop be made one-way streets, alternately carrying traffic north and south. This suggestion was made with a view to speeding the flow of traffic in the business districts and reducing the bottlenecks caused by parking on both sides of the residential streets.

Also thrown into the "Hilltop Plan" hopper for screening was a suggestion that a thoroughfare be cut through the State Hospital and State School grounds to provide a direct route from Sullivant-av to the foot of Grandview-av. Another suggestion along the same line was the proposal that Schultz-av be extended to link directly with Grandview-av.

The proposal that Eureka-av be extended to Fisher-rd and that a bridge connecting Fisher-rd with Goodale-blvd be constructed also was presented for screening by the special committee.

New Street Lights Asked

Another major suggestion which undoubtedly will enter into the final Plan in some form is the proposal for the installation of a "modern" street-lighting system for W. Broad-st from Central-av to the western city limits at Derrer-rd. The suggestion as presented to the committee was not specific as to the type of lights most suitable, but "boulevard lighting" was considered the most probable type of lights to be requested.

A suggestion also was made that the Mound-st bus line be extended westward to Hague-av from its present terminus at Wayne-av for the benefit of both West High School and John Burroughs School pupils who now have no available public transportation in that area.

Another proposal for the benefit of school children was a plea for a traffic light at Lechner-av and W. Broad-st.

West To Face Linden Today

the peg to put two on with only one down. Dobbs then lined to Jim Tessler at short, but he dropped the ball for his fourth error of the game. After dropping it, he threw to Second-Sacker Cassady, in an attempt to get Nafzger still off the bag. But the latter was then heading for third, and Cassady threw the ball past third base, plating Nafzger. Birle then batted in Kirk with his second hit of the day, a one-baser to left.

In the Central sixth, Hamrick got into a bit of trouble by walking a man and letting another single. However, Young relieved him to quiet the uprising and set the Pirates down in the seventh.

West, in going against Linden, will face a star-studded mound crew consisting of three top-notch twirlers. They are Johnny Hayes, a senior; Bob Vannett, a junior, and Kermit Troutman, a sophomore. Hayes and Troutman are right-handers while Vannett is a portsider. The latter recently pitched the Panthers into the Central District Class A title, representing the section in the state tournament at Findlay.

The Cowboys still have two more games this week after the Linden tilt. On Thursday, they play host to Chillicothe, and Friday they will go against a tough aggregation in meeting North on the Arcadia-av diamond.

Central	000 100 0	1	4	5
West	011 020 x	4	8	1

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

AN IMPORTANT corporation lawyer told a reporter from the Wall Street Journal that the best advice he ever got was tendered by the doorkeeper at the United States Supreme Court. The lawyer had just been handled in rather summary fashion by that august body, and expressed himself in no uncertain terms as he stamped out.

"You better be keerful 'round heah," warned the doorkeeper. "Remember dis am de Supreme Cote ob de whole country an' ef you gits contempt of cote here dere ain't nobody to appeal to but God-a-mighty."

Shortly after her honeymoon, the comely receptionist, Betsy Duffy, brought a strange-looking concoction in from the kitchen and promptly planked it down in front of her husband. He dutifully ate a few spoonsful, gulped, and ventured, "What do you call this, darling?" "It's date pudding," beamed Betsy. "How interesting," he answered. "But tell me, what date?"

Modern Poetry

ECHOES FROM FORESTSIDE, by Ada May Dyer (C. Carlton Hartley, Publisher, The Hilltop Record, Columbus) 137 pp., $3.

This is Mrs. Dyer's first published collection; admirers of her work which has appeared in newspapers and verse magazines for the past several years, will not be disappointed in the book. Pleasing in format, the volume may be obtained from the author whose address is 1416 E. Rich-st. Mrs. Dyer and her husband, Amos O. Dyer, formerly lived on the Hilltop.

Mrs. Dyer has dedicated her book to the memory of her parents. Poems are divided into several sections, titled "Birds and Nature Poems," "Tributes," "Religious Poems," "Dog Poems," "Heart Throbs," and "Humorous and Miscellaneous." All of her poems are characterized by her wholesome philosophy, her love of nature, dogs and family, and her sense of humor.

Four lines from one of her dog poems:

"Yet many talk when they should walk,
Those half as wise are few,
For if they were, we could infer,
Would silent be like you" (a dog).

A fine religious poem:

MY GOD

"My God is in the flowers and trees,
In sunshine and in evening breeze.
I sense Him in the morning air
And feel His pulses everywhere.

My God is in the rhythmic flow
Of seasons as they come and go.
I hold Him fast within my breast.
I know He gives the weary rest."

There are so many really fine poems in Mrs. Dyer's collection that they cannot all be mentioned here. The book must be seen and read to be fully appreciated.

Another poem from ECHOES FROM FORESTSIDE:

CRUDENESS

"Man looks across the wilderness
From summits of the hills
And marvels at immensity—
It gives him rapturous thrills—
The forest glade, the valleys fair
And rivers hurrying on,
He realizes his littleness,
He who is woman-born.
Though artists' works are beautiful
Adorning halls of lords,
Yet man-made beauty is quite crude
Compared with that of God's.

THE SURGEON

Now he begins; his fingers feel
The tiny burning bit of steel;
They move, obedient to a star
Unseen by us; his sure hands are
So swift that the swift bands of death
Are held; there is one slender breath
Between the two, so delicate
No callipers can measure it.
Save those he holds — I think there is
No act so near to God as his.

CHINA CAT

The spotted cat sits on the hearth,
His coat all smooth and trim.
And as I go about my work,
I often glance at him.

He never seems to notice me,
And never turns his face.
He sits beside the Indian jug,
Serenely in his place.

But when the evening fire is lit
And dancing merrily,
I sit across the room from him,
And then he looks at me.

Perhaps I do not hear him purr
But I am certain that
He smiles and smiles and smiles at me,
This china Cheshire cat.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

Copyright, 1949 by Margaret Gorman Nichols. Published by Monroe-Smith Company. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

SYNOPSIS

Porter Dyer has become so disagreeable to his wife, Beatrice, and their child, Marianne, that divorce seems inevitable. Bee realizes that her husband is not happy under the cruel domination of his employer, Mr. Ramey, a rich grasping industrialist. She resolves patiently that their child shall not be the victim of a broken home like poor frustrated Jane, teen-age daughter of Bee's best friend, Libby. One afternoon Bee meets Libby's latest swain, David Jordan, whom she finds "dangerously" attractive. More and more enslaved to Mrs. Ramey's selfish whims, Beatrice begins to rebel. Jane remains overnight with Marianne, while the latter's parents dine at their club, where Porter imbibes too freely, causing his wife a new anxiety. David Jordan drives Bee home from the club and subtly makes love to her.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

DAVID JORDAN would see her inside, Beatrice thought, and she would thank him again, and he would go back to Libby.

Yet when she gave him her key—she always carried it because Porter had a habit of forgetting his—and David opened the door he said, "I want to see the setting, too. Aren't you going to ask me in, Beatrice?"

Lacking the spirit to refuse, she went in, and he followed her. They went into the living room where only one lamp burned, and where the fire upon the hearth still glowed dimly. It's a beautiful room, she thought. It is elegant and formal, though comfort doesn't suffer because of elegance and formality. And now he will know the colors I like to live with—gray and yellow and sea-blue. Consciousness of the room exploded, too, as she went to the white fireplace and stood facing it. Though she didn't see him, she felt his nearness when he came and stood beside her.

"I'm not married," he said. "I was once almost, but she died. I'm sorry she died but I'm extremely glad I didn't marry her. She would have been like one of the women in your party tonight, the one in blue. She hasn't had an original thought since she got her man, and she still wears the same kind of clothes that she wore when she was eighteen. She'll be juvenile as long as she lives. A child-wife when her hair is white. But children can be devilishly clever. She holds him with her helplessness." When he spoke again, he spoke intimately to her. "Beatrice, you're the loveliest woman I've ever seen. When you went yesterday, you left a suggestion of love in that room."

They turned toward each other.

"David, don't say things like that to me."

"Why not?"

"Because—because I want to hear them."

"You will see me, won't you?"

"When I married, David, it was not a finality; it was a beginning."

"But you will see me. You'll fight it and make alibis for yourself, but because you're essentially honest you'll know they're just alibis." Though he moved closer, he did not touch her. He smiled and the tenderness of his smile was wonderfully warming, wonderfully reassuring. "This is us, darling."

He left at once and when she went upstairs, she went to the guest room and closed the door. Hours later through filmy sleep she heard Porter's steps upon the stairs, and then the door of his room closing with finality.

Last night was a dream, she told herself in the morning when the sun came into the house in ribbons of golden light. She selected a brown tweed suit and walking shoes, and felt sensible and clear-headed when she joined Marianne and Jane at breakfast. They had a hilarious time telling riddles, and Beatrice found herself joining in their fun, feeling in their wholesomeness and seeing in their pure young faces a panacea for herself.

It was a dream last night, she thought, I hope I shall never dream it again. This is my life. This is my child. And this is my home. These are familiar and beloved and inviolate. Darkness makes you think all sorts of strange things but sunlight reaches into the darkness, searches for it, exposes it, and drives it out. I shall drive Marianne and Jane to Sunday school and call for them in an hour. I am Beatrice Farish. I am what I was before last night. But am I not much more? No. Regret it and deny it. Go back to the day before yesterday. Who can go back?

"Isn't Daddy going to have any breakfast?" Marianne asked.

"It was a late night," Beatrice told her, "and Sunday is the only morning he can sleep."

Jane said, "I was going to call you last night, Bee. I thought I heard something very late but it was all sort of vague, and I went to sleep again."

"I read to Jane last night," Marianne declared. "You know how she used to read to me. Well, I read to her last night, didn't I, Jane?"

"You're not bad either. Did you see Mother, Bee?"

"Yes."

"And David? He and Mother are always kidding each other. They have a lot of fun. Bee, do you . . . do you think they'll get married?"

"I don't know. Would you mind if she did?"

Jane's face was solemn. "I don't know. I really don't. I suppose it would make everything different. I used to think that maybe she and Daddy . . . but that will never happen now." Her shoulders under the white sweater moved in a little shrug. "I don't get it. I mean why mother and Daddy didn't stay together. I guess it's one of those things. I wouldn't want to go to South Africa to live. I can tell you that right now."

"If I were you, I wouldn't try to solve a problem until there is one."

Jane placed her napkin on the table. "I do have a problem, sort of. I wonder if I could stay with you today because well . . . David will be at the apartment with Mother, and I don't want to interfere. I feel funny about being there. Of course I like him and all that, but I feel so . . . so unnecessary, and Bessie always leaves right after breakfast on Sunday to visit her sister-in-law. So I thought if you don't mind too much, Bee, I'd like to stay here today."

Child of divorce, your loyalty and your love split in two, dreaming your vain dream that your mother and father will live together again, so that you will not feel that your heart and your body have been partitioned between them . . .

"You may stay as long as you like," Beatrice said kindly. "You may always stay here as long as you like. Later today Marianne and I must call on Mrs. Ramey."

"No!" Marianne cried. "You're not going to leave me with her, are you, Mother?"

"No, dear. We'll make a short call and I'll be with you the whole time."

Uncertainty of Porter's attitude had not been a part of the pattern of their joined lives. When she returned from dropping Marianne and Jane off at the church, and after speaking with Frances in the kitchen, Beatrice could reach no decision as to whether or not she should awaken Porter for his morning golf date. It was terrible to stand before the door of the room that held so many memories that only they shared, and feel like an intruder. It was worse when in secret, inner consciousness she knew that last night she had felt closer to David than she had felt with Porter for a long time.

When she opened the door and went in, she saw first not Porter but her own unslept-in bed. It seemed almost a living thing reproaching her. Porter, his arms cushioning his head, opened his eyes and looked at her.

"I suppose I made a fool of myself last night," he said.

She went to the window and drew the curtains. When you feel as I do now—that this is a moment of crisis—you do the same things, she thought. I draw the curtains, and then I shall wash the ash tray, and smooth a wrinkle in my bedspread, and pick up Porter's shoes . . .

"We can forget it, Porter. We can. We must control and channel our thoughts. And so I can forget that you didn't come back last night."

He pressed his fingers against his forehead and closed his eyes. "I'm sorry, Bee. Really sorry. I know that it embarrassed you. I know also because Mr. Ramey was there and didn't miss it that I jeopardized my job and your and Marianne's security . . . everything."

"Why did you do it?"

"Why? Why do people usually run away? To escape."

"To escape me, Porter? Maybe I'm a coward but I can't ask you that now. I'm not brave enough for the answer I fear. I must keep what is under this roof, this marriage, this oneness of purpose, as long as I can."

"Bee."

"Yes, Porter."

When she looked at him, she knew that he was asking her to see that he was as unhappy as she was.

"I'm sorry, Bee. I hope it won't happen again. But I can't promise that it won't."

The telephone on the table between the beds rang.

"Who is it?" Porter asked into it. "Bill? Yes, I can make it. I'm okay. I'll see you on the first tee at Jewbia." . . .

Beatrice picked up the ash tray and took it to the bathroom.

When Porter came in he asked, "Who brought you home last night?"

"David Jordan."

"Who's he?"

"A friend of Libby's."

"I don't know him, so I won't have to thank him and tell him I hope I can do the same for him some time. That was meant to be funny. I don't suppose it's funny at all. What is his name again?"

"David Jordan."

Porter, stop asking me about him. You are making him real again, a man warmly human. What can I trust if I cannot trust my own feelings? Though he didn't touch me, Porter, David lifted me up. He lifted up my spirit and my flesh, and I am still on that higher level of living.

Red Pressure on Satellites For Collectivization Seen

Legislation Would Deprive Communists of Citizenship

WASHINGTON—State department experts are convinced that Moscow will insist upon full-scale collective farming in all the satellite countries.

The Kremlin has put on the heat for collectivization in Poland and Romania. So unpopular is the step with the peasants who make up most of the population in Russia's orbit that even the most dedicated Communists quail at the thought of confronting their countries with such a program.

Rep. Francis E. Walter

The State department believes that an absolute insistence on collective farming will bring America new allies among the mass of people of Iron Curtain countries.

• • • •

● BLOW FOR REDS—The Communist party in the United States would be dealt a crippling blow if legislation sponsored by a House Democratic leader is enacted.

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D). Pennsylvania, is pushing a bill to deprive Americans who join the Communist party of their citizenship.

Naturalized Americans would be subject to deportation after being divested of their citizenship, while native-born Americans would become "stateless."

As "stateless" residents of the United States, they would lose many of the privileges they now take for granted, such as voting, holding public office, running for public office, obtaining a passport and, in many states, practicing as an attorney or physician.

• • • •

● TREE FOR HOFFMAN—A tree, bearing the name of European Recovery Director Paul G. Hoffman will be growing in Holland shortly. But it very definitely will not be in Hoffman's "memory."

The matter came up when the Economic Co-operation administrator greeted 33 young Dutch farmers who are in the United States for six months to study American farm techniques first hand.

C. W. C. Van Beekom, who is heading the group, suggested that a tree be planted in the land of tulips commemorating Hoffman's work. Van Beekom suggested the island of Walcheren in the Netherlands as the ideal spot for the tree.

He pointed out that the island was flooded during the war as an anti-Nazi move and is now a "desert." However, he continued, funds are being raised to replant the island.

Hoffman, reaching for a five dollar bill, said he was aware of the program but added, "There is one thing that disturbs me." At this point Van Beekom protested that five dollars was too big a donation, that one dollar would be enough.

"No, I want to give you five dollars," Hoffman insisted. "But that is not what distresses me. What I don't like is that you want to name it the Paul Hoffman memorial tree."

"I'm not dead yet," Hoffman said, adding quietly, "not quite."

Van Beekom promised it would be named simply the Paul Hoffman tree.

• • • •

● TRUMAN TO TAKE LESS—Congressional opinion is that President Truman will get far less than he has asked in the way of national health legislation but that he will sign on the dotted line in the belief that something is better than nothing.

Cool to Tax For Health Program

A good many members of both major political parties object to the payroll tax of the Truman health program. It would bring all Americans under the plan.

Leaders say privately that some compromise measure probably will be sent to the White House. It will put participation on a voluntary rather than a mandatory basis.

Two Hilltop Patrolmen Retire, Recall Most Vivid Experiences

Remember the prison break of 1926, when nine escaped convicts held a gun battle with three motorcycle patrolmen on W. Broad-st?

Newcomers to the Hilltop won't remember that famous break, but Patrolman Charles L. Hulls, 50, 3272 Wicklow-rd, will never forget that day. He recalled this incident as the most exciting experience of his 25 years of police service.

Hulls retirement from the police department, due to physical disability, was announced last week by Safety Director C. C. Coles. The former patrolman plans to leave for Cleveland to enter the medical clinic there.

Another Hilltop patrolman, Robert (Bob) W. Jones, 53, 60 S. Richardson-av, and lifelong friend of Hulls, has also retired from the department due to disability, effective last week.

Jones entered the department on Nov. 16, 1924, two days before Hulls' appointment.

Asked to recount his most exciting experience on the force, Jones protested that there had been too many of them, but he did cite one unusual incident.

"It happened in the East-end, when I was assigned to Cruiser 8. Another patrolman and I caught up with a fast-moving late model LaSalle. We tagged the guy, but didn't learn until three weeks later that he was an African king with 20 million subjects."

Jones figures he's the only cruiserman in the city of Columbus who has tagged a king.

The former city policeman is now associated with the Alexander Rent-A-Car Service.

Two West High Boys Win $400 Dispatch Scholarships

Walter Nickens

Thomas Holcomb

"It pays to be ignorant" is a popular radio expression, but last week two West High boys proved its fallacy.

Thomas Holcomb, 18, of 468 S. Richardson-av, and Walter Nickens, 16, of 227 S. Oakley-av, by sheer effort and a knowledge of the problems each newspaper carrier faces and solves, were selected from among all other graduating senior boys in the city to qualify for the 1949 "Columbus Dispatch Carrier Scholarships."

Each of the boys, who were selected on the basis of scholarship, carrier records, extracurricular activities and personality, will receive a $400 award to be used for college training at the school of their choice. The money may be used during the first year or over the four-year college period.

Interested in Journalism

Tom Holcomb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Holcomb, wants to take journalism at Capital University after graduating from West High in June.

In five years of carrying papers he has saved $1000 in bonds and cash and purchased some of his own clothing, his school lunches and equipment.

An A and B student, he likes English, political science and mechanical drawing and devotes his spare time to his hobby, aviation. He is a member of the Triangle Club, squadron pilot in the Air Scouts and a member of the West High Choir.

"Carrying papers gives you a chance to meet people and learn how to talk to them," says Tom, who has 97 daily and 107 Sunday customers. "The only bad part is getting up at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning."

Hopes To Be Doctor

The occasional subscriber who pleads: "My 'pocketbook's upstairs; come back later" has been the biggest bug bear for Walter Nickens, West High School junior, during his five years' work carrying The Dispatch.

Walter, who carries 107 papers each day and 100 on Sunday, has saved about $200 in addition to buying his clothes and helping his mother and two younger brothers.

His favorite high school subjects—Latin, botany and chemistry—Latin, botany and chemto enter pre-medical school when he finishes at West next year. He is a straight "A" student and ranks among the first in his class.

The son of Mrs. Grace Smith, he is a member of the Boy Scouts, West High Latin Club and the Hi-Y.

Scout Circus Draws Crowd To Coliseum

A total of 398 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and unit leaders participated in the Southwest District Scout Circus at the Fairgrounds Coliseum last Saturday.

A crowd of about 1000 was on hand for the evening show to see their favorite units display the skills they had learned in the Scouting movement.

Visitors at the afternoon exhibits and concessions, although uncounted swelled the total attendance far past the 1000 figure. The Grove City High School Band furnished the music for the evening's performance.

In the competitive events during the evening show, St. Mary Magdalene's Troop 214 carried away two first places, one for fire building and the other in the flap-jack relay. Troop 214 also won third place in the fire building contest, with Troop 86 second and Troop 79 fourth.

Second place in the flap-jack relay went to Troop 79 and third place went to Troop 86.

Troop 86 won the rope relay with Troop 214 taking second place.

In the Cub Scout exhibits, Pack 43 carried off first place with Packs 186 and 214 tied for second and Packs 37 and 86 tied for third.

The circus was the first ever presented on a district rather than a council-wide basis and Scout officials expressed their satisfaction at its complete success.

Midway to Open Monday Night

NIGHT SCENE at a typical Gooding midway. It will be a repeated beginning next Monday night when the Westway Post of the VFW sponsors a six-day stand of the midway at W. Broad-st and Powell-av.

VFW Sponsors 6-Day Stand Of Gooding Show

Sparkling, multi-colored lights and the martial tones of the merry-go-round organ will open the six-day stand of the Gooding Amusement Co. midway at W. Broad-st and Powell-av showgrounds Monday night, May 23, under the sponsorship of the Westway Post of the VFW.

Sending into this area one of its famous ride units, the Gooding Amusement Company is all set to entertain young and old alike with such thrills as the whip, rolloplane, looper and the old standbys, the merry-go-round and the ferris wheel.

The youngsters will have their special corner at the showgrounds in their own kiddieland where they can safely enjoy such miniature rides as the automobile ride, airplane ride and the new buggy ride.

Special kiddie bargain matinee has been announced by the manager of the Gooding Unit on the Saturday of the show, May 28. For only 10 cents children under 12 years of age can ride on all rides to their hearts' content from 1-5 p. m.

Admission to the grounds will be free at all times. A full line of concessions will complete the midway.

Street Repair Program Now Under Way

The city's $2.3 million street program is under way, it was reported by city engineers this week. About $1 million of the total bill will be paid with city money coming either from gas tax revenue or bond issues, according to Paul W. Maetzel. The remainder will be paid by abutting property owners.

Surfacing work is already under way on Sullivant-av, from Hague-av, to the west corporation line. Work for this project was contracted last fall.

According to Maetzel, Moundst, from Wayne-av to Binns-blvd, is slated for repair "around the last of July." Property owners will pay 35 per cent of the total repair bill with the city footing a 65 per cent share. Maetzel revealed that property owners have been protesting the proposed assessments to finance bond issue streets.

Maetzel reports that the city is required by law to pay only 2 per cent of the total cost of repair plus intersections. It is his opinion that the city has been generous in offering to pay 65 per cent.

Improvement plans for Moundst, from Central-av to Whitethorne-av, are now complete. The project was prepared by private engineers hired by City Council.

The Grampians are a short, low Australian mountain range. The loftiest peak is Mount William, 4,500 feet above sea level.

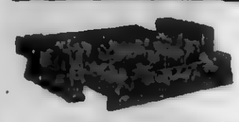
Housecleaning Drive Conducted By 'Volunteers'



The last two weeks in May have been named for a special housecleaning drive for the Volunteers of America according to Lt. Col. Susan Thom, director of the local post.

Needed at this time are clothing and discarded furniture which can be salvaged by the Industrial Department of the Volunteers of America. Numerous calls for furniture from families evicted by fire have depleted the repaired pieces held on hand for such victims, Lt. Col. Thom reports.

"We are still using newspapers and magazines and corrugated paper," the agency head says, "but our greatest need is for clothing and furniture. We are a Red Feather service for salvaging, so no garment or article of furniture is to old for us to fix up."

Trucks will cover all parts of the city during these two weeks in an effort to assist the housewife in her annual housecleaning chores.

CITY DECISION SAVES WESTGATE PARK LAKE

The Westgate Park Lake—Saved From Sudden Death

As a result of the adamant stand taken by the Hilltop Community Council, the Westgate Park lake will not be filled in, the Record learned from a reliable source today.

The means to be used by the city to eliminate the stench and health hazard resulting from pollution of the lake by partially treated sewage were not made clear.

The word that elimination of the lake to accomplish the purpose had been ruled out is definite, however, said the Record's informant, who declined to be quoted.

The original proposal to fill the lake was made by City Service Director Elmer Keller in a letter to City Council. He proposed the elimination of the lake, he said, because of the health hazard presented and because the city's health commissioner, Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe, appeared to be on the verge of ordering the lake filled in for the same reason.

The Hilltop Community Council, in its session last Thursday night, passed a resolution demanding that the city find other means of handling the situation than the lake's elimination. It was the view of the council that the obliteration of the lake would, in large measure, destroy the beauty of the park.

While formal announcement of the reprieve for the lake may not be forthcoming until final decision has been reached on the means for alleviating the sewage situation, it required the city government only a few days to reach the decision to save the lake after the Community Council made its attitude known.

D. T. Mitchell, county sanitary engineer, surveyed the situation last Saturday after Thursday's Record has disclosed the dangerous situation with respect to the sewage in the open ditch which feeds the lake. He was quick to grant that the water was seriously polluted and that the

Cities War Over Land Near Hilltop

Columbus and Grandview are rehearsing their best sales talks in an effort to persuade the residents of the industrial belt directly across the Scioto River from the Hilltop and the West Side to assent to annexation.

Grandview has stolen the first march on Columbus. It already has taken the first legal step toward annexation by vote of its council, in special session, to annex the area. The meeting was called by Mayor J. B. Keitz. The vote in Grandview Council was 6 to 0. The annexation ordinance now goes to the Franklin Township voters affected.

On the other hand, Columbus is reacting strongly, if somewhat belatedly, to the Grandview challenge.

The Columbus Planning Commission will send Charles F. Schwenker as a special representative to the Dublin-av Neighborhood Association in an attempt to persuade the group that joining Columbus would be a better move. Mr. Schwenker will present Columbus' case at 8 p. m. today at the home of Warren C. Ellis, 1059 Dublin-rd.

Ed Tharp, chairman of the Columbus Planning Commission, had this to add:

"It is the entire metropolitan area which must be considered. Those who live outside the city, but who get benefits from it, must realize that they must contribute to Columbus."

Dutch Children Need More Goats' Milk In Diet

A serious shortage of milk for Ritthem children has developed, it was revealed by Mrs. J. G. Bowser, 35 N. Hague-av, chairman of the Hilltop-Ritthem Affiliation Committee. Ritthem children who live for the most part on goats milk are suffering from a deficiency in diet, due to the lack of stables for housing goats.

The number of goats in Holland has steadily dwindled, according to the president of the county organization for Goat Breeding in Zeeland, Mrs. Bowser reported.

An appeal was received by Mrs. Icy Scott, 146 S. Ogden-av, from Zeeland for help in financing a new goat stable in Ritthem. Hilltoppers interested in contributing to this project are asked to contact Mrs. Bowser.

Regularly corresponding with Ritthem families are the following Hilltoppers: Mrs. A. R. Fox, 247 S. Roys-av; Edna Meldrim, 39 N. Powell-av; Annis Turner, 158 S. Central-av; Mrs. Icy Scott, 146 S. Ogden-av; Mrs. Robert Gibbon, 174 S. Powell-av; and Mrs. Bowser.

"Stop My Ad — Plenty of Work!" Says Mrs. Martin

Mrs. Henry Martin, 308 N. Hague-av, ran a small ad in several editions of the Record for family washings to do in her home. She telephoned us last week to say she had all the work she could handle at the present, and to discontinue the ad until she gets "caught up."

Record want ads are constantly proving their "pulling power." Do YOU have a service to offer the folks of this fine community? Just remember, they'd like to know about it. You can tell them very easily—and economically—in a Record want ad. Call RA. 1125 today.

Pick Four Hilltop Youths For Buckeye Boys' State

Four West Side boys, who are tops in citizenship, leadership, character and sportsmanship were chosen last week to represent the Hilltop at the 13th annual Buckeye Boys' State meeting June 18 to 28 at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Chosen for outstanding ability in the field of civics and public speaking, the four 11th grade students, who will take over the reigns of government are Jack Thrush, 815 Harmon-av, Holy Family school; David Cockfield, 489 S. Harris-av, West High school; Newell Yaple, 203 S. Brinker-av, West High school; and Walter Gibson, 178 Souder, West High school.

Sponsored by four local organizations, the committee has complete confidence in its selections. Charman of Boys' State Committee, C. W. (Chet) Wagner said: "We have every reason to believe that these boys will live up to the high standards set by the committee. We are sorry that we could not send all of the Hilltop's outstanding boys."

This year's Boys' State convention marks the 13th year that the American Legion has sponsored this porject. Purpose of the project is to better educate the future leaders in the field of city, state and federal government.

The four Hilltop organizations which sponsored the boys are Camp Chase Post, American Legion, Aguila Aeris No. 229, Fraternal Order of the Eagles, Hilltop Business Association, and Hilltop Kiwanis Club.

Luckless Cowboys Lose City League Lead to Linden

By Dave Miller

West's baseballers hit the offering of Linden McKinley's highly praised righthander, Bob Vannett, all over the lot Tuesday afternoon, but dropped a heartbreaking, 6 to 5 decision to the Panthers on the Linden diamond.

Linden, playing the breaks just right, went into undisputed first place in the City League by virtue of the win. Previous to the tilt, both nines had won seven, and lost only one.

It was a rought and tumble ball game in more ways than one. The play was marred by frequent arguments, brawls, and every kind of an adjective fitting for a champicnship game. Nerves of the ballplayers were tight on every pitch.

The game-breaker came in the Linden seventh when a single, walk and another single filled the sacks. Catcher Bob Parker of the Panthers snapped the tie of 5-all to hand Linden the win, 6-5. However, the final score was in doubt almost at all times with both teams going scoreless in the first, but breaking out in a rash in the second frame. West took the lead with three tallies, but the host nine came back with four to overcome the Cowboys' lead.

West Grabs Lead

Three scoreless innings then followed, with West taking a 5-4 lead with two more tallies in the sixth, but Linden got one in its half of the sixth, and then the clincher in the last.

Phil Young, the workhorse of the West mound crew, pitched the whole game, and allowed only three earned tallies. He walked only two men, struck out four and allowed nine hits, all singles. It was Phil's second loss of the year, both were administered by the same Linden team, which has been the only team to take the measure of the Cowboys twice this year. A loss to Marion Harding in the tournament is the only other setback of the season.

West got to Linden's ace, Bob Vanpett, in the second frame when it collected three tallies, which, it that time, looked like a lot of runs. Dick Kirk led off the inning by being hit by a pitched ball. Then Morris Dobbs, Cowboy sophomore outfielder, caught hold of one of Vannett's pitches, and sent it sailing between Johnny Hayes and Vic Schwab in left-center. He circled the bases for a two-run homer.

Bob Birle then kept up the long ball hitting by drilling a long triple to the left-field corner, and scored a moment later when Jerry Solinger banged a single off Shortstop Danny Dover's glove. Jack Winnestaffer then forced Sclinger at second, and Phil Young popped out to end the frame.

West's three tallies started to look awfully little in the Panthers' second, when they rallied for four tallies to take the lead. Bob Parker and Johnny Hayes both singled, and the former scored when Don Paolini's single to center. Paolini stole second, and Hayes scored when First Baseman Dick Culbertson dropped Jack Winnestaffer's throw to the bag to get Sam Massara. Dick Birkhead then hit to Jack Pickens at short, who threw to Catcher Don Natzger, getting Paolini at the plate. After Vannett had grounded out, Dan Dover hit a long liner to center field, where it looked like Dick Kirk had made the catch. But the umpire ruled that he had trapped

Board to Get Y Campaign Report Today

The Hilltop YMCA board has rescheduled its regular monthly meeting from May 26 to tonight in order that it might be informed of the progress of the organization's membership drive now under way.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p. m. at the Y Building. At that time, the drive chairman, Jerry Spears, Sr., hopes to be able to give the board a complete picture of the campaign to date.

Through the campaign for members, the local YMCA raises funds needed to carry out the annual program of the organization. The Y receives an annual appropriation of $7500 from the Community Chest, but approximately $3000 beyond that amount will be needed to carry out the program outlined for Hilltop youth in 1949-50.

Averille Thorn, secretary of the local Y, again stressed today that additional volunteer workers are needed to carry out the program of contacting every prospective Y member in the Hilltop area.

Both Mr. Spears and Mr. Thorn urged that all workers now active get their reports in as soon as possible so that the Y board may get a clearer idea of the work remaining to be done.

Bridge Victim's Services Held

Patrick Ervin Hand, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Marion Hand, 1046 Cable-av, died Sunday night in an unusual accident.

While watching construction work on the new Sandusky-st bridge project, the 12-year-old boy toppled from steel supports and drowned in the Scioto River. Firemen pulled his body from the river 15 minutes later.

The youth's mother and his aunt, Mrs. Mary Whitmer, 48, 469 S. Wayne-av, were treated for shock.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Wylie S. Shroyer Funeral Home. Services were held Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. in the Shroyer chapel. Burial was in Sunset Cemetery.

Traffic Danger Spot Worries Valleyview

(Hilltop Record Photo)

Mayor Rodgers Takes to the Warpath; Speeders near Hilltop Pool, Beware

Valleyview's Mayor Arch Rodgers, 2678 Valleyview-dr, is worried about the Valleyview-dr traffic situation—but instead of just worrying, he's doing something about it.

The main thing about the traffic situation in Valleyview-dr that is bothering Mayor Rodgers is the way motorists are inclined to make a speedway out of the winding street, full of blind curves though it is. The speed limit between Hague-av and Richardson-av is 25 MPH, but just stand around and watch the passing cars for a while and you'd swear it must be 50.

Now there are just four things wrong with driving 40 or 50 MPH on Valleyview-dr:

1. It's illegal.
2. It's too fast for safety.
3. It throws your car over the double yellow line, which is bad on a blind curve.
4. It forces you to pass cars traveling within the speed limit. That puts you on the wrong side of the double yellow line. When you're running alongside another car on a blind curve and if another car looms up in front of you, you are in a fix.

You might get killed. Worse still, the other fellow who's obeying the law might be killed.

The mayor feels that the already serious situation will worsen when the Hilltop Swimming Pool opens soon. The pool is located on one of the blindest curves of Valleyview-dr. An auto to crash in front of the pool layout, Mayor Rodgers fears, could result in death or injury to pedestrians as well as motorists.

The county, in cooperation with the village of Valleyview, has erected several signs between Hague and Richardson-avs informing motorists that the speed limit is 25MPH. Additionally, center stripes, liberally sprinkled with yellow, have been placed down the center of the street.

And make no mistake about it. Mayor Rodgers is in earnest. He promises enforcement of the traffic regulations to the hilt. He's not fooling.

Mr. Gochenour was employed by Armour & Co. before he entered the service in World War II. He, with Boetcher, founded the market after he returned to his home after three years' service. He lives at 1578 S. High-st, is married and the father of a daughter, Ann Louise, 6.

Eitle Breaks 440-Yd. Dash Track Record

Don Eitle, West's brilliant track star, overshadowed his team's score yesterday at the City High League track meet at Ohio Stadium, by breaking one record, tieing another, and placing second in the 200-yard dash.

West's thinclads placed fifth in the meet with 26 points, while Central High's fleet-footed Pirates captured their third consecutive City High League track championship.

The Cowboy flash, Don Eitle, running his first competitive 440-yard dash was clocked in the amazing time of 49.9 seconds as he shattered the 50.4 second record of Central High's Moxley, set in 1927.

Eitle also edged out Bill Smith, of Central, by winning the 100-yard dash and equalling the record of 9.9 seconds set by Grimm, of South, in 1925.

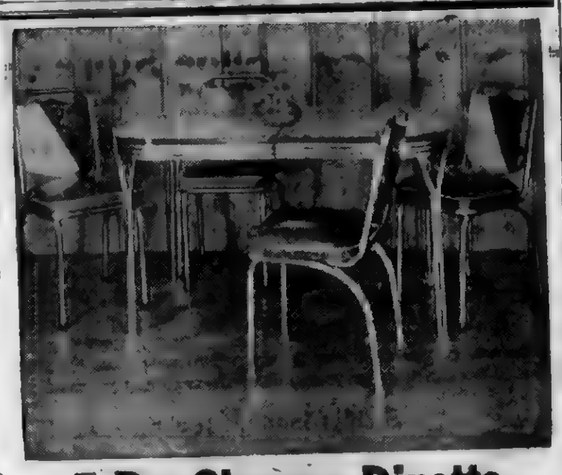
ADDING COAL TO RED FIRE



WITH RUSSIA reportedly using lack of coal in Berlin as propaganda against western occupation powers, itinerant coal merchants operate in the Red zone near the boundary line, selling coal to western Berliners at prices some 200 per cent above normal. The fuel is given to Russia by Germany as reparations. Up to now the Berlin air lift has been able to give Berlin householders in the western zone the fuel they need despite Soviet blockade. (International)

It's Time We Learn Value Of World's Spiritual Side

(Last of a series)
By O. H. Craft

It is time we should get a few things straight. We live in a world consisting of four kingdoms, i. e. animal, mineral, vegetable and spiritual. All that we can hope to get from the first three comes from and through the last. It is the spirit of mankind that counts, not specifically in a religious sense, for we certainly have our troublesome angles in that field also.

Mankind is both human and divine and to teach that young babies are born in sin is pure nonsense. The trouble is that we let the divine spark burn low, so low it is barely discernible. Our better natures and our baser natures are in constant struggle for supremacy, until one or the other is the ruler.

All my life I have heard people talking about going to heaven on flowery beds of ease, or occupying mansions in the skies. If in the hereafter some of us have to live in mansions that can be built out of the materials that we accumulate in life for that purpose, I am afraid they won't be weather proof.

We are not morally and spiritually bankrupt by any means. There are a great many well-balanced people in the world. They are considerate, they are tolerant, they are industrious and courageous. They can be trusted. They have faith, and they are building that side of their lives, in good conscience, and happiness in a job well done. These are the hope of the world.

Some Refuse to Grow

On the other hand we cannot laugh off the large number of people in the world, who through ignorance or cussedness refuse to grow up, who refuse to cultivate the better side of their natures, who believe that might makes right, or that the end justifies the means. They trust nobody and don't believe in anything.

Then there is that very large group that is constantly shifting. A little on the ragged edge today, and holding fast to that which is good tomorrow—we often find the great humanitarians in this group—as a rule they are not narrow, and have had the opportunity to look at both sides. They definitely lean heavily in the long pull to the better sides of life, but make some terribly costly mistakes.

Economically we may be skating on thinner ice than we suspect. True, great potentials are being handled about, but potentials sometimes have a habit of becoming residents of the realm of theory. Everybody talks about prices being too high, but it's always the other fellow's prices. The only redeeming feature in the price situation is that labor and commodities are not too much out of line, and if anything labor has the better of it.

Production Seen Key

We must repeat and keep repeating that there is only one thing that will bring prices down, and that is to produce more than people are willing to buy at prices asked. Whenever a surplus exists, prices will drop and not before. When labor is not efficient and does not produce, it is only kidding itself.

We will take for example just one item, automobile tires. Just a couple of years ago you could hardly buy one; now you can get all you want and at prices below pre-war in some cases. Many items that are in the short column could switch to the surplus over night so to speak. And another thing that could happen is that when the greedy have been satisfied, the needy may not be able to buy, in sufficient volume.

We must reckon, too, with the time when employment may not be maintained at its present level. Three or four million potential job holders are being kept out of the labor market with artificial support. And when some items are produced to reach a saturation point, layoffs occur. However, we do not know how much we are going to keep pouring into Europe and Asia, but that too will reach an end some time.

Can Absorb Shock

Our unemployment insurance funds are large the country over and are capable of absorbing some shock, and it will not be like we have previously experienced. But there is the large public debt that takes $5 or $6 billion to pay the interest alone, and in some degree we must maintain cheap dollars and high taxes if we ever write it off. But taxes can and already have reached the place where the law of diminishing returns sets in. They have a deadening effect upon the initiative, and are a talent destroyer.

We should aim to find a more secure and satisfying place in our economy. If dollars get too cheap and prices of commodities get too high, we are in danger of going like Germany did a few years ago, and like China is going today. It is bad to go to the other extreme where dollars are so dear and prices so cheap. We should aim to apply the brakes now, softly enough to give warning without shock. We may be able to settle back just far enough to be safe, be happy and prosperous. We should not buy more things we don't need, or more of things than we need. We should save something, if at all possible. Read a lot and analyse what we read. Learn to think for ourselves. Eat, sleep, play and work in good proportion. Relax and watch the world improve.

Lake To Be Spared In Westgate Park

pollution originated principally in the Josephine-av section, just west of the Columbus city limits, where partially treated overflow from septic tanks empties into storm sewers serving the area. The storm sewers, Mr. Mitchell said, empty directly into the ditch which feeds the park lake.

Mr. Mitchell said he believed the sewage problem will be eliminated to a large degree as more and more residents of Josephine-av tap into the sanitary sewer which was installed along Josephine-av last fall. To date, he estimated, about half the residents of the area have tapped into the sewer for sewage disposal.

His attitude toward storm drain feeding the ditch inside the Columbus city limits is that the city should install a tile connecting with the catch basin at the east end of the park lake, bypassing the lake entirely. As he puts it:

"The filling of the lake is not necessary since, if the lake were filled, the city would be forced to build the sewer line to the catch basin anyway. The city might as well build the line to skirt the lake — and save the lake."

Mr. Mitchell's proposed solution may or may not be the one finally decided upon by the city, but in any event, the obliteration of the lake no longer is among the alternatives being considered.

Cowboys Lose City League Lead to Linden Panthers

the ball. Massara and Birkhead scored on the play to put Linden out in front, 4-3.

The game remained that way for three innings with both nines able to get only one hit each in the series of scoreless frames. West's was by Dobbs, his second, and Linden's was by Paolini, also his second. Both were singles.

West then got to Vannett in the top of the sixth, and took the lead of 5-4 with two tallies. Kirk led off with a deep smash to left field, which went over Left Fielder Schwab's head and rolled against the fence, and Kirk circled the bases. Hayes was charged with an error on the play, so Kirk was credited with the Cowboys' second triple of the day.

This tied the score, and the Cowboys were determined to get a lead, which they got a few minutes later. Morris Dobbs hit one which either the second or first baseman could have gotten, but Dobbs beat First-baseman Paolini to the sack, and the winning run was on! Bob Birle attempted a sacrifice, but he hit back at the pitcher, who threw to second in time to get Dobbs. Jerry Solinger then was hit by a pitched ball, and both the runners moved up a base on Vannett's balk.

Jack Winnestaffer then hit a long fly to center field, where Hayes made a nice catch, and Birle tagged up and scored the run that put the locals ahead by 5-4.

Linden came back to knot it up in their half of the sixth when, with one down, Paolini and Pinchhitter Joe Cimenello both singled, with the latter being forced at second, Birle to Pickens. The tying run came home on Pinchhitter Jim Hutchinson's topped-ball past the pitcher's mound, a very lucky hit.

The Cowboys got the bases loaded in the seventh, but nothing resulted. Pickens led off with a single, and advanced to second on Schwab's error. Culbertson then hit to Thirdbaseman Dover, who got Pickens coming into the bag for the second out. Kirk was hit for the second time in the game, and Dobbs strolled to load the bases, but Bob Birle made an out to end the frame.

Linden's winning run came home in the seventh with none out. Don Wickiser singled, advanced on a walk to Schwab, and scored the clincher on Parker's single to right-center. Center-Fielder Dick Kirk's perfect peg to the plate was just a second too late, and it was all over.

After the game, in the locker rooms, Coach George Williams of the Cowboy baseballers reminded them that they were still very much in the race.

The Cowboys, though disheartened, took the setback in good fashion, as well as can be expected in a title-bearing game. They smashed out two homers, a triple and four singles, and made only two errors. They were playing the same brand of ball they did in beating any of the other teams, but ALL the breaks seemed to sway toward Linden.

The local baseballers were idle Wednesday, but play host to Chillicothe here Thursday afternoon and visit North on Friday. Paul Ellingsworth, portside hurler for the Cowboys, will be lost to the team for a while due to illness.

The Linden-West line score:

	R.	H.	E.
West	030 002 0	5	7	2
Linden	040 001 1	6	10	4

Young and Nafzger; Vannett, Troutman (7), Hayes (7) and Parker.

Elect New Student Council Officers

The new officers will take up their duties in council next year.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

All right, here is something for your community paper, the community council, the Kiwanis Club, the churches, the Veterans organizations, etc., to get busy on right now, before someone of our Hilltop citizens gets killed. (Note: One of our Hilltop physicians has already received a broken back at this corner.)

The corner of Wicklow-rd and S. Harris-av has now become the number one traffic danger point on the Hilltop, due to the following conditions that should no longer be tolerated by the citizens of the Hilltop.

Due to the fact that feeder lines are being used to feed the regular Sullivant-av and W. Broad-st buses and also due to the repaving of Sullivant-av, from S. Hague on west, two buses now use Wicklow-rd, from Hague-av to Harris-av. One turns south on Harris, the other crosses it and turns south on Warren-av. When we had just one bus using Wicklow and turning south on Harris, stop signs were placed on Wicklow-rd making Harris a through street at that point, but now that one bus crosses Harris, these stop signs have been moved to the Harris-av corners; results of this move have been a broken back, numerous near crashes and if no correction is made, someone will die at this corner before the month is out, for the stop signs are hidden by trees and many persons never see them; having been used to seeing them on the Wicklow corner, they never expected to see them changed overnight to the Harris-av corners.

What can be done? Simple; do as they do in St. Paul and many other cities: "Wherever" bus lines cross and no traffic light is used (ALL FOUR CORNERS) HAVE STOP SIGNS ON THEM) the same applies to heavy traffic streets, wherever they cross.

Next, the vast majority of all people killed in our Columbus traffic are pedestrians and most of them were "JAY WALKING". We pinch the same fellow when he breaks a traffic law, when he is in his car, but this same fellow is permitted to take his life in his hands, the minute he leaves his car and becomes a pedestrian. WHY?

Yes, its time for a jaywalking law with teeth in it, with orders to the police to enforce it just as we do all other traffic laws.

Publicity Chairman,

BRAND NAMES..

Your compass to shopping satisfaction

When you go our shopping, or when making up your mind to buy certain products, there is one dependable guide that assures a satisfactory purchase.

Always buy goods identified by an established name.

Goods that bear the names of well known manufacturers and have attracted large and loyal markets have met the test of public usage and proved their quality, reliability and value.

The mere fact that these goods have survived in the intense competition of the American market place is undeniable evidence of their merit, and suitability for the purpose for which they were created.

Buying by brand names that enjoy public prestige not only protects you from mistakes in truly appraising the quality and value of products, but also results in a number of other advantages to you individually, and to the nation as a whole. For example:

1. The maker's signature is a pledge of responsibility.
2. Your daily selection keeps industry on its toes.
3. Good values are made possible through large production.
4. Ready identification assures quick service.
5. Wide variety to suit your personal tastes.
6. Steady patronage helps assure steady jobs.

Silk dress with jersey jacket.

By VERA WINSTON

MANY ARE THE frocks always seen today in the company of their own jacket, bolero, cape or coat. Here is a little jacket of black worsted jersey. It makes an attractive duet with a dress of pink and black polka dot silk. The dress has a snug bodice draped taut to the center seam. The skirt is gathered in front, and gored in the back.

GOP Leaders Urging Dewey To Seek a Place in Senate | Could Counterbalance Loss Of Baldwin's Vacated Seat

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Republican leaders in New York and elsewhere in the east again are urging Gov Thomas E. Dewey to run for the Senate in 1950. Their latest request of Dewey is on a "do-your-duty-to-the-party" basis.

The GOP is frankly alarmed at the impending retirement of Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R), Connecticut, who will quit his Senate seat to accept a Connecticut judgeship given him by Democratic Governor Chester Bowles.

Republicans are leery at Baldwin and consider that he gave Bowles an opportunity to name a Democrat to the Senate, thus whittling down GOP strength at a critical time.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey

They further fear that in 1950 Connecticut may elect a second Democratic senator to sit in the Senate chamber with Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Atomic Energy committee. Thus, Republicans would like to balance Baldwin's loss with Dewey

They feel that Dewey could defeat any Democratic candidate but the ailing Senator Robert Wagner (D), who is unable to be active because of illness and advancing years. Actually, the GOP doubts that Wagner will seek re-election.

Should Wagner retire before next year's election, Dewey could appoint himself to the Senate and then coast in for a full term in the elections.

The GOP figures that Dewey's immense popularity in New York, which he carried in the 1948 presidential election, would make it virtually certain he would win the Senate seat.

● ACHESON AND NEWSMEN—Since Dean Acheson became Secretary of State, new controls have been imposed on newsmen covering the State department.

Previously, reporters had been given a free hand in questioning foreign dignitaries after they had called upon the secretary for talks on world affairs. Now Acheson appears to have broken down this long-standing practice.

When Irish Foreign Minister MacBride called on him recently, Acheson followed him into the reception room where reporters were ready to ask questions. After the newsmen had asked MacBride one question, Acheson refused to permit MacBride to reply further Later, Acheson repeated the performance with Turkish Foreign Minister Necmeddin Sadak.

In both cases, the secretary insisted upon answering the questions himself rather than have the visiting dignitaries be questioned.

● NEW WEAPONS GALORE—The United States has shifted into high gear in its research drive to lead the world in the weapons race to maintain peace. Some of the developments are.

New and more deadly gases are under test by the Chemical Corps of the Army. One of these is lethal if only a small quantity is inhaled or gotten on the skin.

A 24-inch gun has been placed in testing operation by the Navy The massive rifle will shoot bombs and warheads against armor plate to permit evaluation of the effect of impact on the missiles and their components.

A new motor fuel made of air and water is under development by the Navy It is called hydrozine and is a step toward independence from carbon compounds, such as gas and oil.

New Cruiser Powerful And Fast

The cruiser Des Moines, most powerful in the world, has joined the fleet. It is the first to have a completely automatic rapid-fire battery of nine 8-inch guns. It will exceed 30 knots speed.

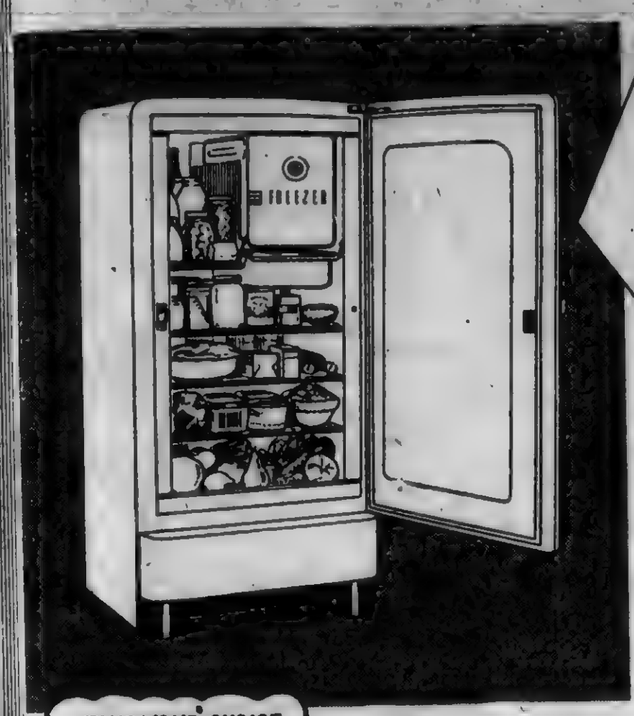
United Aircraft has developed an engine which delivers more than 4,000 horsepower to an airplane propeller, as well as several hundred pounds of jet thrust.

The new piston-jet combination comprises a 28-cylinder conventional power plant and a 2-stage, variable discharge turbo-supercharger It will enable heavy bombers to fly farther, faster and higher, and to take off with heavier loads.

PORTENT

A blue-tongued flame, followed by thunder crack,
Streaks through the sky in jagged, silver light.
Curved sharp above the water's deeper black
It shocks the reverent silence of the night.

As vivid as the violence of this arc
Which dramatized the quiet summer air,
Your presence flashed across untroubled dark
Taking the heart's complacence unaware.



That riven tree will surely testify
To all the swift and devastating power
Contained within the lightning, just as I
Must bear the sudden impact of this hour.

Cleaning House? Rout Rats At Same Time, Is Advice

Home-owners and businessmen were warned today to combine spring clean-up and rat control if the nation's heavy rat damage cost is to be reduced. The warning came from Dr. Joseph Drayer, chief of the Division of Environmental Sanitation of the Department of Health.

Pointing out that rat control is a neighborhood concern and depends on neighborhood cooperation, Dr. Drayer said rats cost the nation 200 million bushels of grain in one year, enough grain to make 315 loaves of bread for every household in the nation.

"Besides their capacity to destroy, rats are a threat to every child in the neighborhood," Dr. Drayer said. "At least six serious diseases that can be communicated to humans have been discovered to be carried by rats."

Dr. Drayer said each household should carry out rat control at the same time that spring housecleaning is done. Rats depend upon food and hiding places when they stay in a neighborhood. A co-operative effort to destroy those sources will drive rats away.

Businessmen should make certain that rats are not around the premises to destroy or spoil stock. Restaurants are being checked by the Board of Health to make sure that all foods and wastes are kept out of reach of rats.

Dr. Drayer listed these easy and quick ways to rid your home or business of rats:

1. Rats enter buildings through any opening over half-inch in diameter. Rat-proof your home or store by closing holes around pipes or wires with cement or metal. Fasten screens over ground-level vents or windows. Cover floor drains tightly.

2. Rats live in dark enclosed spots such as double walls, wooden floors in basements, staircases, boxed-in plumbing or wooden platforms. Seal such spots or rip them out.

3. Rat nests will be found in trash piles. Clean out your basement, yard or alley. Stack lumber, cans or boxes on racks at least 18 inches off the ground.

4. Uncovered food and garbage invite rats. Keep garbage in tightly covered cans. Be sure the lid is kept on. Store food where rats can't reach it.

5. Set traps along runways. Or use a safe poison to kill them. Be careful that poisons used will not harm children or pets.

on

Christian Science

Entitled

Christian Science: The Light on Our Path

by

Cecil F. Denton, C. S. of New York City

Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

Given

May 16th
8:15 p. m.

of

First Church of Christ, Scientist
Columbus, Ohio

The lecturer spoke substantially as follows:

It is now generally known that Christian Scientists love and study the Bible. It is also well known that the Bible, together with the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is the sole source of the weekly Lesson-Sermon studied by students of Christian Science and read from the desk on Sunday in Christian Science churches throughout the world. The very first tenet of our church, as founded by Mrs. Eddy, reads, "As adherents of Truth, we take the inspired Word of the Bible as our sufficient guide to eternal Life" (Science and Health, p. 497). Did not the Psalmist declare, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path?" (Ps. 119:105.)

What is this light that shines in the darkness of material belief? Is it not the spiritual idea of God, the ever-present Christ, guiding mankind into the realization of joy and health, of peace and security?

The Light of the World

The Gospel according to St. John quotes Jesus as saying to the Pharisees, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:12). Would you not think those listeners would welcome such an assurance of true guidance to man, the assurance that there always would be a lamp unto their feet and a light unto their path? But these Pharisees were so blinded by their own dogmatic debating that they could not discern the Christ which Jesus manifested.

When Jesus said, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (Matt. 28:20), he was referring to the "divine idea of God," or Christ, which is the Saviour to mankind, not just in his age but throughout all time. The man Jesus was born of the Virgin Mary; "the Christ," our textbook tells us (p. 333), "is without beginning of years or end of days." It was the mission of the Master to demonstrate this saving Christ, and because he so did, he proved himself the Messiah.

Christ Jesus Our Example

Christ Jesus was truly "the light of the world," because through his personal ministry he demonstrated the omnipotence of God and the impotence of evil; he vanquished all limitations of time and space; he healed the sick, redeemed the sinner, and raised the dead; he proved that hate and fear are powerless before divine Love. And he assured us that his followers should do the works that he did and even greater works. He could say this, and did say it, because he knew that all the darkness of error is simply the suppositious absence of Truth, which flees before the light of the Christ—the consciousness of Truth. This divine influence, this ever-present Christ, is indeed "the light," as John says, that "shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not" (John 1:5).

The Way of Salvation

What greater salvation for mankind could there be—yes, what greater salvation is there for mankind—than walking triumphantly in the enlightened way of the Master? My friend, does the path for you seem dark? Has joy fled? Are you smarting from the wounds received in "the house of [thy] friends"? (Zech. 13:6.) Does some trait of disposition seem ineradicable in its tenacity? Then be of good cheer, for the assurance which Christian Science brings of complete salvation here and now will be a lamp unto your feet and a light unto your path. You will see that regardless of the circumstances which to your suffering sense presents a problem, your peace, your health, and your security are already established in the spiritual reality of true being. When you repent, that is, when you change your thought from a material and negative basis to the radiant realization of man's dominion as exemplified by Christ Jesus, you find that whatsoever had hitherto limited and enslaved you has vanished for lack of witness.

Ezekiel points the way of salvation when he writes, "For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye" (Ezek. 18:32). Does not this passage find a corollary in Mrs. Eddy's statement from Science and Health (p. 210), "The real man being linked by Science to his Maker, mortals need only turn from sin and lose sight of mortal selfhood to find Christ, the real man and his relation to God, and to recognise the divine sonship"?

In recognizing the divine sonship, in this turning from a material to a spiritual sense of existence, we disavow all that claims to harass the human experience. To all forms of error we say, and mean it, as did Christ Jesus, "Get thee behind me, Satan" (Matt. 16:23). In following in the footsteps of the Master, we find that salvation is not delayed until some future time, but becomes a present reality, even as the Glossary of Science and Health declares when it defines salvation as "Life, Truth, and Love understood and demonstrated as supreme over all; sin, sickness, and death destroyed" (p. 593).

"A Lady with a Lamp"

It may be rightly said that no one since the advent of Christ Jesus has labored so patiently and so persistently to make available to mankind a working knowledge of God and His Christ as did the divinely inspired Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. From early childhood Mary Baker Eddy had known both dark and bright hours. And as the years advanced, those dark hours were marked by sickness and poverty, by pain and persecution. But through all these vicissitudes, Mrs. Eddy never lost her faith in God, never lost her acceptance of the Psalmist's assurance that the Word of God would be a lamp unto her feet and a light unto her path. She knew, however, that faith alone would never solve her problems. So through wide and varied experience and unremitting searching of the Scriptures, Mrs. Eddy sought an understanding of God's Word.

Mrs. Eddy Shared Her Discovery

And so that your heart and mine also might know their Redeemer, Mrs. Eddy labored to give her discovery of the Christly scientific way of release from bondage to material limitations to the whole world. She first put into practice this revelation of Truth by healing the sick and redeeming the sinner in the same way that Jesus and his disciples had brought salvation to mankind. Mrs. Eddy then wrote "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the Christian Science textbook, which is just that—a textbook wherein and whereby we find her discovery reduced to a system so exact in its Science and so simple in its presentation that even children can grasp the statements of Truth therein and make them practicable in their daily activities.

To illumine the path of life more glowingly, Mrs. Eddy established The Mother Church with its world-wide branches and activities. Mrs. Eddy established The Christian Science Publishing Society; The Christian Science Monitor, which is truly an international daily newspaper; weekly and monthly periodicals; and the quarterly periodical containing the Bible Lesson-Sermons. These Lesson-Sermons Christian Scientists study gratefully, for in this study they gain new light on the Scriptures and fresh inspiration to solve the problems encountered in daily living. The scope of Mrs. Eddy's work unquestionably entitles her to the appellations Discoverer, Founder, and Leader. Those for whom Christian Science has erased the darkness of material beliefs know how truly the words of her great contemporary, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, apply to the Discoverer of Christian Science:

"A Lady with a Lamp shall stand
In the great history of the land,
A noble type of good,
Heroic womanhood."

The Search for God

Throughout all time mankind has longed for the peace and security which an understanding of God alone can bring; but they have not always known just how or where this realization might come. In his search for God, Job cried out, "Oh that I knew where I might find him" (Job 23:3). He, too, was looking for a lamp unto his feet and a light unto his path, and he found these in a life so freed of selfishness, fear, and self-pity that in place of the darkness of human suffering he found the radiant realization of God's ever-presence and infinite goodness. Therefore he could declare, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee" (Job 42:5); that is, now mine eye seeth the tangible evidence of God's goodness and power.

In referring to this statement, Mrs. Eddy has declared: "Mortals will echo Job's thought, when the supposed pain and pleasure of matter cease to predominate. They will then drop the false estimate of life and happiness, of joy and sorrow, and attain the bliss of loving unselfishly, working patiently, and conquering all that is unlike God" (Science and Health, p. 262). Then she adds significantly, "Starting from a higher standpoint, one rises spontaneously, even as light emits light without effort; for 'where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.'"

Starting from a Higher Standpoint

What is it to start from "a higher standpoint"? Is it not to base one's thinking and acting on the premise that God, good, alone is power? Is it not to recognize the falsity of evil's boast to be and to act? Is it not to acknowledge that the man of God's creating is "unfallen, upright, pure, and free," as Science and Health declares him to be (p. 171)? There is no limitation of time or space in this "starting from a higher standpoint," and it has nothing to do with the human beliefs of material origin, temperament, or heredity; but it has everything to do with a correct concept of man.

It was Alexander Pope who said that "the proper study of mankind is man." And Charles Lamb rendered a variation, "The proper study of man is himself." In a metaphysical sense, Mr. Lamb is right. Christian Science, however, declares further that the proper study of man is God, his creator. In fact, it must be admitted that all the ills of the world—social, economic, and political, as well as one's own discords and disappointments—stem from ignorance of God and man, His image and likeness. To know God, therefore, is to know man, and we know both through the revelation of Christian Science.

"Truth's prism and praise"

Science and Health declares (p. 558): "To mortal sense Science seems at first obscure, abstract, and dark; but a bright promise crowns its brow. When understood, it is Truth's prism and praise. When you look it fairly in the face, you can heal by its means, and it has for you a light above the sun, for God is the light thereof."

In the laboratory of physical science the prism used in studies of light reveals the narrow beam of white light to be composed of seven primary colors. In the study of Deity, Christian Science — "Truth's prism and praise"—reveals the completeness of God through a number of primary synonyms which Mrs. Eddy tells us are "intended to express the nature, essence, and wholeness of Deity" (Science and Health, p. 465). Four of these synonyms—namely, Spirit, Life, Truth, and Love—Mrs. Eddy discovered in the Bible as names for God. The other three—Principle, Soul, and Mind—she found implied in the Scriptures, and these conform to both reason and revelation.

The Light of Spirit

The light of infinite Spirit reveals man's life controlled by divine law and not by matter. All that claims to govern man, whether it is a belief in fortune, good or bad, or a nervous system, good or bad, or hereditary characteristics, good or bad, is seen in the light of Christian Science to be a misconception of true being in which matter enters not at all.

The word of Spirit is indeed a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path, for through spiritual-mindedness we walk untrammeled through every circumstance which confronts us. We know the right thing to do at the right time. Paul said, "To be spiritually minded is life and peace" (Rom. 8:6), and so it is, for the man to whom the ideas of Spirit are real and enduring is unmoved by the friction and frustration of material seeking and planning. To him intuition, therefore, is not something reserved for the chosen few, but is unerring response to spiritual guidance.

When Jesus told the woman at the well at Sychar (John 4:24, Revised Version) that God is Spirit, he was defining not only the incorporeal nature of God, but he was also establishing the fact that man is governed by spiritual law. Jesus' own life and deeds testified to the fact that because man is the image and likeness of God, he is the image and likeness of Spirit. Therefore, all the inspiration and divine energy which characterize infinite Spirit are also true of man as His image and likeness. Energy is not in matter: it emanates from Spirit and animates man without depletion or exhaustion.

When Jesus reminded his disciples that they were the light of the world (Matt. 5:14), he surely must have intended to convey that so long as they expressed the Christ, Truth, which they had learned under his patient teaching, so long as they retained the spiritual-mindedness of Christ Jesus, would their influence for good be irresistibly felt among men. But, oh, the tragedy of those who once having walked in the light have allowed their zeal to become dimmed through apathy or compromise with matter. Hence the significance of Paul's earnest admonition to the Romans to "maintain the spiritual glow" (Rom. 12:11, Moffatt's translation).

The Light of Life

We sometimes speak of life in terms of the material sense of the here or hereafter. This concept is simply in terms of material evaluations of what we see about us or of what we ourselves experience. Thus life may suggest only frustration or monotony, as a contemporary poet has expressed it in the lines,

"And tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow
There's this little street and this little house."

(Edna St. Vincent Millay.)

In the face of disappointment and defeat, one has been heard to say, "Well, that's life." But it is not life, my friends, unless it is good; it is not life unless it is stable; it is not life unless it is harmonious; it is not life unless it is radiant with joy.

What is it, then, you ask, if it is not life? It is ignorance of real Life, of Life divine. It is ignorance of God and His Christ, whom to know aright is life eternal. A Christianly scientific understanding of true Life releases us from the restrictions of material living and replaces disease with harmony, poverty with needful supply, monotony with spontaneity and inspiration, and failure with accomplishment.

Divine Life understood, therefore, replaces a false sense of life with its limited concepts. Life understood establishes the conviction of the eternal goodness of being, into which no separation, no grief, no misunderstanding can possibly enter. True consciousness holds no dread of the future but rejoices in ever-present good. One therefore can go forth each day in the happy realization that each hour is under God's control and is filled with His love. In the Glossary of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy gives the spiritual definition of "day" in part as "the irradiance of Life" and says further: "The objects of time and sense disappear in the illumination of spiritual understanding, and Mind measures time according to the good that is unfolded. This unfolding is God's day, and 'there shall be no night there'" (p. 584).

The Light of Truth

It is the light of Truth which reveals to human consciousness man's innate integrity, his completeness, his wholeness, his individuality. And the understanding enables the individual to maintain both his moral and physical wholeness. Mortal mind's attack upon one's character or health is rendered impotent by the understanding that divine Truth alone governs and controls man and gives him enduring identity. This understanding is the forever coming of Christ—yes, it is the never leaving of Christ in human consciousness. Said the Psalmist, "As for me, I will walk in mine integrity" (Ps. 26:11).

The Light of Truth Brings Healing

Obviously that which is true is also that which is logical. And that which is true appeals to reason, eliminating misconceptions and making way for healing. The truth of this statement was made clear to a young mother who had known literally nothing of the teachings of Christian Science. Her little daughter had been ill with what the doctors had diagnosed as pernicious anemia. Finally, when it was said that nothing further medically could be done for the child, Christian Science was brought to the mother's attention. She listened patiently to a practitioner's explanation of the goodness of God and the power of His Christ. Finally he recounted to the mother the incident in which Christ Jesus at the marriage in Cana turned the water into wine (John 2:1-11). The practitioner then asked her if she did not see that the same Christ-power which performed what has been designated as Jesus' first miracle could replace the abnormal condition in her child's body with a normal one. The mother saw the correctness of the reasoning and gladly consented to the child's having Christian Science treatment. The word of Truth became to that mother a lamp unto her feet and a light unto her path, souling her fear and grief, and her newly found faith saw fulfillment in the child's complete recovery. Indeed, she learned the actuality of the Psalmist's statement, "Mercy and truth are met together" (Ps. 85:10).

The Light of Love

The Apostle Paul knew through experience how the light of Truth penetrates the darkness of mortal resistance and reveals the great heart of divine Love. He who wrote to the Corinthians (II Cor. 13:8), "We can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth," also declared, "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. 8:38, 39).

How unforgettably Paul learned that the tender and compassionate love which characterized Jesus' ministry was the consistent expression of divine Love. In referring to this statement of the apostle's, Mrs. Eddy has said: "This is the doctrine of Christian Science: that divine Love cannot be deprived of its manifestation, or object; that joy cannot be turned into sorrow, for sorrow is not the master of joy; that good can never produce evil; that matter can never produce mind nor life result in death. The perfect man—governed by God, his perfect Principle — is sinless and eternal" (Science and Health, p. 304).

Love Not an Abstraction

In the light of Christian Science, Love is not an abstraction. Christian Science reveals God as both Father and Mother, self-contained and self-complete creator, who brings forth man and who holds man forever in completeness and in the activity of selfless service. Since divine Love is another name for creator, all men must be brethren. Have we not all one Father-Mother God?

Sometimes we hear it said, "I wish I were more loving." If it is true that the wish is father to the deed, then the answer to that desire is simply to be more loving. We may not always see the opportunity to express our love in specific deeds, but we can always think of others in terms of spiritual perfection and love. True love just loves, seeking no human approval, asking nothing in return. Love sends forth no unkind criticism and barbs none. Because love is truly humble, it is moved by neither the world's flattery nor its censure. Love is unmoved in the face of adversity or opposition or hatred; therefore love is always the victor and never the vanquished. Indeed, as our hymn says, "Love is the royal way" (Christian Science Hymnal, No. 179).

A Place of Calm

Physicists tell us that in cyclones, no matter how tempestuous they may be, there is always one spot which is so calm that a feather can be sustained there in perfect poise. My friends, let love be your place of calm, and then regardless of the irritations or pressure of the world, you will find your poise and your joy in loving.

"Then, brother man, fold to thy heart thy brother,
For where love dwells, the peace of God is there!
To worship rightly is to love each other;
Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer."

(Christian Science Hymnal, No. 217.)

The Light of Divine Principle

The more closely we adhere to the realization of the true man's oneness with God, the more consistently we demonstrate the guidance of divine Principle in our lives. For example, the businessman, whether he be among those "that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters" (Ps. 107:23), or whether he be an executive, a salesman, or a merchant—regardless of his pursuit, so long as he adheres to what he knows is honest, to what is just, to what is serviceable, and to what is good, he is expressing divine Principle, and he will therefore bring out in his experience the fruitage of such adherence in terms of usefulness and success. The light of divine Principle reveals the fact that all God's ideas dwell together to bless each other, and all are mutually co-operative. Therefore supply does meet demand, unfair competition becomes obsolete, and all are blessed.

Principle Guides Men and Nations

"God is the lawmaker," declares Science and Health, "but He is not the author of barbarous codes" (p. 331). God's law, or the law of divine Principle, is a loving law; it governs men and nations in equity. When adhered to, it settles all disputes on the basis of the Golden Rule. Principle reveals the universality and omniaction of divine justice and replaces avarice with contentment, revenge with love, and disunity with unity. In prophesying the union of Israel and Judah, Ezekiel records God as saying, "And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all: . . . so shall they be my people, and I will be their God" (Ezek. 37:22, 23).

Principle and Ethics

What we term ethics and conscience, whether in the affairs of nations, in business, in church activities, or in our individual lives, are simply our subscription to the operation of divine Principle in our conscious experience. Hence the Christian Science practitioner is scrupulous in his keeping in sacred confidence all that is divulged to him in the relationship of practitioner and patient. And all those who have named the name of Christ are grateful for increasing light upon how to choose between right and wrong; in short, how to discern that which is consistent with divine Principle and practice. As Paul says of this influence for good, "God, who is rich in mercy, . . . hath quickened us together with Christ" (Eph. 2:4, 5).

The Light of Soul

Our textbook declares (p. 347), "Immortality, exempt from age or decay, has a glory of its own,—the radiance of Soul." Soul or God, therefore, radiates the beauty of holiness, the joy and bliss of Spirit, the omniaction of Life and its own color and harmony. Surely one cannot see a magnificent sunset or hear a moving symphony without being conscious of "the radiance of Soul."

Science and Health tells us that "God is the Life, or intelligence, which forms and preserves the individuality and identity of animals as well as of men" (p. 550). It is the function of God or Soul to preserve life. Your true individuality and identity are expressions of Soul and are therefore immortal. One's individuality is always poised in Soul and is therefore distinct and distinctive as spiritual entity. My friend, honor your true individuality. We should never try to be like somebody else, but rather we need only to bring out our own individual expression of Soul. Thus we eliminate envy or jealousy of another's attainments or talents, for the light of Soul reveals to each one his peculiar abilities, usefulness, and charm which are his Soul-filled individuality.

Man's Spiritual Faculties

Christ Jesus was the greatest individualist the world has ever known. He defied creed and dogma and consistently exercised Soul-sense in place of material sense. He healed all manner of diseases and gave sight to the blind and hearing to the deaf. The Master did all this and more through the realization that man's faculties are spiritual and not material. Sight, hearing, and their co-ordination and preservation, he knew to be determined by God alone and to be eternally free of impairment or blemish.

The word of Soul is a lamp unto your feet and a light unto your path, for through spiritual sense you come to know your true being. This understanding brings health and a right sense of affluence; it annuls the frictions of material sense and reveals man's serenity unshaken. In a letter to a branch church, Mrs. Eddy once wrote, "Into His haven of Soul there enters no element of earth to cast out angels, to silence the right intuition which guides you safely home" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 153).

The Light of Divine Mind

Just as the Bible indicates that God is Soul, so the Scriptures reveal that God is Mind. Paul said, "He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit" (Rom. 8:27). And the Psalmist declared, "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple" (Ps. 119:130).

Obviously the source of wisdom or spiritual understanding must be divine Mind. And because there is but one God, there is but one Mind. This is one of the cardinal points in the teaching of Christian Science and one of the most imperative to understand. In fact, our textbook makes this arresting statement, ". . . if mortals claimed no other Mind and accepted no other, sin would be unknown" (Science and Health, p. 469). All the world's distress, it may be said, comes from the failure to acknowledge God as the only Mind.

Man Reflects Divine Intelligence

Divine Mind replaces ignorance and fear with wisdom and confidence. Do you recall that when the Lord sent Moses unto Pharaoh, Moses was fearful that he could not fulfill his mission, for he was slow of speech? The Lord assured Moses, however, that He would teach him what to say, but still Moses doubted his ability. Therefore the Lord gave Moses the wisdom and confidence he needed in terms he could understand, that is, He sent Aaron with him to be his spokesman. Moses had not yet grown sufficiently in understanding to realize the true man's oneness with divine Mind wherein is infinite knowing and expression.

The Medicine of Mind

Because Mind is all-knowing, the light of divine Mind reveals to us whatever we need to know for the solution of any problem, financial, moral, or physical. The mention of physical problems brings to thought an incident which I observed. I overheard two girls of high school age talking in front of a Christian Science church. Upon reading the inscription on the cornerstone, one turned to her friend and asked, "What church is that?" Her friend replied, "Oh, don't you know, they're the people who don't believe in taking medicine!" What the girl should have said is that Christian Scientists do not believe in taking material medicine, for Science and Health states plainly (p. 142) that "God being All-in-all, He made medicine; but that medicine was Mind." And the textbook adds: "Truth is God's remedy for error of every kind, and Truth destroys only what is untrue. Hence the fact that, today, as yesterday, Christ casts out evils and heals the sick."

Prayer and Healing

Walking in the light of Mind means walking in the path of enlightened consciousness, and like the logic of Truth, enlightened consciousness, or understanding prayer, makes the way for healing.

A case in point is that of a student of Christian Science who, upon spending several hours at a seaside resort, discovered he had acquired what was said to be a severe case of sunburn. The condition was also characterized by a general over-all illness. The young man knew that his remedy lay in spiritualized consciousness. He therefore sought a Christian Science Reading Room, where he pondered the truths he had known from childhood. He gained much inspiration from the study of the Bible and our Leader's writings, and he found his attention particularly arrested by a statement Mrs. Eddy makes in her Message to The Mother Church for 1902. After declaring that "it is wise . . . to square accounts with each passing hour," Mrs. Eddy adds, "Then thy gain outlives the sun, for the sun shines but to show man the beauty of holiness and the wealth of love" (p. 17). He pondered that statement until he saw clearly that if it is true in the light of Christian Science that "the sun shines but to show man the beauty of holiness and the wealth of love," then the fact is that the sun has a constructive office and not a destructive one. With the acceptance into consciousness of this illumination of the truth about creation and man, the student experienced an instantaneous healing and left the Reading Room completely free in every respect.

From the foregoing you can clearly see that prayer in Christian Science, or Christian Science treatment, is not some "hocus-pocus," some conjuring up of magic words to fit this situation or that, or a playing upon words. In fact, Mrs. Eddy has said, "Christian Science is at length learned to be no miserable piece of ideal legerdemain, by which we poor mortals expect to live and die, but a deep-drawn breath fresh from God, by whom and in whom man lives, moves, and has deathless being" (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, p. 196).

To pray with the spirit is of first importance, but one must also pray with the understanding. He must bring to each case his understanding of the truth about God and man. That is the reason for studying the Scriptures in the light of Christian Science, for in this study we learn that God never created sin, disease, or death, for He could not possibly create anything unlike Himself. Therefore that which is unlike God, divine Truth, must be untrue and unreal.

Conclusion

Early in this lecture we said that throughout all time mankind has longed for the peace and security which an understanding of God alone can bring. Those of us who have found through Christian Science that the Word of God is indeed a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path are mindful that the Christ, Truth, is ever present to guide and to heal. This spiritual illumination is "the restorer of paths to dwell in" (Isa. 58:12), the peace be still to all the doubts and fears that would obscure our perception of the radiance of Soul and the wisdom of Mind. This spiritual understanding makes possible a ready response to Isaiah's cry (Isa. 2:5), "O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord." Yes, my friends,

"Walk in the light, and thou shalt see
Thy path, though thorny, bright;
For God by grace shall dwell with thee,
And God Himself is Light."

Simple, Tasty Meat Dishes

By ALICE DENHOFF

THE best foods of all are the simple foods, the foods that are served often because they are healthful, satisfying and tasty.

High in this category come such meaty marvels as a good pot roast and Swiss steak, braised meats from thrifty cuts. The trouble with such dishes is that too many cooks go on serving them in the same old uninspired way, when they might be concocting exciting new versions of the old stand-bys. Such flavoring twists as herbs sprinkled into the cooking liquid, a handful of mixed vegetables strewn over and around the meat, a new and different gravy ingredient such as sour cream, canned onion soup or mushroom soup, all help to give a new sparkle to tried and true favorites.

Swiss Steak

Most cooks think of Swiss steak as a dish of round steak cooked with tomatoes. Actually, this braised meat dish can be prepared in a number of attractive ways in order to create a new and subtle flavor, which, after all, is the essence of any dish. If your menfolk like the flavor of dill—and most of them seem to—here's a good round steak and dill dish, grand for hearty eaters. Have 2 lb. round steak cut ¾ inch thick. Wipe steak with damp cloth. Combine 3 c. soft bread crumbs, tsp. salt, ¼ c. each chopped onion and chopped dill pickle, ½ c. dill pickle juice and tbsp. melted butter. Spread this stuffing over the round steak. Roll up, fasten with skewers and cord. Place on rack in baking pan and lay 3 strips of bacon over the top lengthwise to baste the meat roll. Bake at 325 F. for an hour.

Note that this meat roll is not braised but baked in an uncovered pan. Although round steak usually is braised, in this case the bacon keeps the meat moist. If bacon is omitted, steak should be cooked in a covered pan with a small amount of added water.

Beef goulash can be just the same old stew or it can be made into something special when mysteriously seasoned with a bit of caraway seed and marjoram. To serve 6, have 2 lb. of beef stew meat cut into small cubes. Chop 2 medium onions and brown in 2 tbsp. lard, then add the meat, sear well. Add one c. water, ½ tsp. caraway seed, ½ tsp. marjoram, one clove garlic and 1½ tsp. salt. Add enough paprika to give the meat a good red color. Cover, and simmer for 2 hours, or until tender. Add more water if necessary. If desired, add halves of medium-sized potatoes ½ hour before done.

It's the Nation's Job Now To Keep Buyers in Market

By John Kelly

(Fifth in a Weekly Series)

Production and payrolls can be maintained in a competitive market. But only if the price and quality of output are such that people can sell to each other. This is the time to reduce, not raise, costs.

The phrase "priced out of the market" takes on a more urgent meaning in the cold light of recent events. We have just seen what happens when too many of us become unable to buy. We must make it possible for these people to buy again, not add to their number.

Untimely, to say the least, are current demands for a fourth-round wage boost. The general situation should make it plain to all. But the United Steel Workers have just joined the campaign. Their request is perfectly understandable, but nevertheless dismaying. We could use a little statesmanship right now.

Far From Stupid

The board of strategy of the steel workers is not a bunch of fatheads. Far from it. It is politically palatable to the rank and file to maintain that "substantial wage increases will provide a great reservoir of buying power." This is propounded repeatedly by the weekly newspaper of the parent organization.

Strongly organized wage earners may be able to achieve sufficient wage increases to enable them "to buy back the product." But how about those who do not and cannot obtain such increases? There have been many real sufferers in our period of inflation.

Those with lagging income include, for a few, pensioners and the people trying to get by on annuities. The income of corporate shareholders and the many folks whose savings are kept in fixed-interest obligations has been greatly reduced. The vast number of so-called white collar workers have not kept pace with prices. Many people whose savings were invested in rental property have taken a beating.

It's Different Now

Each of us is familiar with earlier turns in the wage-price spiral. Increases in wages — or anything else, for that matter—could then be passed on to the consumer without reducing sales. All the dislocations went unnoticed because of the insatiable demand for goods at any price. Things are different now, as can be plainly seen by contemplating one's own personal needs.

There is no doubt about what will happen if employee compensation—the principal factor in production cost—is hiked once again. The ones who get the raises and remain employed will have more money to spend.

The ranks of those already unable to buy will be enlarged by the borderline cases who are barely able as it is to make ends meet. Thus, even the fortunate ones will find their fatter pay checks more than outweighed by periodic lay-offs.

Words of the Wise

He who imagines he can do without the world deceives himself much; but he who fancies the world cannot do without him is still more mistaken.

And Have Not Love

SYNOPSIS

Porter Parish has become so disagreeable to his wife, Beatrice, one thing leads, Marianne, that divorce seems inevitable. She realizes that her husband is not happy under the cruel domination of his employer, Mr. Ramsey, a rich grasping egotomaniac. She resolves patiently that their child shall not be the victim of a broken home like poor frustrated Jane, teen-age daughter of Bea's best friend, Libby. One afternoon Bea meets Libby's attack woman, David Jordan, whom she finds "dangerously" attractive. More and more enslaved to Mrs. Ramsey's selfish whims, Beatrice begins to steal Jane remains overnight with Marianne, while the latter's parents dine at their club, where Porter imbibes too freely, causing his wife a new anxiety. David Jordan drives Bea home from the club and shyly makes love to her. Next morning Bea feels that she has lived through a dream. Her sense, her family is all that really matters, she stoutly tells herself.

CHAPTER TWELVE

THERE was nothing in Hilde's attitude to indicate any recent domestic disturbance. She had greeted Beatrice with her natural quietness and sweetness, and had at once become the gentle, capable beautician. More than once Beatrice had noticed that Hilde's attitude of passive resistance toward arrogant, dissatisfied customers had resulted, over a period of time, in those same customers deferring to Hilde. Beatrice had never seen anyone who turned the other cheek more than this girl in white, with her hidden beauty and deep resources to meet obstacles and pain. With her own social circle made up chiefly of women who lived in fear that they were not going to get all they considered their due, it was a gift in wisdom, Beatrice thought, to know one obscure, unassuming girl who invited respect and admiration simply because she did not demand it, simply because she was so sincerely and honestly herself.

"Is Marianne well?" she asked Beatrice.

"Now, yes. But she's been in for ten days with a bad cold and, of course, I have been in with her. And your little boy, Tommy, is he well?"

"Yes, he's fine. You're ready for the dryer, Mrs. Parish."

"I'll have to take the high heat," Beatrice said. "I'll just have time to pick up a little lunch in the drug store before my next appointment."

With Mrs. Ramsey. The ordeal of taking Mrs. Ramsey to her chiropodist. If only she could deaden her senses when she was with Mrs. Ramsey. Not to think, not to be suspicious or resentful, not to feel that she lived, mentally writhing, in the custody of the old woman's power. I'll try, she thought. I'll try again. But when is there an end to trying and denying what you know is true? Yet I must try again. For Porter.

Beatrice was sitting in a booth in the drugstore when Hilde came in for her lunch. She had an old, almost threadbare, plaid coat over her shoulders. Beatrice asked her to join her.

"I usually bring my lunch," Hilde told her. "I don't have time to get out between appointments. But this is a slow day."

Beatrice asked, "Is there anything I can do for you, Hilde I didn't bring it up in the shop, and I hesitate about doing it here. Nina told me about your husband."

The girl spoke with admirable restraint. "When Tom came back from the war, he got a GI loan and opened a shop selling electrical appliances. Two other men went in the business with him. I was to go on with my work until he was sure of making good. But . . . but he didn't make good. I don't want to say this but it's true. The other men were not honest. The business failed."

"You were buying a house."

Hilde nodded. "Yes. The woman next door kept Tommy, so I could work. She has a little boy of her own, and they played nicely together, and she could use the money I gave her."

"You're selling the house?"

The girl's eyes opened wide as she shook her head. "I couldn't sell my home, Mrs. Parish."

When her voice faltered, Beatrice knew her pain in this too. She knew how Hilde had saved and sacrificed so that she could have a home when Tom came back from the war. All the while he had been overseas, Hilde had talked about having a house with a yard for Tommy to play in, and white ruffled curtains at the windows. More than once Beatrice had heard the other girls in the shop chide her. "Why don't you buy yourself something, Hilde?"

Hilde smiled. "Tommy will be old enough to go to kindergarten next year. Imagine it!"

Beatrice thought, You are supporting yourself, your child, and your husband on your little salary. And at the end of your long, tiring working day you go home and cook dinner and clean the house and wash the clothes and iron them. Yet you can smile. You can find something to smile about—your pride in your son, and the fact that he is almost old enough to go to school.

Little things to smile about. Is that what is wrong with Porter and me—that we must have big, expensive, important things to make us happy now—a new car for him, a new fur coat for me? Have we forgotten the joyous little things that once made us thankful to be alive and together?

Beatrice said, "You have your children around you seemingly every moment, and then suddenly you don't see enough of them. Marianne doesn't get home until four. The first morning she went to school I stood at the window and watched her walk out to her own life." You make me honest and natural, Hilde. And I am ashamed to tell you that when I consider Marianne's Christmas I don't know what to get her because she has everything.

"You should have had more children, Mrs. Parish."

"I lost a child in California during the war."

"I'm sorry. I didn't know. People don't talk about the war any more. Yesterday one of my customers asked what year it ended. She couldn't remember whether it had been in '45 or '46. I shall never forget. It meant that Tom could come back to me. And now . . ."

"He isn't working?"

"No." When she leaned forward Beatrice saw the neat patch on the sleeve of her uniform. He can't do hard work. That's why he thought that having a small business of his own was the best way to make a living. The war took so much out of him. And working with his hands is the only work he knows how to do. Every day he goes out, hoping, but the work is either too hard, or it's something he doesn't know how to do. And all day I follow him in my mind as he goes from place to place. And I know what he can do. He can do wonderful things with his hands. He can design and build. Wood is life and beauty to him. A rough piece of lumber becomes a table or a cabinet with a satin finish. Wood is to Tom what marble is to the sculptor. He can't sit at a desk, or drive a truck, or stand at a machine. He has to create and build. I want him to do what is natural for him to do. A man must love his work or half of him dies. It is my task now to keep him from feeling that he's a failure. He is not a failure. No person who has courage and conscience is a failure."

"What are you going to do?" Beatrice asked.

"Do?" And again the girl regarded her with surprise. Then she said simply, "We are struggling toward greater strength."

Humbled, Beatrice said, "Thank you. Thank you for telling me that it is better to understand than to be understood."

Much as she wanted to, she did not attempt to pay for Hilde's lunch. The pride in the girl's face as she opened the small purse and took change from it—the pride that said she was doing what her integrity demanded of her—forbade it.

We are struggling toward greater strength!

Outside the fog had descended into the mist. It was just such a day that Mrs. Ramsey became an avid backseat driver.

Beatrice thought, When I have done all that I am supposed to do today, I'll take a walk through the park alone. I used to do it. I want to find them again, the pleasurable little things I used to do like walking in the rain.

Vee Dee'ers Win Title

With every member on the team getting at least 535, the Vee Dee'ers won the title of champs for the Thursday Night Business Men's League. McCullough and the Vee Dee'ers finished with identical records for the season and the roll-off was held Thursday night at the Hilltop lanes.

In the first game it was McCullough's, paced by Howard Smith's 215 and Howard Minnameyer's 214 all the way as they rolled 972 to Vee Dee'ers' 797. The second game was different as the Vee Dee'ers, behind Bob Barok's 220 and Norm Reeves' 219, "bowled" the maples over to the tune of 1019. The third game was little different as this time the score was 935 867 in favor o' Vee Dee'ers.

Use Thrifty Cuts of Lamb

By ALICE DENHOFF

LAMB comes to the Springtime table, and while it is fine to have a succulent roast leg of lamb or a brace of thick loin chops, don't neglect the thrifty cuts.

All cuts of lamb are tender and may be cooked by dry heat—broiling, pan-broiling or, roasting—which should be done at low heat (300°F, with no searing first required).

As for the fell, that thin parchment-like covering, there is still some controversy about this. From all accounts it's probably better off the shoulder, rack or saddle, is much better left on the leg. But it is a matter of individual choice.

Try a cushion shoulder roast for something good and different. Have retailer bone the square cut shoulder so as to make a pocket. It is then sewed around the edges leaving one side open for the stuffing. Make a good stuffing (celery, onion, parsley is recommended), skewer the opening, and roast without water, allowing 40 min. per pound for roasting.

Lamb shanks may be inexpensive, a real thrift cut, but when well prepared, come up as a good, tasty and nourishing dish. Buy a lamb shank for each person to be served. Season with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and brown in hot fat. Place in baking dish, and pour the drippings over it. Cover and cook in 300°F. oven for about 2 hours.

Lamb Loaf

For a lamb loaf you'll need about 2 lb. of ground lamb for 6 servings. Prepare it as you would any other meat loaf, combining with an egg, seasonings to taste (minced parsley, onion, green pepper, etc., as well as salt and pepper). Use milk to moisten. Bake in 300° F. for about an hour. Serve with potatoes browned in the pan. Baked onions, string beans or tomatoes are good with a lamb loaf.

Good lamb notions include these ideas: Add chop fresh mint to bread stuffing to add interest to stuffed lamb shoulder. Add some barley to your next lamb stew!

Adventists Will Celebrate 100th Anniversary

A centenary service commemorating "a century of achievement and service by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church" will be celebrated in the Eastwood Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 28 N. 21st-st, on Saturday, May 21. F. E. Thumwood, supervisor of the Adventist literature work in Ohio, will be the guest speaker. His topic will be "The Value of the Literature Ministry."

"The program will celebrate the beginnings of the church's publishing work in 1849, which was the first organized endeavor of the infant church," Richard T. Minesinger, local pastor, said.

"The publishing work was largely responsible for the rapid growth of the church, which now numbers more than 600,000 members, and operates an international network of churches, schools, hospitals and other institutions. The church's 51 publishing houses prepare literature in 190 languages, issue 208 periodicals and bring out a well-balanced library for the family, minister and student," Pastor Minesinger said.

Those who are seniors at West High will receive recognition.

The pastor will speak on the theme, "The Choice Is Before Us." At this service the motion picture equipment will be dedicated and presented to the trustees of the church. The Youth Fellowship project for the year was to raise funds and purchase a 16 mm. sound moving picture projector. At 7:30 p. m. the new picture with sound and natural color, "Out of the Night", will be shown.

Jesus Institutes the Lord's Supper — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 14:12-26; Luke 22:7-38.

On the first day of the Passover, Jesus sent forth two disciples into the city and told them they would meet a man bearing a pitcher of water upon his head. Follow him.

Where the man with the water pitcher went they were to ask the master of the house where they should eat the passover, and he would show them an upper room.

In the evening the Master sat with the twelve, and they ate, and He said to them, "One of you which eateth with Me shall betray Me." And they asked Him, "Is it I?"

Jesus took bread, blessed and brake it and gave it to them, saying, "This is My body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of Me."

SEEK BETTER HEALTH THE VOLUNTARY AMERICAN WAY
Write a Letter!

FORCES FROM WITHIN AND WITHOUT are expending enormous amounts of money, time and effort to push Federal COMPULSORY Health Insurance onto the workers of America. Such a plan of taxing payrolls more than THREE BILLIONS of dollars a year, to be administered through a Washington bureau, would soon have "lay" bureaus throughout the country "rationing" your doctor's services.
Experience in other countries has proven that Federal COMPULSORY Health Insurance completely upsets the QUALITY and progress of Medical Science, and adversely affects every phase of individual care. Doctors are doing everything humanly possible to extend the benefits of medicine to all the people . . . VOLUNTARY, inexpensive pre-paid plans of medical care and hospitalization are NOW available to 100,000,000 U. S. citizens—and being daily extended. Ask your doctor about it. National surveys show the vast majority prefer the VOLUNTARY way. Tell your Representative what YOU think.

TOMMIE and Mary have had a busy day. Chores about the house for Tommie; and then baseball, marbles and the usual neighborhood games. Mary has dressed her dolls, skipped rope and has been a veritable busybody.

Both children have made their Mama and Daddy very happy. The sweet innocence of youth, the happy outlook on life and utter absence of guile are inspiring examples to elder persons of how joyful life can be when its activities are suggested by faithful hearts and minds that think purely.

Mama and Daddy know that Tommie and Mary will grow strong through prayer and devotion to God, so they have taught them to pray. Often during the week both little tots have a habit of asking, "Mommie, how many more days until Sunday School?" Then on Sunday they are always on hand to get credit against their cherished attendance buttons, each Sunday learning more and more about the things that make for happiness and service in life.

Mama and Daddy go with the children to Sunday School. Then the family stays for church. After church all of them feel so much better inside, and so strong and well fortified for the coming week's work and play. Others are influenced toward the higher things in life through the examples of Tommie and Mary and their Mama and Daddy.

As nighttime falls and the children kneel in prayer, somehow Mama and Daddy feel that their own lives will be blessed more divinely because the little ones have said, "God Bless Mama and Daddy."

Community Is Glad Matson Is Cleared

Hilltop people in general have expressed their pleasure with the recent decision of the court which clears charges against former county commissioner George Matson and commissioners Vigor and Lauderbaugh.

Many years ago the Record was first to back George Matson for county commissioner. We had known him for a long time and felt he was a capable individual to serve the people of this county. He was fitted for the job in view of his past experience.

That George served well in the capacity of a county commissioner is attested by his popularity at the polls until the last primary election. It is indeed to be regretted that this charge was placed against him alone just before the primary, a fact which in itself gave him the necessary unpleasant publicity needed to kill his election. Later events have shown that he was sacrificed in the great game of politics.

From the beginning we personally contended that George was an innocent victim of the game of politics. The county has lost the services of a good public official. Until the trial was over no newspaper comment was permissible. It is too bad that the damage has been done.

We are happy to be able to report that George and other commissioners are in the clear. We wish him well in any endeavor from here on.

Hilltop Pastor Leaves For South America

Rev. Schoof

Pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, 286 Belvidere-av. Rev. W. Howard Schoof, left today for South America to join a Youth for Christ team.

Leaving Columbus by plane, Rev. Schoof's first stop will be Quito, Ecuador, where he will join other members of the team.

One of the members is Bob Savage of Station HCJB at Quito, the first pioneer missionary broadcasting station in the world. Other members of the team include three friends of the Evangel Male Quartet with which Rev. Schoof sang while a student at Moody Bible Institute from 1931 to 1933.

The group will hold youth rallies in various cities in Ecuador and Columbia and will conclude their South American tour with a meeting at the San Andres Islands off the coast of Columbia.

During Dr. Schoof's absence in the pulpit, he will be replaced by various visiting ministers. Two Sundays, June 5 and June 12, Perry Temple, a member of the congregation, and a student at Bob Jones University will preach.

He will return to his pulpit July 10.

Kiwanis Night at Stadium June 14; Boys to Benefit

Every member of Hilltop Kiwanis will be a ticket salesman between now and June 14, the date of Kiwanis Night at Red Bird Stadium.

The United Kiwanis Clubs of Greater Columbus are sponsoring the event. The Red Birds are scheduled to play Indianapolis that night.

The purpose of Kiwanis Night is to raise money to send 140 underprivileged boys to camp this summer. The boys range in age from seven to 16, and will be chosen by member Kiwanis Clubs on the basis of initiative, leadership, ability, cooperation and citizenship.

Hilltop Kiwanians will have tickets in every price range—$1.20, $1.50, 50-cent bleacher tickets and box seats.

M. E. (Jack) Sensenbrenner, president of Hilltop Kiwanis, said today that both individuals and organizations interested in sending one or several boys to the ball game would be furnished tickets at 50 cents each.

Chairman of the committee in charge of Kiwanis Night is James R. Riley, president of the Downtown Kiwanis Club; secretary is George H. Jarvis, president of Northwest Kiwanis Club. Other committee members are Thomas R. Loughran, president of Linden Heights Club; J. Max McConagha, president of Northern Kiwanis, and Mr. Sensenbrenner.

Seventy boys will be accommodated in each of the two camp sessions which are scheduled for Aug. 4 to 15 and 16 to 26.

The camp, owned by the Big Brother Association, is located in Hocking County, 55 miles southeast of Columbus on Route 374, southwest of Logan. It is situated on a wooded terrain of 185 acres and consists of a dining hall, recreation barn, infirmary, wash and shower house, and 10 cabins.

Camp counselors and personnel employed for the Big Brothers camp will also be continued on for the Kiwanis Camp period.

Sports fans who attend Kiwanis Night at the Red Bird Stadium on June 14 will be helping to send these 140 Greater Columbus boys to camp for a thrilling two weeks they will long remember.

Mr. Cutting Needed Cutter — Ran Ad; Now Glad

Sewer Work Is Scheduled For Hilltop

A number of relief and storm sewer projects are scheduled for construction in scattered locations on the Hilltop and the West Side, Chief Deputy Engineer Chris L. Bonney announced this week.

All the projects are a part of the program visualized when the voters of the city in 1945 approved the expenditure of $3,500,000 for sewers. Approximately $1,290,000 is being spent in all areas of the city this year, Mr. Bonney said. He added that by the end of 1950 the city's sewer system "will be in excellent shape."

The city's plans for the Hilltop this year include only relief sewers, those which prevent basement flooding during heavy rains. Both storm and relief sewers are planned for the West Side area east of Central-av.

"Improvements to Kinnaird Ditch (Dry Run), also on the Hilltop, are planned.

"All of the West Side and Hilltop work is tentatively scheduled for 'late this year.'"

Mr. Boney pointed out that because of the sharp increase in prices since the electorate first voted the sewer funds, only 50 to 60 per cent of the work originally planned can be completed. He also cited the fact that the city's sewer planning has been designed to care for the needs of the city only until 1960. He added:

"That leaves us 10 years to draw plans and construct more. That really isn't long and the time is drawing near when we'll have to start plans."

Dr. Pritchard Of Hilliards Is Dead at 43

Dr. William L. Pritchard, 43, practicing physician in Hilliards for the last 13 years and president of the school board there, died Saturday in Mt. Carmel Hospital.

Ill less than a day, he was admitted to the hospital Saturday noon.

A graduate of West High School, Dr. Pritchard did undergraduate work at Oberlin University and the University of Michigan and received his medical degree from Ohio State University. He had practiced in Hilliards since his graduation in 1933.

He had been a member of the Hilliards Board of Education for the last four years and last week signed the contracts for the new $175,000 school building program which he helped establish.

He was a member of Avery Lodge, F&AM, Order of Eastern Star, Scottish Rite and Shrine, the American and Ohio State Medical Associations, the Columbus Academy of Medicine, Phi Rho Sigma medical fraternity and the Hilliards Methodist Church.

Son of the late Dr. William H. Pritchard, former superintendent of state hospitals in Columbus and Gallipolis, Dr. Pritchard is survived by his wife, Freeda; two sons, William and Roger; his mother, Mrs. William L. Pritchard, who resided with him, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Ann Sharp, 4300 Dublin-rd.

Funeral services were held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Hilliards Methodist Church. Burial was in Wesley Chapel Cemetery under the direction of the Jerry Spears Funeral Home.

SPORTSMEN MEET FRIDAY

The Hilltop Conservation Club will meet at 8 p. m. Friday at the Hilltop Sporting Goods Store, 2461 W. Broad-st. The meeting is described as important by C. M. Price, secretary.

Two of Many 'Y' Activities for Hilltop Boys

Hilltop Y Drive Gets Rolling; Collection of $1300 Reported

LEAGUE-LEADING GRA-Y TEAM — These boys form the flaming Arrow softball team which currently is leading the five-team league sponsored and supervised by the Hilltop YMCA. Kneeling (left to right): Carl Cristoff, Ronnie Bartow, Tom Reeves and Charles Ruff. Second row: Robert Bunner, Bob Doherty, Mark Rector, Jim Reder, Dave Snevley, James Smith and John Edwards. Third row: Jim Edwards, Richard Furry, John Love, Bill Spratley, Gary Erlenbach, Geoffrey Dum, Bill Borland and Dave Randall. The Flaming Arrows are one of two teams from West Broad Street School.

SATURDAY SWIMMERS — This is a group of Hilltop boys enjoying the downtown YMCA pool. Each Saturday Hilltop Y supervisors take a group of from 15 to 25 to the downtown Y. Each boy active in the Hilltop Y who wishes to do so is given an opportunity to swim about once a month when his group's turn comes around.

Volunteers Push Toward Goal Of Membership Fund

The Hilltop YMCA's membership drive slipped into high gear this week with more and more workers entering the field to sign up Hilltoppers for 1949-50 memberships.

As of Monday evening, collection of more than $1300 as a result of the membership campaign had been reported. As previously announced, contributions in excess of the $5 voting membership fee are being placed in a separate building fund. The $1300 contributed to the local Y so far represents both membership fees and building fund gifts.

Urge Speedy Reports

Jerry Spears, Sr., chairman of the membership campaign, and Averille Thorn, Hilltop Y secretary, urged the volunteer workers conducting the drive to make partial reports as quickly as possible so that the Y board can keep abreast of the campaign's progress. They emphasized that workers nede not wait until they have completed their assigned work before making interim reports.

Even though the volunteer force conducting the drive has been swelled by a number of latecomers, there is a sizable amount of work yet to be assigned and any individuals or organizations desiring to assist will be welcomed, Mr. Thorn said.

Among the groups yet to be reached in the campaign are the parents of a large number of the young people now receiving the benefits of the Y. These parents will be urged to take out $5 voting and supporting memberships to help maintain the organization's services.

Goal Set At $3000

The memberships now being offered in the Hilltop Y are for the period between July 1, 1949, and July 1, 1950. The campaign is being conducted now in order that the funds it provides will be available before July 1, thus maintaining the Y program during the summer months. The goal of the present membership campaign is $3000 which will be used to supplement the $7500 appropriation the local Y receives from the Community Chest.

Mr. Thorn already is laying plans for the summer program which probably will include swimming, handcraft, movies, softball and, he hopes, several trips for Hilltop youngsters to the Hocking Hills.

Inaugurated last week on a trial basis was a regular Saturday morning movie using the projector and screen presented to the Y recently by the Hilltop Business Association. Whether the movie showing will be continued through the summer months on a regular Saturday morning basis remains to be decided, Mr. Thorn said.

Allen Stallion Ranks High In Horse Show Here

Cotton Ginner, top-flight walking stallion recently acquired by Noble L. Allen, 2458 W. Broad-st, won the class for walking stallions and geldings at Friday night's session of the Columbus Humane Society's Horse Show at the Ohio State Fairgrounds Coliseum.

The newcomer's subsequent defeat Sunday night in the $500 championship stake event was just as unpopular with the horse show crowd as his earlier victory had been popular.

In his victory, Mr. Allen's stallion won his ribbon over a challenging exhibition by Seminole Chief from Hereford Manor Farms, Zelienpole, Pa.

His defeat came in a bitterly contested duel with a chestnut mare, Merry Wilson, also owned by the Hereford Manor Farms. Many experts were dumbfounded when the judges' decision relegated Mr. Allen's handsome contender to second place in the stake event.

Foreman To Discuss Socialized Medicine At Kiwanis Meeting

"Facts on Socialized Medicine" will be the subject of a talk to be presented by Jonathan Foreman at the Hilltop Kiwanis Club meeting Thursday, May 26.

Dr. Jack Miles will act as chairman of the program and will introduce the speaker. Second vice-president, Jack Merriman, will officiate at the meeting.

MUSIC TEACHERS MEET

The 65th annual convention of the Ohio Music Teachers Association will be held at the Neil House on June 14-15-16.

Belvidere Ave. Swamp Fight Carried to City Officials

A group of 18 residents of the area surrounding the Belvidere-av swamp met with City Service Director Elmer Keller and City Council last night formally to lay their case for the elimination of the swamp before the city government.

C. A. Reed, 130 Wrexham-av, spokesman for the group, reported they were well received and that the complaining residents were given an opportunity to present their entire case.

Mr. Reed reports that a suggestion that the matter be handled as a legal action through the city attorney's office was rejected by E. W. McCormick, chief assistant to the city attorney, who in turn recommended that the situation was one which should be studied by the City Board of Health.

No definite action was taken at last night's meeting, Mr. Reed said, but it appeared that the swamp condition probably would be referred to the Board of Health in line with Mr. McCormick's suggestion.

The swamp condition has resulted from the excavation of humus from a plot of undeveloped ground lying between Belvidere and Wrexham-avs just south of Floral-av.

The hole, more than 100 feet across and 12 to 15 feet deep, has been filled partially in recent weeks by city rubbish trucks pursuant to an order of City Council of two years ago. Residents of the area now complain that both the water accumulated in the pit and the uncovered rubbish which partly fills it are a menace to the health of the neighborhood.

The residents of the area have joined forces with the Hilltop Community Council in an effort to complete the eradication of the swamp condition. Last night's meeting with city officials, arranged by Russell L. Carter and Elmer J. Hegenberger of the Community Council and Henry J. Koontz, Hilltop's representative on City Council, was the first step in the combined efforts of the two groups.

Funeral services for George Maconoff, 35, of 88 S. Roys-av, who died Friday, in Grant Hospital, were held today.

Mr. Maconoff suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries Wednesday when the auto in which he was riding crashed into a tree in the 1500 block of Demorest-rd.

Also injured were the driver, Theodore Pashovich, 36, of 53 E. Rich-st, and another passenger, Naum Christinoff, 52, of 514 E. Town-st. Pashovich is in "not too good" condition in Mt. Carmel Hospital, and the condition of Christinoff in Grant Hospital is "just fair."

Odd Facts

An unemployed reefer in Columbus, Ohio, down to his last dime, matched it with a friend and won; invested that dime in a bingo game and won first prize—a $10 ticket to a buffet dinner; attended the dinner and won the grand door prize—a new car. He still has the original dime.

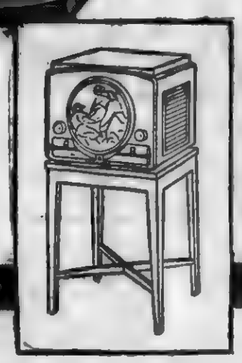
ZENITH TELEVISION



...WITH GIANT CIRCLE SCREEN and AUTOMATIC BULLS EYE TUNING

...so sensationally different it defies description... you must see it for yourself ...operate it yourself

THE PLACE to see Zenith television is in your home... in the actual location and surroundings where you will want to enjoy it and live with it. That's why we offer you this free home trial of amazing Zenith* Television. You must see it to appreciate it. And this offer is ABSOLUTELY FREE, no strings attached. Enjoy it all at our expense because we want you to get the thrilling first-hand proof of the sensational reception advantages found in no other television receiver. Then you'll know why Zenith is America's most talked-about television receiver... why Zenith sales have reached the highest peak in history... why we say Zenith is the BIGGEST VALUE IN TELEVISION—FOR TODAY AND FOR YEARS TO COME!

New, easy terms means every home can have Television

Zenith television receivers come in a variety of handsome models, styles, finishes. Shown here is the "Claridge," compact table set with "Big B" screen—105 sq. in. picture area! Mahogany finish imported Afara veneers. Matching table available.

The Zenith "WARWICK"—Console in period design, genuine Mahogany veneers. xtra "Big B" Giant Circle screen—105 sq. in. of picture area.

7 Reasons why we say Zenith is America's Biggest Television Value:

1. SUPER SIZE PICTURES—with Giant Circle Screen that makes use of entire tube surface to provide direct view pictures amazingly larger than on ordinary receivers. "Giant C" size shows 165 sq. in. of picture; "Big B" size shows 105 sq. in.; "Super A" size shows 70.7 sq. in.

2. INSTANT, AUTOMATIC BULLS EYE TUNER—one knob, one twist, brings in station, picture, sound—all pre-adjusted! Instantly does what in many sets requires up to 5 or 6 manual tuning operations! With exclusive "no-drift" circuits, this licks the repeated re-tuning problem still common in other sets!

3. EXCLUSIVE ZENITH-ARMSTRONG FM TONE—the FM of the experts! With Zenith-built Full Size Speakers, this insures tone of glorious brilliance and fidelity, powerful even in outlying areas, static-free even in worst storms!

4. SUPER SIZE MULTI-UNIT CHASSIS—the biggest, most powerful chassis in any sets at anywhere near Zenith prices! Built with war-proved precision, the separate units are pre-tuned and pre-tested, then joined into one—for performance and dependability previously considered impossible to achieve!

5. SUPER-POWER SUPPLY unit that supplies the extra power needed for brighter, clearer, sharper pictures even on weak signals in fringe areas! Unit weighs over 18½ lbs.

6. EXCLUSIVE "GATED" AUTOMATIC GAIN CONTROL that opens an electrical "gate" for only 5 millionths of one second to let the television signal through, then shuts to close out interference that ordinary sets admit. Airplanes, dialing the phone and other common sources of interference will not cause flutter in the Zenith picture.

7. BUILT FOR THE FUTURE—Zenith's built-in Bulls Eye Tuner has provision for receiving the proposed new ultra high frequency channels on present standards—no "converter" necessary! And every Zenith is adaptable to Phonevision, destined to bring first-run movies, Broadway plays, operas, etc., right into your home.

ONLY ZENITH GIVES YOU ALL THIS

WHAT YOU SAVE ON ENTERTAINMENT HELPS BUY YOUR ZENITH TELEVISION!

Think of it—you and your family enjoy baseball, boxing, wrestling, football and other sports... movies... animated cartoons... children's programs... variety shows... all in your own home, without paying a penny for admission or cover charge! CHAPTER THIRTEEN

The Ramey house sat high upon a hill. Beatrice had often pondered how closely houses resembled the people who lived in them. The Ramey house for example was large, lonely, bleak, and isolated. Years ago Beatrice had tried to interest Mrs. Ramey in flowers. Though it was physically impossible for the arthritic old woman to work in a garden, Beatrice had hoped that at least she would take pride in the work of the two gardeners who were employed the year around. Yet she had never seen a blooming tulip from the bulbs she had taken, or the muted lovely colors of chrysanthemums from the cuttings she had personally given the gardeners.

When she had parked her car before the house, she looked at her watch. She was one minute early.

Mrs. Ramey herself responded to the ringing of the bell and opened the door.

Beatrice smiled. "Hello. Why, you're all ready."

What was meant to be a smile was only a twitching of the muscles beside her mouth when Mrs. Ramey said, "Of course I'm ready. I don't like to keep anyone waiting, my dear. I don't want to be any trouble."

Mrs. Ramey wore the same mink coat that she had worn for as long as Beatrice had known her. During the war Mrs. Ramey had said that it was unpatriotic to buy anything, and since then she had said that prices were exorbitant. Both mere excuses. It was just that Mrs. Ramey could not bear to be separated from her money.

Though she walked with regal bearing and carried her head high and proudly, Mrs. Ramey was beginning to look quite old. The gossip was that she was ten years older than Mr. Ramey, and that she had married him only because he was the only man she knew who could save her family's business from bankruptcy.

"Do you think you should drive today, Beatrice? It's a beastly day."

"I've driven in worse weather. I'm not afraid of anything except ice."

"Very well, if you say so but ..." The darting eyes settled on Beatrice's hooded raincoat as they walked down the steps to the car; Beatrice walking slowly in order to remain beside Mrs. Ramey. "That's new, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"You're always getting something new."

Beatrice thought, I haven't had a new raincoat since I've been married.

Beatrice opened the car door and Mrs. Ramey sank down heavily on the red leather seat.

"I wonder you don't have a new car," Mrs. Ramey said. "Porter has a new one."

Beatrice tried to laugh lightly. "Oh, I'm fond of this one. We seem to know each other."

"There's such a draft."

Shall I buy the next one to please you? Marianne and I like a convertible. We like to ride with the top down in good weather and feel the wind and sun in our faces.

"Be careful," Mrs. Ramey said. "You know, my heart is not good. I had a spell yesterday. They're getting closer together."

"I'll be very careful."

Apparently Mrs. Ramey knew nothing about the night at the club when Porter had left her. With her indefatigable sense for news, and her mysterious sources of information, Beatrice wondered how she had missed it.

Mrs Ramey said, "I saw your friend Libby the other day in the drugstore."

"Really? I've talked to her on the phone, but I haven't seen her because of Marianne's cold."

"I can't for the life of me understand what you have in common with her."

"She's my oldest friend, and she and her mother were generous at a time when I most needed generosity." She had to defend Libby.

"I don't approve of her," Mrs. Ramey said. "Her father was an unsavory character. I remember him well."

"He was nice to me, though I didn't see a great deal of him."

"I don't wonder about that. And your friend Libby is like her father in a good many unpleasant ways. Extravagant. But then, of course, perhaps she doesn't pay for all those clothes and jewels herself."

Beatrice gripped the wheel. Her face felt as if it were going up in flames. "I assure you, Mrs. Ramey, that she does."

"My dear child, you are so naive. You can't believe everything that people tell you."

When another car crowded them at a light Mrs. Ramey said, "I should take his number and report him. Mr. Ramey would do something about him. The fool, he doesn't know he's trying to push me off the street. When my husband wants something done in this town, he gets it done. The Mayor and the Police Department dare not oppose him. The Governor, too. They know what would happen if we moved the plant to another state—the loss of our taxes, the unemployment, thousands thrown out of jobs..."

Power, Beatrice thought. How you revel in it. It's all you have. Money and power. Her eyes burned with unshed tears as the lines came to her, "And though I understand all mysteries and all knowledge; and though I have all faith so I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing ..."

Mrs. Ramey settled back again and folded her arms.

"I won't bother you any more this week, Beatrice, but next week, if it isn't too much trouble, I'd like you to take me to see my lawyer."

Her lawyer?

"I'll be glad to take you."

"Yes," Mrs. Ramey continued, "I'm going to see my lawyer. I've been thinking about it for a long time. I have a great deal of money. I have jewels, and silver, and priceless antiques." She waited a moment and added with dramatic emphasis, "I am going to make my will."

"I see," Beatrice said.

"I can't live forever," Mrs. Ramey continued decisively. "And with my heart the way it is, the end may come at any time. I haven't a relative in the world to whom I would leave a penny. Wastrels, all of them. Miserable parasites. They have never shown me an iota of respect. And I shall certainly not leave my money to my husband's people. Coal miners. Common laborers. It would make fools of them all. Let them continue to live in blissful ignorance of the finer things of life. I did not marry for love, Beatrice. I made a sensible marriage. My husband and I give each other a grudging respect. But we both got what we wanted... Are you listening?"

"Yes, I'm listening." And I feel sick, Mrs. Ramey.

"Well," Mrs. Ramey said, "you know what I think of you and Marianne. That's all I'm going to tell you now. Surely you can put two and two together yourself."

Beatrice, maneuvering the car into the only available space in the parking lot, felt herself shivering and burning simultaneously. Had she been listening? Had she comprehended what Mrs. Ramey had been saying?

Mrs. Ramey was going to leave everything to Marianne and her.

But what is the price, Mrs. Ramey? Our liberty and our souls?

She turned and looked at the old woman. "I'll be glad to bring you into town next week to see your lawyer. But I wish that you would give even more serious consideration to what you have implied. I'm not ungrateful, believe me. I want you to be very, very sure that it is what you want to do."

Mrs. Ramey nodded and smiled triumphantly. "My dear child, I can always change it, you know. Even on my death bed, I can change it."

And that is the weapon that you will hold over Marianne's head and mine until the moment you die. How long have you been contemplating this, our complete bondage to you and your power and money? You suspect my rebellion, don't you? You will stop it with this, you think, this grand gesture. You are not only greedy and stingy and selfish, unloved and unlovable. You are wicked.

That Mrs. Ramey insisted on going to a chiropodist who would not give appointments had been unintelligible to Beatrice until, after sitting with Mrs. Ramey for many years in the dingy office, she had come to understand that Mrs. Ramey liked the man because his flattery was unction to her hungry heart.

Today they waited an hour and a half, and when finally Mrs. Ramey went into the little cubicle, Beatrice heard her laugh several times. Beatrice got up and walked about to the window, to the table piled high with old, coverless, torn magazines. She felt that the room would not hold her. To run out into the fog, to be anonymous, to be free.

The chiropodist followed Mrs. Ramey out into the waiting room. Smirking, he said to Beatrice, "She looks younger every day, doesn't she?"

(To Be Continued)

Ship-money was a tax or imposition levied by Charles I of England in 1626, requiring each county to provide a ship of war or contribute a certain sum in lieu thereof. It was abolished by Oliver Cromwell's "Long Parliament" in 1641.

West Teacher, 4 Boys Plan To Camp on Island

At 6:30 p. m., June 10, a group of boys, headed by W. D. Campbell, art instructor at West High School, will leave on the New York Central's "Ohio State Limited" for a camping trip in the Adirondack Mountains.

Mr. Campbell chose the following boys to accompany him on the excursion: Knoll Hill, cook; Paul Thompson, boatswain; Dick Goodrich, one of the three dishwashers and woodchoppers, and Wes Hart.

This trek, the 11th one conducted by Mr. Campbell, will differ from the previous ones in that the campers will have an island (about the size of West High School in area) all to themselves.

After three weeks of camping, Mr. Campbell and three of the boys will spend a week in New York City. They plan to return to Columbus around the middle of July.

"that's a fine home you're building!"

YES, I think I'm going to like it.

I wish I had a home of my own.

Well, why not?

My wife has the idea that it would be a great worry if anything happened to me.

Nothing to it, my boy. The arrangements I've made with the SUN LIFE OF CANADA will clear the mortgage in the event of my untimely death.

I never thought of that. What about the cost?

Insignificant! In fact, it adds very little to the carrying charge of the mortgage.

IF you are a home-owner, make your investment safe for posterity. A SUN LIFE man will be glad to talk it over with you.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Marilyn Miller O'Donnell, who passed away four years ago, May 30, 1945.

Four lonely years since she left us
To walk on that beautiful shore.
She walks hand in hand with her Saviour.
Her spirit shall sorrow no more,
She sings the melodious songs of the blest,
On the paths that her Saviour trod,
While we miss her dear presence here,
Her soul is at home with God.

Sadly missed by parents, brothers, aunt and uncle.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our daughter-in-law, Mrs. Paul O'Donnell, who passed away May 30, 1945

And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet her,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp her hand in the better land,
Never to part again.

Sadly missed by Mrs. Thomas O'Donnell and family.

This Spirit Makes For Success

The following letter received this week from a former Hilltopper, now a resident of Cleveland, shows the kind of spirit that will make the Hilltop Y drive a success:

"I am enclosing my check for membership in the Hilltop YMCA for the coming year.

"Although no longer a resident of the Hilltop, I am sincerely interested in the continuation of such a vital program as is being carried out by your group.

"May the Hilltop YMCA never want for a few dollars to carry on its great work!

Yours,
Charles P. Maus"

Numerous Hilltop residents have received letters asking for their contributions to the drive. Why not take time to write a nice check right now and send it in?

Ex-Insurance Man's Little Malabar Is Paying Off In Deep Contentment

When you find a man who has laid aside deliberately a business in which he has been active for many years in favor of a totally different occupation, you are likely to find a man who has achieved happiness and contentment.

When you stand and talk with Harold F. Cunningham, dressed in the sturdy, well-worn garb of a farmer, you quickly realize that you have found a man who is doing just the kind of work he loves.

Four years ago, Mr. Cunningham was an insurance man here on the Hilltop—and doing all right, financially. He had been in the business a good many years. But he had been reared a farm boy. And there's more in this world than money, he decided.

So, four years ago this month he and Mrs. Cunningham bought a farm out at 4764 Fisher-rd.

The land wasn't in any too good a shape. But that didn't daunt Cunningham just one bit. He wanted to be to his 73 acres what Louis Bromfield had been to his vast, sprawling Malabar farm near Mansfield. And he has been.

The fertility of the soil is coming back rapidly. All the grain Mr. Cunningham raises is fed to his livestock. The manure and nitrogen-rich crops are plowed back into the soil. So are lime and fertilizer.

For his cash income, since he feeds his grain to his livestock Mr. Cunningham depends on his dairy herd and his pig crop. Sure, he raises some black angus steers for eating purposes, but those milk cows of his are his pride and joy.

Take June, his black Jersey cow. No, she isn't registered. Back somewhere in her lineage, she picked up about one-sixteenth of some other breed, probably Guernsey. But every day for the last month she has been producing 55 to 58 pounds of milk a day. That's seven gallons. So Mr. Cunningham forgives her for not being a purebred.

Wouldn't take $1000 for her, he says with pride. He babies her like an only child—and like an only child she's a little bit spoiled. Like the other day when Mr. Cunningham slipped a halter on her before having her picture snapped, June was somewhat less than enthusiastic. It dawned on Mr. Cunningham then that since he bought her as a calf four years ago he had never had a halter on her.

Maybe it was a silly question to ask a happy man, but: "Don't you ever miss the insurance business?"

"What do you think?" he asked with a grin.

West Nine Keeps Title Hopes Alive

Staving off a last inning North rally, the West baseball nine took its eighth City League decision in 10 outings yesterday afternoon on the North diamond, 8-2.

The Cowboys played as a disheartened ball club would. After their defeat at the hands of Linden-McKinley last week for the second loss of the year, they were counted pretty much out of the race as the home stretch was being reached. Linden has two more games remaining as does West. The Cowboys have Aquinas, whom they beat, 8 to 1, in the first round, and South, a 7-to-3 loser to the Cowboys in their first meeting. Linden has remaining North and Central.

The situation is similar to last year's proceedings. After Central, co-champion with West last year, had beaten the Cowboys to take the City League lead, North helped the Cowboys by beating Central, 11-0, whereas West beat North to tie for the co-championship. A co-championship is about all West can hope for this year since Linden is expected to take Central easily tomorrow at Central.

Young Goes Route

In the North-West fray, Phil Young, West's workhouse moundsman, went all the way, and finished the game in average fashion by striking out Catcher Don Davis of North with the tying run on second, after running the count to 3-0.

The local baseballers looked like everything was going easily in the first by slamming "Skip" Barker all over the lot for three quick runs, but in the end they were the only runs off the North portsider. North pecked away at Young in the sixth frame for its two runs.

Cowboy Nine Is Feted By Kiwanis Club

Members of the West High School baseball team last Thursday noon were luncheon guests of the Hilltop Kiwanis Club with M. E. (Jack) Sensenbrenner, president of the club, presiding.

The main speaker for the luncheon was Floyd Stahl, the Ohio State varsity baseball coach and assistant in basketball. Stahl pointed out some of the finer points of the game to the West baseballers, and told them that they were still very much in the City League race. Sensenbrenner then introduced West Baseball Coach George Williams, who in turn introduced the players and managers.

The players were: seniors, Jack Pickens, Dick Culbertson, Dick Kirk, Jim Burke, Ed Easterly, Jerry Solinger and Jim Hamrick. Juniors, Bob Birle, Dan Nafzger, Dave Caton, Paul Thompson, Paul Ellingsworth, Phil Young, Jack Winnestaffer, Tom Wright and George Schmidt. Ruth Moore

Rabbi Folkman

A candlelight inter-faith service will be held at Glenwood Methodist Church Sunday, May 29, at 7:30 p. m. Guest speaker of the evening will be Jerome D. Folkman, Rabbi of Temple Israel and prominent civic leader.

The unique program will feature reading of psalms, accompanied by harp music played by Ruth Moore. This unusual service dates back to Biblical days when psalmists gave utterances of profound religious beliefs while playing the harp.

Members of the Glenwood choir will participate in the service, and the closing response will be taken from the Jewish prayer book.

Special guests of the Glenwood congregation will be members of Temple Israel. Hilltoppers are invited to attend the services.

2 Boys, 8 Girls Reach Top Of West Scholastic Ladder

By Myron T. Seifert

Scholarship looms large in West High School life and a recent survey among 12A graduating seniors at that school reflects the cream of the crop in grades during their sojourn at the Powell-av school.

Two boys and eight girls are on the upper rung of the scholastic ladder, records show. They are Barbara Coffey, 2215 Homewood-av; Margaret Fisher, 310 N. Ogden-av; Helen Gue, 406 Midland-av; Jackie Hardy, 609 Racine-av; Ruth Layman, 523½ S. Harris-av; Don Longmire, 573 Kimball, Rita Leibensperger, 309 S. Burgess-av; Pauline McClelland, 371 S. Central-av; Robert Roller, 28 N. Burgess-av; and Harriet Wallace, 407 S. Wayne-av.

Far From Bookworms

The boys will tell you they're far from bookworms but nevertheless do not neglect their studies, as the records show.

Don comes from Morgan, W. Va., elementary school, John Burroughs and West Junior, where his scholarship was likewise high.

President of the school's "L" honorary group and member of the Triangle Club, Don is a potential candidate for the school's highest honor, "National Honor."

Robert Roller, a Highland Avenue and West Junior product, has aspirations to become a chemist, and has done extensive work as a laboratory assistant at West Senior High.

A regular boy, he is a member of the Spanish Club and library group and has "frequent dates" on week-ends.

"Perfect Student"

Perfect student, according to the school records, is Margaret Fisher, who has maintained an all A, four-point average, in her studies during high school days.

Her sister, Aubrey, in the January, 1950, class, is on the way to setting a similar record there next term.

Coming from Gahanna elementary, John Burroughs and West Junior with high marks, Margaret was definitely assured of scholastic recognition in her high school days.

Only student in her class to rate this mark of achievement, Margaret has her own formula for making all "A's".

"Students should take subjects which they enjoy," the pretty, diminutive blonde says, adding that "application to the best of one's ability is also necessary."

Taking a commercial course in high school, Margaret contemplates becoming a bookkeeper or secretary, following graduation.

Active in school activities Margaret is a member of the "L" Society, Y-Teens, "L" Society treasurer, senior class treasurer and member of the student council.

MEMORIAL DAY TO HEAR SAD NOTES AGAIN

Hilltopper Serves His Country Well-- by Sounding Taps

Fifty-four-year-old John J. Kelly of 370 Guernsey-av is a patriot of the old school and for the last 30 years he has been expressing his love for his country and the heroes who have died for it in a singular way.

Mr. Kelly is a bugler. And on Memorial Day—as he has thousands of times in the past—he will sound taps for those who have died in the service of their country.

Faithful to his chosen duty even in adversity, Mr. Kelly will be on hand at 6 a. m. Memorial Day to sound taps during the ceremonies conducted by the Jeffrey American Legion Post at the local cemetery. Mr. Kelly still is recuperating from an illness which put him in the hospital recently. His physician will allow him only one and one-half minutes to blow taps lest his eye condition, for which he was hospitalized, be aggravated.

The last few years have been busy and sad ones for Mr. Kelly. Often at his own expense, he has stood at the graves of hundreds of young men who have made the supreme sacrifice.

His spine-tingling notes of taps, symbolic of a nation's final tribute to its departed hero, add dignity and beauty to the final rites; his contribution means much to the survivors and friends of the boy being laid to rest—a final leaf in their book of golden memories.

Formerly a member of Camp Chase Post 98 of the American Legion, he now is identified with the Navy Marine Post No. 276 at Memorial Hall, where his services are in constant demand.

Coming to the local Veterans' Administration office from Washington three years ago, John chose the Hilltop as his home, and proceeded to carry on his bugling duties here.

The 28 days' leave granted federal employes is usually occupied by Kelly in these services to his country.

His trumpet, which he acquired more than 30 years ago, cost only $15. He treats it "like a baby." It glitters like gold—and to him it is more valuable, from its association, than any precious metal.

Sounding taps thousands of times has caused Kelly to reflect. When his "time comes" it is his desire that he be buried in his military uniform, and that the bugle, which knew so much service, be deposited next to him in his casket.

During his military career, the trumpet was played by him before thousands of spectators. He and his trumpet were inseparable then, as now.

"In the first World War," Mr. Kelly recalls, "I was with the Fifth Marines of the Second Division. I was in every action participated in by the division. I was in the Marines before the war and played in the band. I played for Presidents Taft, Hoover and Coolidge.

"After the war, I organized and trained drum corps in Washington, D. C., and Alexandria, Va. There were 78 in this drum outfit and we won many prizes. The Costello Post in Washington was one of the best.

"Ever since I was a drummer in the Fifth Regiment band I have been perfecting my blowing of taps. All nations have a good-night call. Ours, of course, is taps blown when all are asleep. The British have their 'Last Post' but taps to me is the most beautiful of all. It is very hard to blow perfectly, especially in cold weather."

Mr. Kelly's son, John Calvin, is a South Pacific veteran, having served in a submarine unit. He has a stepdaughter, Mrs. Ralph Gentile, and lives with Mrs. Kelly and his mother-in-law, now 85, at the Guernsey-av address.

So on this Memorial Day, and every day in the year, we are grateful to John J. Kelly for the part he plays in making the occasion beautiful and significant.

Hilltop Pool Begins 20th Year Sunday

The Hilltop Swimming Pool will begin its 20th year with its grand opening at 11 a. m. Sunday.

The pool reopens for the 1949 season after extensive remodeling, the addition of 2000 square feet of grass beach and the liberal use of aquamarine-colored paint on the interior of the pool.

Bob Case, 87 N. Westmoor-av, owner of the pool, also announces that a new 800 gallons-a-minute well has been drilled to feed the pool.

Coach Dave Randall of West High School again will head the staff of the pool as supervisor, Mr. Case announces. Sonny Navin again will be in charge of life guards.

Swimming lessons will be started on June 15 under the direction of James Seagle of the Franklin County Red Cross.

Season tickets now are on sale at the Valleyview-dr pool, Mr. Case said. Season memberships are priced at $8.

The West High Band Parents Club held its final meeting of the school year Wednesday, May 18. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year; Mrs. Earl Cline, president; Mrs. Lawrence Proper, vice-president; Mrs. H. Fenstermaker, secretary; and Clarence Story, treasurer.

Mrs. E. B. McCrady, past president of the organization was presented with a past president's pin on Tuesday, May 24, at a West High School assembly.

Also retiring this year is Mrs. Dennen Leach, vice-president of the organization. Mrs. Leach has served as vice-president for the past two years and as publicity chairman for the past three years.

2 Boys, 8 Girls Reach Top Of West Scholastic Ladder

fore Rita starts to school next day.

She is an inveterate reader of good books, in addition to her regular school texts.

Another example of efficiency in work is exemplified by Helen Gue, who assists teachers in many clerical duties.

She is a member of Y-Teens, "L" Society and office monitor group, and plans to become a secretary.

Concentrating on her homework before other activities are performed is the secret of Jackie Hardy's superior grades.

Teaches Tap Dancing

In her leisure Jackie teaches tap dancing and is likewise proficient in this. She is identified with the Latin and drama clubs, Occident staff and Band Variety. College is a must for Jackie.

Doing home-work regularly as soon as she gets home from school is the explanation of Ruth Layman's enviable scholastic record. She is office monitor, librarian and book exchange aide. Reading and movies have a vital part in her life.

Dave Starling and West Junior helped Pauline McClelland in her quest for grades. To become a private secretary is her ambition and collecting album records her diversion.

"I generally read the assignment first, then outline the work on paper," is the pattern followed by Harriet Wallace in doing her home-work. Harriet hopes to qualify as an elementary teacher and expects to take her training at Capital University.

West Nine Keeps Title Hopes Alive

to plate Pickens with the Cowboys' first run, and Culbertson moved to second on the throw to plate. Dick Kirk walked, and Morris Dobbs was safe on Barker's bobble of his weak tap back to him, filling the bags.

Bob Birle's timely single to center scored Culbertson, and Kirk came home a moment later when Barker walked Catcher Don Nafzger to force home a tally. That was all of the Cowboys' scoring for the day as Young rounded out to end the inning in which all nine players batted.

In North first, Russ Daye was safe on Caton's error of his weak tap down the third-base line. Bob Blanchard then forced Daye at second, Pickens to Birle, and Young seemed to pull himself out of the hole by striking out Barker. However, Paul Jones, Polar Bear first-baseman, was hit by a pitched ball. Then Don Davis hit to Caton at third, who attempted to tag Blanchard out coming into the bag, but missed the attempt, and the bases were full. Young got himself out of the hole by forcing North's heaviest hitter, Tommy Thomas, to fly out to Culbertson.

From then on, Young sailed with the greatest of ease, pitching no-hit, no-run ball until the sixth frame. In this five inning sprint, only one man reached base against Young, that being a walk to Right-Fielder Dick Schmuck with two away.

Breaks Up No-Hitter

However, in the host nine's sixth, Barker tossed all no-hit chances out of the window by drilling a sharp single to direct center-field. After the latter stole second, Jones plated him with a timely single past Caton. Young then struck out Thomas and got Davis on a ground ball, but Dave Brannan was hit by a pitched ball, and Dave McBride, North third-baseman, smashed a single off Shortstop Pickens' glove. Pickens picked up the ball in short left and threw to Nafzger at the plate to keep the bases loaded.

However, Young walked Schmuck for the second straight time, forcing home Jones with the final run of the inning. In the North seventh, with one away, Barker got his second hit of the day, a double down the left-field foul line, but Young forced Jones to fly to Dobbs in left, and the big pitcher ran the count to 3-0 on Catcher Don Davis. At the moment, it looked as though the winning run might get on. However, Phil put the automatic in there, and Davis whiffed at two straight to end the game in a typical manner.

At the last notice, the Cowboys are to play host to Aquinas this afternoon on the local diamond, and meet South in the season's finale next Tuesday on the Bulldog field.

The line score:

		H	E
West	300 000 0	3	1
North	000 002 0	4	2

Young and Nafzger; Barker and Davis.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR LIVES is one of the trusts the locomotive engineer shares with the Physician. Before the engineer is allowed to pilot a passenger train, he has to serve in minor capacities for years, to learn the function of all the parts of a locomotive, passes many rigid examinations, and is periodically re-examined. He must be mentally and physically qualified to handle the job.

Responsibility for lives is the thought behind the rigid requirements of entry in all Medical Schools, the long years of study, the years of internship and post-graduate work served under experienced Doctors, the thorough and difficult examinations before Medical Boards. All these precautions are solely for the public welfare, and are the result of Medical experience and Medical supervision. Do not tamper with responsibility for lives—keep political hands off Medical education and service.

JOE BRIGGS
Says:
A goat is a lamb who has kidded himself into believing that he knows Wall Street. A housewife looked out the kitchen window of her city home, astonished at what she saw. There it was, no doubt about it, a goat eating the laundry off her clothes line. You can't expect this to happen to your personal property, yet something just as strange might. Our personal property floater insures all your belongings against all loss, anywhere in the world. Ask Joe Briggs for details. 2596 Sullivant Ave. RA. 3194

West High Class Speakers Aspire To Nursing, Medical Professions

By Myron T. Seifert

When 1800 Hilltop friends and neighbors attend commencement Wednesday, June 8, they will hear a prospective nurse and doctor address them.

Strangely enough, the two West High class speakers, Barbara Guffey, 2215 Homewood-av, and Fred Wolterman, 387 Demorest-av, have aspirations to qualify for the allied professions.

Barbara, now a nurse's aide at St. Ann's Hospital, expects to eventually attach "R. N." (Registered Nurse) to her name, while Fred hopes to become an M. D. and surgeon.

These two, were selected in a try-out among a field of nine candidates at the Hilltop school.

Diminutive Fred is a dynamo of energy as any West student can tell you. In fact, he avers, his mother has grown many gray hairs worrying about getting him to his many appointments.

Besides working part time at Seiller's Department Store, his life has been filled with membership and activity in various organizations. He has always been active in church young people's work, having attended summer conferences for five years. He is a past moderator of Columbus area of Presbyterian Youth and its state treasurer. Besides this, he is an officer in Columbus Chapter, Order of DeMolay; a member of the school's Latin and Debate Clubs; and is president of the Drama Club, as well as being on the stage crew.

Master of ceremonies at the 10th Annual Band Variety Show, one of the leads in the senior class play, "Seven Sisters," and a delegate to the Rotary banquet, and reserve basketball cheerleader for two years, are additional activities.

He plans to attend Ohio State University following graduation, is 17 years old and resides at 387 Demorest-rd.

His speech title is "Your Pilot's License."

He has a 3.4 average and ranks 19th in his class.

Barbara's speech title is "A Plea For Common Sense."

She enjoys dancing and playing the piano; likes to watch all sports, especially football and basketball.

"Among all my subjects, I like dramatics best," she said.

"Barb" has kept a collection of perfume bottles ever since she was in elementary school.

Favorites include French fries and spaghetti; Guy Lombardo rates tops with her as a band leader; favorite song at present is "Again".

"I am looking forward to graduating but I surely will miss all enjoyed all my years here at the kids at school. I have truly West," says Barbara.

MAIL BOX

To the Editor:

As the duly appointed memorial and publicity chairman of the Franklin County Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, it is my duty to advise the citizens of the Hilltop that Poppy Days will be observed next Friday and Saturday.

May I urge each of you to join your community veterans' posts in observing Memorial Day. Aid them in making this a real day of remembrance, honoring our honored dead of all wars.

I am quite sure that your Hilltop Legion and VFW posts will welcome you, so join their caravan to the various cemeteries that they are assigned to care for on Decoration Day.

Your VFW Post has the care of Georgesville Cemetery each year and I am sure that the post will welcome your aid by joining them at that service at 2 p. m. Monday.

The two major veterans' organizations will again sell poppies next Friday and Saturday and each organization uses this money for the same identical purpose and each has laws defining how such money must be spent. We urge you to buy a poppy, for our comrades in the veterans' hospitals make them, our ladies sell them and after all expenses are deducted each post participating in the sale receives its pro-rated share, to be marked "veterans' relief fund."

Friends, this is one of the very few collections of funds for relief by any organization where the vast majority of all money collected finds its way to the needy veteran and his family, directly from your own community, veterans' post or auxiliary.

So, if you were one of those persons who promised the veteran so much if he would fight for his country and for YOU, if you were one of the persons who promised him that you would care for his dependents, if he did perish in the war, here is a splendid opportunity to carry out a small part of that promise; if you are one who lost loved ones in the war, we know we have your support.

After The Parade

By BETTY BARCLAY

Where are you going after this year's Memorial Day parade? Perhaps Mother and the girls will rush to their favorite camping spot for the first outdoor picnic of the year — to be joined later by Dad and Junior.

Here are some recipes that should be of interest. Goodies to be prepared beforehand or on the

Canned Spaghetti and Meat Balls For Good Picnic Menu

A wonderful picnic menu, easy and satisfying, can be built around a generous supply of canned spaghetti and meat balls. Heat this tempting, ready cooked dish over your campfire, and serve with crusty buttered rolls, raw carrot sticks and quartered tomatoes, milk and coffee and plenty of fruit. Chunky pieces of raisin loaf cake or a big box of cookies, and a supply of crackers and cheese, help fill up any appetite chinks if a morning of sports has made everybody unusually hungry. The canned spaghetti and meat balls are convenient fare, because extra cans can be left unopened if not needed. The tender meat balls, the well cooked spaghetti and the artfully seasoned sauce give the dish a real chef's touch that will make it a favorite with everybody.

Cocoroons

2 egg whites
½ teaspoon salt
⅝ cup sugar
2 teaspoons light corn syrup
¼ teaspoon almond extract
2 cups corn flakes, crushed slightly, or wheat flakes
1½ cups shredded coconut

Beat egg whites with salt until foamy throughout. Add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating after each addition until sugar is blended. Add corn syrup and flavoring. Fold in cereal flakes and coconut. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased heavy paper on baking sheet. Bake in slow oven (325° F.) 20 minutes, or until delicately browned. Makes three dozen cocoroons.

Salted Peanut Cookies

1½ cups plus 2 tablespoons sifted cake flour or 1⅝ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
¾ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1¼ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
1 egg, unbeaten
½ cup milk
1½ cups wheat flakes, raisin bran or 40% bran flakes
¾ cup chopped salted peanuts

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda and salt and sift again. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour, alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Add flakes and peanuts and blend. Drop from teaspoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 8 minutes, or until done. Makes about 4 dozen cookies.

When you get home, you'll find it very handy to have some cool rennet desserts in the refrigerator. With a beverage and cookies they will touch the spot. Top the desserts with tiny toothpick flags in honor of the occasion.

Vanilla Rennet Desserts

2 cups milk (not canned)
1 package vanilla rennet powder

Set out 4 or 5 individual dessert glasses. Warm milk slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (110° F.) not hot, remove at once from heat. Stir rennet powder into milk quickly until dissolved — not over one minute. Pour, at once, while still liquid, into dessert glasses. Do not move until set — about 10 minutes. Then chill.

Cakes of olden times depended upon eggs for leavening. In 1855 a combination of soda and cream of tartar was introduced. This led, in 1906, to the development of America's commercial baking powder.

Adventist Pupils Visit City Zoo

With tests and examinations over, the children of the Eastwood Seventh-Day Adventist grade school, Union and Ryan-ave, went with their teachers, Fern Locke and Mrs. Robert O'Connell, in the school's bus to the zoo Wednesday for their annual end-of-the-year picnic.

Parents and friends are invited to attend the closing exercises at the school Friday morning. The children will receive their grade cards at noon Friday. Jacquelyn Drake, 47 W. Oakland-av, will receive her eighth grade diploma. She plans to attend the Seventh-Day Adventist Academy in Washington, D. C. next fall.

The local Adventist school has been in operation for over a quarter of a century and is one of about 5,800 elementary schools maintained by the denomination throughout the world.

Adventists operate a worldwide chain of schools from kindergarten through college, as well as advanced and specialized schools in order to provide for their children and young people Christian education which meets the standards of the church, as well as the state.

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

BEATRICE thought, I want to run out and be free. And I stand holding Mrs. Ramey's coat for her, picking up the glove she dropped. And now we shall go to the same tea shop and sit at a table by the window because she wants to go there, because she wants to sit at a table where she can see the people on the street and say mean, petty, nasty things about them. And we shall have tea and pastry, and because of the pastry I won't be hungry for dinner. But I have to have it because it makes her more comfortable for me to have the same thing that she has. And even after I take her home and walk down the steps alone, I shall not be free of her.

Mrs. Ramey turned to the chiropodist to pay him. "I have a charming chauffeur, have I not?" she asked. "For years my husband has wanted to give me a car and a chauffeur. But I have told him not to. Why should I have them when I have Mrs. Farish?"

As they walked down the street Mrs. Ramey asked, "Isn't Marianne coming to spend the night with me any more?"

Not Marianne, Beatrice thought. You may not have her.

Beatrice turned to her and smiled, hating the dishonesty contained in her warm smile. "Oh, children go through phases. One of them is spending the night with their school friends, and the friends in turn spending the night with them. She's dated up for several Saturday nights. They do have a lot of fun."

"Anyway," Mrs. Ramey replied, "I won't have my little darling growing away from me. Think it over, Beatrice."

* * *

She was a lone figure in the park walking over dead, wet leaves. The fog obscured everything that was not within a few feet. Night would come soon after the briefest of twilights. A train whistle, melancholy and close, suggested the exhilaration of travel. To go away, Beatrice thought, and in quiet solitude to trace her inward stress, to scrutinize it, to think through to the larger objective, to struggle toward greater strength . . .

She did not see him until he was so close to her that he had only to reach out his hand to take her arm.

"David!"

He laughed. "Of course. Who else would venture out in this? Do you believe in coincidence, Beatrice?"

"No, I don't."

"Good, because this isn't one. I called your house to inquire about your daughter, and your maid said that you were walking in the park. You wouldn't, by any chance, come to my apartment?"

"No, David, I wouldn't."

"I didn't think you would. It's a pity, too, because it's such a comfortable one. Books and a fireplace. These days when you say you have an apartment, the next thing people want to know is how you came by it. The former tenants had to move because there wasn't room for a baby." He looked down at her and smiled, and his voice seemed not only to speak to her, but also to touch her. "But why don't we just talk about you?"

Beatrice glanced up and smiled. "You take life lightly, don't you?"

"I want to be sure that I laugh last. But lightness is not necessarily flippancy. Don't accuse me of that."

"I don't accuse you of anything."

"You could. You could accuse me of falling in love with you."

"Shall we . . . walk?"

His mouth pulled humorously at one corner. "Very well. Let's walk while I tell you your malady, Beatrice."

"Please don't be serious."

He laughed again. As they moved, he put his hand in the pocket of her coat and held her hand tightly. "Beatrice, you have reached that point in life where to your husband you are not a woman; you are only a badge for his success. There are far too many unloved women eating their hearts out for simple attentions, a little tenderness, for recognition of themselves as women. I'm very sorry for women."

"I've never heard a man say that before. Most of them think that women have such an easy time."

"Because of vacuum cleaners and dish washers? Women have been emancipated, but for what?"

"For tender comradeship."

"So brave and so busy," he said, "and so unsure of themselves, so frustrated."

"What about children?" Beatrice asked.

"You force your children into a pattern approved of by the neighbors. It doesn't seem to matter that they are often pushed beyond their capacities. If a child isn't successful, he's a problem child. Mothers give their love in proportion to the child's success."

She nodded a little sadly. "I agree with everything you say, David. Love has come to have a non-reciprocal quality. Women love, but they do not ask that those they love love them."

The hand upon hers tightened. "I want you to like me too, Beatrice. And that's not as simple as it sounds. It's almost more difficult to achieve than love. You're very lovely . . ."

"You can't see me."

"I can always see you. I am always seeing you."

"You speak in riddles."

"There is no mystery. There is only our unknowing."

Unknowing, she thought. My unknowing? It seems that I don't know anything for certain anymore except this—that when I'm with you, David, I feel no guilt picking at my sleeve, that you, too, have the magic of human warmth. And that I love Porter not with the fierce joy of inrushing life, but sorrowfully.

"Who are you, David?"

"Just a man. A simple man, Beatrice. Life in South Africa is not very different from life here. Both are young countries. I have a house, servants, and I belong to a country club. Don't make me out a brigand, or an adventurer. Can't you understand, Beatrice, that I let life touch me only lightly now, because once it touched me too deeply?"

"A woman?"

"Yes. But she was no good. Beautiful, and corrupt, and as shallow as a stagnant pool. How did you meet your husband?"

"I could tell you, but you couldn't possibly see it as it really was."

He chuckled. "Most men are afraid that women will tell them the story of their lives. I'm asking for a chapter out of yours."

Did she want to remember the dance at the Preston house? She could still see the lovely house festively lighted, the furniture in the drawing room pushed back to make space for dancing, the men from the caterer's arriving, the flowers all over the house. It was her seventeenth birthday, and Clara Preston was giving her her first party. Cecily and Eddie at Cannes had not remembered her birthday until two weeks later, and then their gift had been as ill-timed as woolen mittens given in July.

Beatrice said, "I was standing by the punch bowl in the dining room of the Preston house—the house of Libby's parents—when Porter came in with another girl. I was wearing the most beautiful dress in the world. It was the color of the Caribbean when the day is clear and the sun is shining. When I looked at Porter I had a feeling I had never had before, a feeling of permanence. I had climbed the hill. All the rest—the years with my mother, the years of really not belonging to anyone—were over. For the first time in my life I felt complete. For the first time in my life I knew how much I was going to love being a woman."

That night still throbbed in my memory. They had danced and walked in the garden. Porter had told her he would finish his junior year in college next week. There was so much they had wanted to say, as though everything must be said to each other at once. Yet actually they had said very little, for their hands had touched and spoken more accurately than words. When he had bent his dark head down and kissed her mouth, it had been more than a kiss. It had been a benediction.

She told David, "Porter's mother, a widow, had struggled valiantly to give him a good education. Not until he was out of college did she marry again and go to Boston to live."

David said, "And so you were very young when you married, weren't you?"

"We were married after a little more than a year of frantic letter writing, a few meetings in New York at my mother's apartment, a Christmas vacation spent here walking over the snowy hills, an Easter spent here also unforgettable because it was the last time I'd ever see Clara alive, and after a tortuous summer in New York where I waited through the long days and nights of relentless heat for the telephone to ring." She drew in her breath slowly. "Everyone said, 'Wait!' But Porter had said, 'When I have a job, I'll come for you.' He came one morning in October to my mother's apartment."

Greatest Need? Government Efficiency

By John Kelly

A decrease in taxes—NOT an increase—would make easier our adjustment from boom to normal times. Efficient operations in our government structure—the same methods by which private enterprise either survives or perishes—would make possible a lessening of our tax burden.

"A hodge-podge and crazy-quilt of duplications, overlappings, inefficiencies and inconsistencies with their attendant extravagance," was the recent description of the comptroller general of the United States. His statement was made to a congressional committee.

"It is probably an ideal system for the tax eaters and those who wish to keep themselves perpetually attached to the public till, but it is bad for those who have to pay the bill. That is why the government should put its house in order," he concluded.

The matter of introducing and insisting upon the continuance of real efficiency is particularly timely. The President, in his recent budget message, estimated the deficit at $873 million for fiscal 1950. A deficit at this time would be an "act of national irresponsibility." But adding to our present tax load would hurt far more than help.

Those who are little concerned with the problem ask "where would you cut?" Even if about 76 per cent of our budget is taken up by national defense, foreign aid, veterans, and interest on the national debt we are surely not so carefree as to disregard the remaining 24 per cent. Actually there is plenty of room for efficiency and savings in each.

The nation is paying heavily because the federal government is not running smoothly, and it is the biggest business in the world.

What we are putting up with is shown by the non-partisan Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. It is estimated that as much as $3 billion could be saved annually without changing the functions of the government.

There is a simple way to do away with all this foolishness. Be very sure that your next selection for elective office is qualified for the job he seeks. A flashing personality, or a beaming smile, or the knack of kissing babies is not enough to see us through.

if you want LASTING BEAUTY choose Armstrong's Linoleum

Colorful and attractive though it is, there's nothing delicate about Armstrong's Linoleum when it comes to wear. It seems to become richer and more mellow appearing with age. This is because the beauty of Armstrong's Linoleum is more than surface deep. It's a flooring material that's built to last. And there are no worries about its good looks fading, either, because the colors of linoleum run all the way through from the surface to the backing material. This means that the designs and colors will remain sharp and bright—even after years of hard wear. When you consider this lasting beauty of Armstrong's Linoleum, you'll agree that the initial cost is moderate indeed.

Jesus Prays in Gethsemane

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 14:32-52; Luke 22:39-54.

Jesus took Peter, James and John and went to Gethsemane, and, being sorrowful, He told them to tarry there and watch.

Jesus went a little way from His disciples, fell on the ground and prayed that if possible the trial might pass from Him.

When Jesus came back to His friends He found them asleep, and said, "Couldest not thou watch one hour? Watch ye and pray."

"Rise up, let us go;" said Jesus, "He that betrayeth Me is at hand." Judas came and kissed Him.

Suffer the Little Children TO COME UNTO ME

"For, of such, is the kingdom of heaven."

The Bible teaches us that unless we repent and become as little children, we shall in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven. It further warns us that whosoever teaches evil to one of these little ones, it were better that a millstone were tied around his neck and he were dropped into the furthermost parts of the sea.

For Christ loved the little ones. In the photograph above are shown the faces of many children. Each one of them is smiling. Each feels subconsciously that the world is a wonderful place and that life is good. The teaching of these children is a great responsibility, for "as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

There are three important sources of influence which will mold the lives of these little ones: The home, the church and the school. However well started in life through heredity and environment these children may be, the moral and spiritual teachings they receive at the hands of their parents will do most in determining the kind of lives they will lead. They can be taught trickery and guile, or they can learn faith and fair-dealing.

Once a week, the church gets its big opportunity to advance the spiritual background of the children by giving them specialized training under the direction of a minister of the gospel. Part of the home training given them should consist of the importance of church attendance.

Five days a week, the school teachers will be molding the lives of these little ones. The great responsibility that rests in the hands of our teachers is one that should be fully appreciated in selecting teachers and outlining the courses of study and the methods of teaching.

Water Ballet Will Feature Shrine Follies

When the Water Follies of 1949 appears in the Red Bird Stadium June 3 through 11, the famous "Aquabelles" of the water ballet will be a part of each performance. Proceeds from all 12 shows, including matinees on June 4, 5 and 11, will go to the Aladdin Crippled Children's Hospital Association.

The water ballet is one of the 23 feature acts in the 150-minute show, directed by Noel Sherman, and starring 70 outstanding aquatic and stage performers. The ballet will be performed in the world's largest portable pools, and the technique used by the "Aquabelles" in their featured act, combines many of the movements of the traditional ballet, with the arm movements more frequently associated with the Siva dancers of the Far East.

Tickets, priced at $1.20, $1.80 and $2.40, may be obtained for all performances of the Water Follies from any Shriner, or at the Water Follies box office, Heaton's Music Store, 50 N. High-st, MA. 0200.

13 Students at West Rank High In State-wide Scholarship Tests

Thirteen is not unlucky for 13 West High pupils who made a creditable showing at the recent state-wide scholarship contest held at Ohio State University, George F. Neeb, guidance adviser at the Hilltop school, said this week.

Lawrence Hoover, who placed second in both division and district in chemistry; Fred Brock, who was fourth in the division and fifth in the district in chemistry; Eugene Peters, second in the division and sixth in the district in physics; Don Longmire, third in the division and eighth in the district in physics; Bob Roller, fifth in the division in physics.

Paul Alden, second in the division and third in the district in algebra; Jerry Solinger, third in the division and fifth in the district in algebra; Walter Gibson, fourth in the division and eighth in the district in U. S. history; Warren Northrop, third in the division and ninth in the district in world history; Sue Glass, third in the division and fifth in the district in English XI; Ruth Heffron, fourth in the division and sixth in the district in French I, and Richard Palmer, sixth in the division and seventh in the district in Spanish II.

CROSS QUESTION

You must have lived a thousand years,
To know my heart so well—
Its little hopes, its little fears,
The little things it doesn't tell.

I'm glad to share my secrets, dear,
But what so nearly slays me
Is why, since all my faults are clear,
My virtues are so hazy.

Addition to Plastic Products Plant Is Nearing Completion

THE NEW ADDITION (far right) to the Columbus Plastic Products Co. plant at 1625 W. Mound-st, which will expand the facilities of the rapidly growing firm, is progressing rapidly. It is expected that the addition will be ready for use within the next few weeks. The plant has been at its present location only two years, but the company has been forced to build the new $150,000 wing because of the heightened demand for its products. Although it manufactures more than 50 different items, the mainstay of its business is a plastic coat-hanger. Once completed, the building will house plastic molding machinery in its 15,000 square feet. The firm was organized 11 years ago. G. W. Kenny is president. The firm now employs more than 200 and that number will be increased when the addition is completed.

Shellhaas Preaches At Baccalaureate Services Sunday

By Myron T. Seifert

West High School's graduating seniors and their friends will hear Rev. Joseph Shellhaas, pastor of Glenwood Methodist Church, deliver the baccalaureate sermon for the class Sunday.

During his nine years of service to the Hilltop, Rev. Shellhaas has become a friend of the community's youth, in particular, and he many times has demonstrated his ability to challenge young people to thought and action.

Spiritual leader of Hilltop's largest Protestant church, with a present membership of 3340, he and his church exert a profound influence for good in this community. Glenwood also is the largest Methodist church in Columbus, and second largest in the Ohio Conference.

"Natural" as Preacher

Frequently interpolating his sermons with true-to-life humorous anecdotes, he likes to josh with his audiences. He's a "natural" for a preacher—understands mass psychology as well as the religion he preaches.

With many degrees already attached to his name, including an M. A., D. B., S. T. M., Rev. Shellhaas, now only 53 years old, has all the attributes of a genuine scholar. (Incidentally, he has qualified for all the requirements in his Ph. D. degree at Ohio State except his dissertation, upon which he is now working.)

He is an omniverous reader. Find him in a bookstore, and it will be among the volumes that challenge one's thinking.

His sincere, straightforward way of meeting people gains the confidence of his Hilltop friends, irrespective of denominational label.

He Keeps Busy

Familiar with many of the problems among his almost 3400 parishioners, Joe Shellhaas, they will tell you, never flinches. During his tenure of nine years of

Memorial Day Services Held At West High

Memorial Day services were held in West High School's main auditorium Thursday and Friday.

An appropriate film, "Letter From America", was hailed by both the junior and senior high departments as a picture of education and interest.

The junior high program included two selections from the Junior High Band; a short talk by Cyrus Sedgwick, math teacher, on "The Meaning of Memorial Day". The services concluded with a moment of silence and taps.

Senior High rites were initiated by the pledge of allegiance to the flag, led by Don Fell, Norman Ealy and Cliff Voss.

"Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung by members of the senior graduating class and Walter Gibson read his prize-winning American Legion essay before the student body.

The National Anthem, of course, was sung by the group, and Bob Epps contributed a piece of patriotic creative writing which was read by John Lusignola and Jack Harmer, seniors.

Taps concluded the impressive ceremony.

1949 Occident Now Off Press

The 1949 edition of the "Occident", West High School yearbook, made its appearance at West High this week.

The new volume, graphically illustrated in color, climaxes 10 months of preparation by students. Theme of this year's book carries back to the days of the 1849 gold rush days.

January graduates may receive their books from Myron Seifert, Room 235, at West High School, Tuesday, May 23.

Speed Limits Cut on Rt. 3, Patrol Warns

The State Highway Patrol calls attention to new speed reductions in Harrisburg-pk, Rts. 3 and 62, from the Columbus city limits to a point south of Briggsdale, a three-mile stretch that in 1948 accounted for 78 accidents resulting in several fatalities.

From the city limits to Brown-rd, speed limit is 35 miles an hour. From Brown-rd to Alkire-rd, it is 40.

Highway Director T. J. Kauer authorized the reductions after studying a survey made by the highway department and patrol.

The survey shows that an average of 8135 vehicles pass over that section every 24 hours. It also shows that 21 county roads intersect the highway; that there are 137 driveways, 177 homes, 33 business places, two factories, one school, one church and one open-air theater in the area.

The patrol last year issued 536 warnings to motorists exceeding limits deemed necessary for safety in that area. Speed limit signs were erected in this zone last week.

NEW STOP SIGNS

Attention of Hilltop motorists is called to the installation of stop signs on Hague-av at Sullivant-av. The signs are temporary and will continue to control the flow of traffic at the intersection only until the traffic light is replaced after completion of repaving work in Sullivant-av.

City Hall Rose Show Set for June 10-12

Something new in City Hall flower shows, this time a rose show scheduled for June 10, 11 and 12, is announced by Hilltopper Leo L. McComb, chairman of the event.

Mr. McComb promises that the inside of City Hall "will be bulging with roses in almost every sort of arrangement a person could want in a home." An unlimited variety of rose bushes will be on display outside the building. The City Division of Parks and Forestry and the Columbus Landscape Association will supply about 1500. Some cut-of-town nurseries also will supply a large number.

The rose show will mark the eighth floral event which has turned City Hall into a place of beauty. Annual shows include the tulip and "mum" shows in which Mr. McCombs has an important role.

The Rose Festival will be televised. Roses will be given to members of such civic organizations as Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions Clubs the week before the opening, to publicize the show. A number of attractions will be announced later both in the Record and downtown papers.

The Allied Florists will wind up the show at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, June 12, with a public wedding on the south side of City Hall in a garden setting where thousands can view it.

Books Collected Here Establish Library for Alaskan Homesteaders

Many of the books collected in the Hilltop area by Mr. and Mrs. Mose Williams, 2581 Steele-av, have arrived at their destination in Alaska and have formed the nucleus for the rapidly growing Kenai Library in that village of homesteaders, according to the newspaper. The Forty-Ninth Star, published at Anchorage.

Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Lee of Kenai, personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, sent a copy of the newspaper carrying the article about the Kenai Library to Columbus this week.

The newspaper article says several hundred volumes have been received in shipments from Mr. and Mrs. Williams and that additional shipments have been received from Maumee, O. Another box of books, the newspaper says, has been acquired from the Portland, Ore., Library, and the books are now in Seward, Alaska. The newspaper adds: "They will be brought over by truck as soon as the highway is passable."

The newspaper also notes that the first high school graduation exercises ever held at Kenai were scheduled for last Friday when two girls were to receive their diplomas.

Several of the headlines featured on the front page of the May 1 issue of The Forty-Ninth Star: "Seal Bounty Imperils Eskimos, Warns Trader"; "Misplaces Gun, Kills 250-Pound Bear With Knife"; "Ice Still Solid."

Rt. 40 Widening And Resurfacing Planned by State

Route 40 between Columbus and West Jefferson will be widened and resurfaced. State Highway Department officials said estimated cost of the road improvement is $123,800.

Bids for the work on Route 40 were received by the State Highway Department last Tuesday. The section to be improved lies one mile west of Columbus city limits in Franklin County to the corporate limits of West Jefferson in Madison County. The road will be widened to 24 feet and resurfaced with asphaltic concrete.

Junior High Girls' Camp June 12-19

Fourth-st, a stay-at-home camp open also to girls of junior high school age, "Teen Towners," will begin Wednesday, July 6, and continue through July each Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoon from 12:30 to 4:30. Two days each week will be spent at the YWCA in activities which include swimming with instruction, leathercraft, knitting, basketry and other handicrafts, folk and modern dancing, dramatics, singing, and special projects.

Thursday will be "gypsy day," when the group will picnic and hike, and be conducted on special city tours. Registration for Teen-Towners will be accepted until June 24.

June Brides-To-Be Putting Finishing Touches to Last Minute Wedding Plans

June brides-to-be are watching the calendar a little breathlessly today. After a flurry of engagement parties, bridal showers, and last minute wedding preparations, youthful brides-to-be are anxiously awaiting their ritualistic descent down the aisle.

For most Hilltop June brides, their weddings this month will climax weeks of careful preparation. For many of them dreams of a real storybook wedding with all the lovely pageantry and ritual will come true. Several will wear traditional bridal gowns of billowing white satin, while others will be gowned in pastel street-length fashions. Attendants in soft pinks, yellow and summer blues will form a colorful background for early summer ceremonies.

Baskets of lovely spring flowers will enhance many church and home wedding scenes as June brides will take wedding vows before altars flanked with gladioli, iris, roses and lillies.

Today's brides still cling sentimently to tradition. This is perhaps the reason why so many girls have chosen June, the traditional wedding month, for their ceremonies. The following will be married in June:

Miss Dorothy Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Turner, 2758 Dibblee-av; Miss Jinx Witherspoon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Witherspoon, 172 Lechner-av; Miss Betty Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald V. Gardner, 156 Powhatan-av; Miss Emalene Fansler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Fansler, 789 Norton-rd.

Miss Ruth Evans, 94 S. Harris-av; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Evans of Jackson, Ohio; Miss Irene Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd F. Green, 3046 Crescent-dr; Miss Mary E. Glass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Glass, 593 Wiltshire-rd.

Miss Norma Jean Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Vernon Thomas, 143 S. Eureka-av; Miss Mary Catherine Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ryan, 2139 W. Broad-st.

Tibet or Thibet, central Asia, has a very short but excessively hot summer, especially in the valleys of the Indus and Sampo. It is, however, very cold in winter.

Knowledge is Power

Are Schooldays nearly over for your boy or girl? Have you realized how fast the children are growing up?

For children do grow up . . . which leads me to ask if you've given much thought to your children's future lately? I mean, whether they'll go to college to prepare themselves adequately for what life has in store for them. Almost every boy and girl would like a college education, of course, but wishing is not enough. There are fees to consider, tuition costs, maintenance allowances, incidental expenses and such-like. Fortunately these items, large though they may seem if not foreseen and provided for, can be budgeted with ease by planning proper arrangements in time. I wonder how many of you know that the Educational Policy issued by the Sun Life of Canada has been developed to take care of just such a job. By small, regular payments during a portion of their school years, your boy or girl may be assured an arranged amount for the definite purpose of meeting college fees. This amount would be paid by the Sun Life of Canada each year during the period of collegiate training. At the same time there would also be a monthly income available to cover miscellaneous expenses incidental to education. The plan includes, too, an interesting insurance feature safeguarding both parent and child in the event of the death of either before the primary objective of the contract is accomplished. Successful men and women today will tell you there is no better investment than higher education . . . why not make sure of it?

Cowboys Depending on North To Help Them Share '49 Flag

By Dave Miller

West's baseballers, after a weird win over Aquinas' Terriers by an 11 to 10 score last week, are now depending upon North High's Polar Bears to help them to a co-championship for the 1949 baseball season.

The Cowboys concluded the current season this afternoon with South's Bulldogs on the latter's field. At the same time, Linden McKinley, currently leaders in the City Loop, will face a hot-and-cold North team. Last year the Polar Bears, unpredictable as they come, defeated Central in the last set of games of the year to put the Cowboy into a co-championship with Central.

Again this year, the local baseballers will depend upon their North Side neighbors, whom they beat last week, 3-2, to help them to a share of the title. Linden cinched a tie last Friday afternoon by downing Central, 5 to 0.

Both Cowboys' losses of the '49 loop campaign were to Linden, 9-3 and 5-4. Linden's only loss of the season was to South, 3-2. West downed the Bulldogs in the two nines' first meeting earlier in the year, 7-3. Of course, West will have to take the measure of the Bulldogs again to gain a chance for a share of the '49 championship.

Keep Hopes Alive

Last Thursday, the Cowboys kept their title hopes very much alive by downing a game Aquinas nine, 11 to 10, on the local diamond. It was a loosely played game, with 10 errors, eight of them by the Cowboys.

Bill South, West sophomore, started on the hill for the ultimate winners, and pitched very effective ball for the Cowboys, allowing only two runs and four hits in six full innings of play.

Everything seemed to go along well until a barrage of hits, runs, errors and everything else included in a scorebook hit the Cowboys, and they found themselves behind at the end of the first of the 7th, 10-8 after leading comfortably by 8-2 going into the frame. However, the Cowboys managed to load the sacks with two down in the bottom part of the seventh frame, and their slugging outfielder, Dick Kirk, sent a triple to left field to win the game.

Both Score In First

Both teams scored once in the first, but the Cowboys took the hop on the score by getting four in the second and one more in the third. The Cowboys took a lead of 7-1 in the fifth, with both teams matching runs in the sixth, and then came the near-fatal seventh.

After the Cowboys had built up that 6-2 advantage, West Coach George Williams, not only thinking that victory was in the bag, but also trying to give some of the regular bench-warmers a chance to show their stuff, substituted freely, using every one of the 16 boys dressed, with the exception of Pitcher Jim Hamrick.

Paul Ellingsworth took over first base; Bob Birle remained at second; Dave Caton took short-stop, and Jack Winnestaffer stayed at third base. Paul Thompson started the inning catching, and South remained on the hill. Tommy Wright replaced Morris Dobbs in the outfield, and Solinger and Dick Kirk kept their posts in the outer gardens.

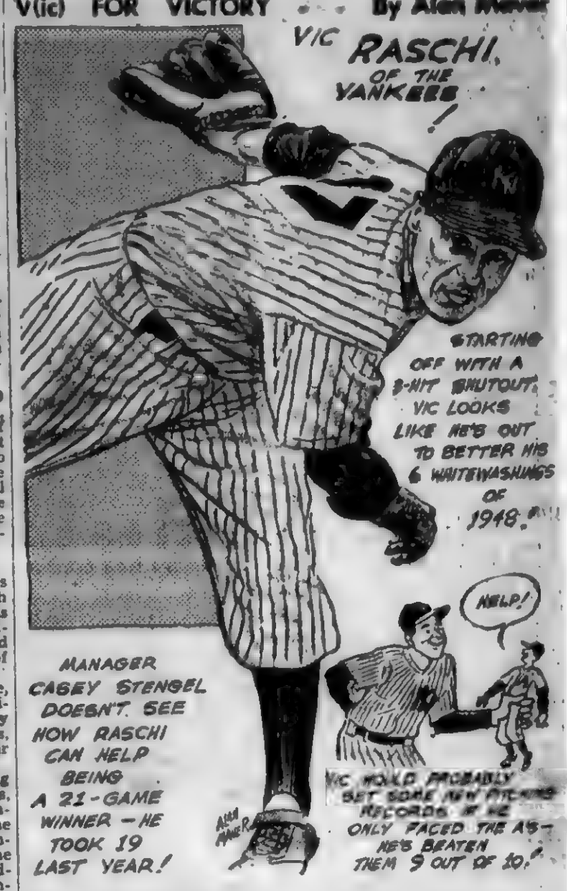
This change met an almost fatal ending, and when Aquinas had finally run out of steam the Cowboys were behind by two runs.

Came the Deluge . . .

O'Brien, the leadoff man of the inning, was safe on Bob Birle's muff of his grounder, advancing on a passed ball and a wild pitch by South. The latter scored when Paul Ellingsworth pulled his left foot off the bag in a play at the initial sack for an error. Schmidt singled sharply to left, and Ort scored when Thompson missed the ball at the plate.

Stapleton then singled home Schmidt, who had stolen second, and South struck out Bechling for the first out of the inning, with the score 8-5. Anthony Casparro singled and stole second to put men on second and third. First Baseman Bob Fogo then hit an easy roller to Dave Caton at short, who let the ball go through his legs for an error, to score Stapleton. Then, Coach Williams, very much "fed-up" with this kind of goings-on, brought in Pitcher Phil Young. Don Outland met the big right-hander's first pitch for a single, scoring Casparro.

The tying run was now on third and the potential winning run on second. After Young had struck out Entz, Don O'Brien hit Young's 3-2 delivery for a single, scoring one tally. Ort then singled to score Outland, and Schmidt's infield hit scored O'Brien with the final run of the inning. Young then got Stapleton on three straight strikes to end the frame, Aquinas leading, 10 to 8.



Three Cowboys Walk

The first two men up in the Cowboys' half of the seventh, Jack Winnestaffer and Bill South, who moved from the mound to right-field in the seventh, both walked. Dave Caton then sacrificed them along. After Young, batting in the No. 2 spot, was called out on strikes, Paul Ellingsworth, representing the winning tally, also strolled, and the bases were loaded with two away.

Entz ran the count to 3-1 on Kirk before the lefty center-fielder, one of the best baseballers in West's diamond history, drilled a long drive to the left field corner, scoring Ellingsworth from first with the winning run, and ending the ball game.

The South game today will end the 1949 season for the Cowboys. In all games they have won 14 and lost 3, losing to Linden twice and Marion Harding in the tournament, winning over Mifflin, Grandview (2), East (2), Chillicothe (2), Central (2), North (2), Aquinas (2) and South.

Grandson of Hilltop Couple Still Unconscious 27 Days After Crash

While most Hilltoppers were relaxing after a busy holiday week-end, one two-year-old boy continued a 27-day battle for his life.

Little John Clark, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, 683 Timberman-rd, has lain unconscious since 10:30 p. m. May 4, when the car driven by his father crashed with another at Northwest-blvd. and Fifth-av.

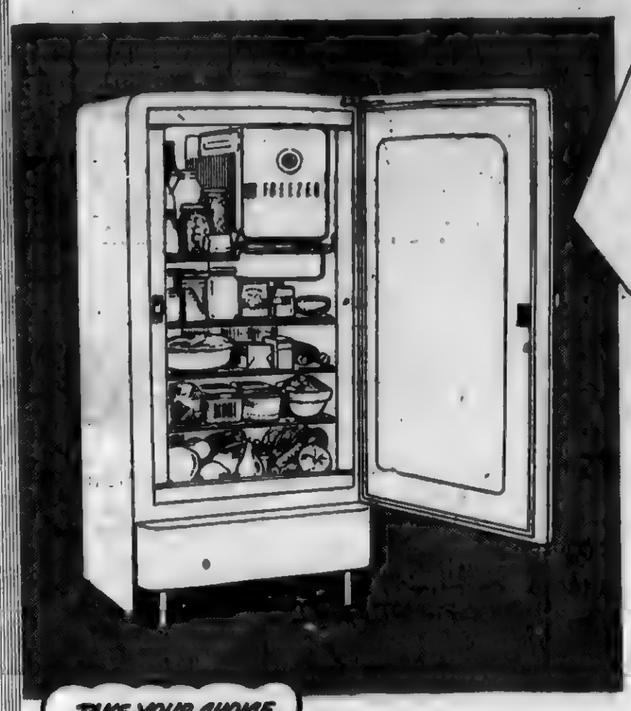
Suffering a brain concussion and a broken shoulder, Johnny was taken to University Hospital, where doctors and nurses worked day and night to bring him out of his coma.

On May 9 under the advice of Dr. H. E. LeFever and Dr. Roy J. Secrest an emergency brain operation was performed. Johnny's blonde hair was shaved and a five-inch opening made in his head. Doctors hoped to relieve the pressure from a blood clot, they feared had formed. No clot was found, but physicians detected a mass of injured tissue.

Following his operation a kidney complication developed, but through the careful work of Dr. Alton Ray, the disorder was cleared up within five days Johnny seemed on the road to health again.

Last Friday, the blue-eyed youngster's fate seemed sealed. His heart stopped beating. But again medical science won the battle. Within a few minutes Johnny's heart had rallied.

Today the thin drawn face of the little child barely resembles the plump mischievous boy, so loved by his father, mother, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Calentine, 737 Eureka-av.



His 21-year-old mother, Marjorie, has every hope for his recovery. The Clark's recently bought a home, so the little fellow would have a room of his own. So far the only room completely decorated is the nursery. Mrs. Clark hopes that it won't be too long until she can bring him home again.

U. S.' INVISIBLE AMBASSADOR

State's Information Service Doing Fine Job Telling World About American Way of Life Through Radio, Films, Books, Magazines

By PAUL SHINKMAN
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Two years ago a United States Information Service truck was visiting a small town in northern China to bring to the people a documentary film of day-to-day life in democratic America.

A delegation arrived from a still smaller village in the nearby hills to request that the show also be brought to their own people. The American officials replied that that would be impossible, since there was no road over which the truck could be driven to the village.

Last year when the same United States Information Service truck again visited the larger town with new films, the same delegation was on hand from the village in the hills.

They proudly reported that they had built a road so that the truck could bring to their people the films showing life in America. The villagers got their show, and will get it again this year.

Lloyd A. Lehrbas, himself a veteran American newspaper correspondent in China and war-time aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, sat behind his orderly desk in the new State department building and remarked that it is such revealing incidents as the one described above that convince him that the gigantic and enormously costly job of selling America to the world is worth while.

LEHRBAS CONTINUED: "We are getting through the barriers of nationality, race, and creed, which are the stumbling blocks to understanding and peace. Our purpose is to cultivate international relations on a people-to-people level.

"We try to give a good over-all picture of the United States and to present the United States government's point of view on all international questions to the people of the rest of the world. That is a new departure from traditional diplomacy.

"Although we take full advantage of the State department's organization, we are primarily a producing wing of the department. We produce radio broadcasts, films, publications, and exhibits for world distribution in 19 living languages."

Lehrbas, who works directly under Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs George V. Allen, said the best indication of the success of this comparatively new government venture is the fact that from the 295,000,000 potential listeners to the Voice of America radio programs alone, an average of 15,000 letters are received each month.

Many of these letters are deeply touching—as in the case of the blind worker in Treviso, Italy, who wanted to know what provisions are made for blind veterans in United States veterans' hospitals.

THE MOST DRAMATIC indication of the diffusion of Voice of America broadcasts behind the Iron Curtain, according to the Department of State, is the recent discovery that the Russian government has set up a number of elaborate installations for the systematic "jamming" of the American programs. Until recently, it could not be definitely ascertained whether air-wave interference was accidental or deliberate.

Actually, according to a recent report by an independent Advisory Committee on Information, the Voice of America is more effective behind the Iron Curtain than it is in the free countries of western Europe, because of the superior competition offered by local programs of the last named.

In addition to the radio programs, the Russian people are supplied—without the interference of their government—with an American library and an elaborate Russian-language monthly publication, Amerika, the sale of which is said to cover more than two-thirds of its cost of production.

"The important thing to remember is that our program is, and must be flexible enough to be readily adaptable to changing international conditions," said Lehrbas, whose entire career as a newspaperman has been one of recording the steady march of world events.

He explained: "For example, we are watching closely the changing picture in the struggle between Nationalists and Communists in China, where our outposts are still functioning in Tientsin and Mukden. We have just begun a new program for Iran, and are recruiting for new Arabic and Ukrainian language operations.

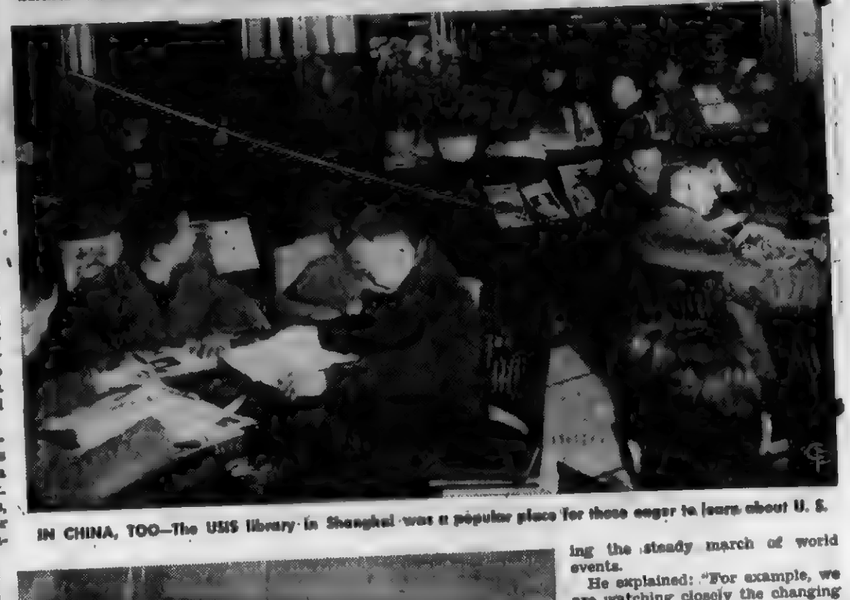
"WE HAVE OPENED additional French provincial offices in Marseilles, Lyon, Strasbourg and Bordeaux, and additional Italian offices in Florence, Genoa, Milan, Naples and Palmero, to say nothing of a new office in Glasgow, Scotland.



"As for the Holy Land, we have opened centers in Tel Aviv and Jerusalem, and reactivated other offices that had been closed down."

Perhaps the most spectacular achievement of Uncle Sam's invisible ambassador-at-large — whose only passport is a radio beam — was the carrying around the world of the entire two-hour ceremony which marked the signing of the North Atlantic Pact in Washington in April.

The addresses of President Truman and every one of the 12 foreign ministers who signed the agreement were carried both in English and in the appropriate translations to the four corners of the earth over the largest battery of shortwave radio facilities ever set up for a single program.

BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN—In Prague, Czechs crowd about USIS office windows to view U. S. photos.

IN CHINA, TOO—The USIS library in Shanghai was a popular place for these eager to learn about U. S.

VOICE OF AMERICA—From New York these girls broadcast to the world.

Tempe is a famous mountain gorge, about six miles long and 100 to 1,000 paces broad, in the northeast of Thessaly, between the mountains of Olympus and Ossa.

Visual inefficiencies are less common among farmers than any other major occupational group. All but 37 per cent pass standard vision tests, says the American Optometric Association.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

FOR many years the theatrical weekly, Variety, has been famous for its terse, jargonistic headlines. When the stock market crashed in 1929, for instance, Variety's front-page banner read "Wall Street Lays an Egg." When a raging blizzard cut Buffalo's theater receipts in half one week, Variety summed up the situation, "BLIZ BOFFS BUFF BIZ." When small-town movie exhibitors turned thumbs-down on rural subjects, Variety headlined "STIX NIX HIX PIX."

It seems that a New York tabloid, however, has decided to give Variety headline writers a run for their money. Its captions have been growing frisker by the day, culminating recently when a strip-tease artist in a Fifty-second Street bistro was pinched on a morals charge. The tab covered the trial, and reported, "Three Judges Weigh Her Fan Dance: Find It Wanton."

• • •

A tender, fragrant little rosebud looked around wonderingly and asked, "What brought me here?" The rose answered briskly, "The stalk, of course."

Dick Briggs New West Hi-Y Head

Dick Briggs, 36 Algonquin-av, will head the West High Hi-Y for the ensuing year, advisers Wayne House and Cyrus Sedgwick said this week.

Other officers elected include: vice-president, Ted Biddison; secretary-treasurer, Chuck Leibensperger; chaplain, Berry Emerick; sergeant-at-arms, Dave Skipper.

Ted Biddison and Chuck Leibensperger will attend Camp Nelson Dodd (Hi-Y training camp) for a week during August, the advisers said.

CIVIC PRIDE

Invest In the Betterment of Your Community by Patronizing Your Hilltop Independent Business Firms

No community in the city can be more accurate in its boasting about Civic Pride than can the Hilltop. Through a great number of years a spirit of community cooperation has developd here that is unlike that of most communities in the nation.

Ask most any Hilltopper and he will tell you he is proud of his affiliation with this community. More people own their own homes on the Hilltop than in any other section of the county. Any Hilltop family that has lived here a while regrets any necessity that removes it from the Hilltop. In other words, once a Hilltopper, always a Hilltopper.

Such a fine spirit has been fruitful in getting things done for the community. It has been a material factor in the improvement of real estate values on the Hilltop.

What is back of this Civic Pride?

Ask yourself the question as to just who these people are who "go to bat" for Hilltop projects! Back through the years and up to the present day you will find that for the most part the active leadership in most every project for civic betterment on the Hilltop has been spurred on by the business people of the community . . . the individually owned businsses. In every event they have been called on and never found wanting. They have contributed much in financial aid as well as unsparingly of their time.

They have done so because you, their customers, are also their neighbors.

So, why not help yourself to a better Hilltop by patronizing these individual business firms. This is one way you can assure this continued Civic Pride.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

SO WELL remembered, that morning Porter had come to take her for his wife . . . Beatrice had been sitting by the telephone, and Cecily had been in the bathroom washing her hair when Porter had come in. He had picked her up out of the chair, and spun her around, and kissed her mouth with increasing and intensifying pressure. Cecily, her hair wrapped in a towel, had then made the most inauspicious entrance in a life crowded with pretty, dramatic entrances. When they had told her what they were going to do she had cried, "But she hasn't a stitch of a trousseau, and not a piece of silver to her name! Oh, you charming, delightful, young idiot, Porter, how can you support a wife?"

"On thirty dollars a week," he had said. He had looked at Beatrice. "But you'll wear emeralds as big as chestnuts, baby, and sables by the yard. How soon can you be ready?"

Cecily had laughed and cried all at once. "But I always wanted to dance at her wedding and look, just look at me!"

"You can dance on our silver wedding anniversary," Porter had told her smiling.

Beatrice had packed her clothes, and Porter had taken her hand, and together they had come out of the apartment building into the sun that was like antique gold. On the way they had stopped and he had bought her a white orchid.

She said to David, "We walked to our wedding to a little church around the corner, and what was said then was said once and forever. 'We were not afraid. Our orbit was ordained. We had the future in us, not singly, but in our togetherness.'"

She and David had come out of the park and were standing where the street lamps and the lights from passing cars were mirrored on the wet asphalt.

"Shall I leave you here, Beatrice?"

"No, David. Walk home with me. This between us must not be a thing of fictitious names and blind alleys."

* * *

She put aside the newspaper and got up and went over to stir the dying fire. It was something to do when she felt she could no longer endure the pressure of silence. The fire renewed, she sat down on the fat little footstool.

"Porter."

He opened his eyes, and Beatrice saw that they were alert at once as if even when he dozed he was on guard.

"Did you say something?"

"I'd like to if you will listen. When I took Mrs. Ramey to town today, she told me she was going to make her will and leave everything to Marianne and me."

He sat up with a start. "You're kidding."

She shook her head. "No, I'm not kidding."

He smiled, but it was a smile without mirth, a little sad, a little cynical. "Well . . . there are your sables, Bee."

Sables by the yard . . .

"Why did you say that, Porter?"

"Aren't they a mark of success? You're successful, Bee. You're very successful."

Inside she felt as if she were being crushed. She thought, The sables will be a mark of my failure as a person. What did Hilde say? 'No person is a failure who has conscience and courage. If I permit Mrs. Ramey to own me and dictate the life of my child, I shall have neither. Nor shall I have integrity or womanliness.

"You've earned them," Porter said. "I hope they keep you warm."

She got up to get a cigarette. The cigarette was finished and squashed in a silver tray on the antique coffee table before the silence was broken again.

"Porter, every year about this time I begin my Christmas shopping." The corners of her bright mouth turned up with an effort that was painful. Was her smile also becoming merely a twitching of muscles? Where was the laughter that once had been in this house? Tonight there was not even any music, and love of music was another thing they had passionately shared in their closeness. "And also about this time of the year I ask you what you think Miss Perkins would like for a gift."

"Oh, Miss Perkins isn't my secretary anymore. Didn't I tell you? Mr. Ramey grabbed her off for himself when Miss Hugo left."

"Miss Hugo left?"

"Yes. Retired. She wasn't quite of retirement age, but she had to have an operation and it was doubtful she'd come back to the office. The old man doesn't want you when you're sick."

Beatrice said, "Mr. Ramey's rule about wives not telephoning except in cases of dire emergency certainly keeps them ignorant of personnel changes. Who is your secretary now?"

"Her name is Bonnie Watson," he said.

She got up and went to the window and opened the curtains, and peered into the quiet street. Many thoughts tumbled in and out of her mind . . . Marianne had got a hundred on her arithmetic paper today . . . She must telephone for flowers for Mary Beth who was ill . . . Without fail tomorrow she must write to Porter's mother about coming down for the holidays . . . She had burned a hole in the skirt of her favorite red suit and that must go to the weaver's the next time she went to town . . . Yet there was something dragging at the corner of her mind. She went back and picked it up again as one returns to pick up a dropped coin.

A year ago when she had been addressing Christmas cards, she had asked Porter Miss Perkins' first name. He had looked a little amazed before he had laughed and said, "Darned if I know! I'll find out tomorrow and call you."

But Bonnie was not a name at all. It was only a nickname.

Porter said, "And by the way, I'll be ten or fifteen minutes later getting home at night from now on. I pick up Bonnie in the morning, and take her home. It doesn't put me out, and it saves her the hardship of two busses to the plant.

"I see . . . Porter, I saw David Jordan today."

"Who?" He did not lift his eyes from the cigarette lighter. "When you go into town again, will you take this lighter and have it fixed? It's worked fine until now." He glanced up suddenly. "Did you say something?"

Beatrice shook her head. "No. It . . . it doesn't matter."

Later in the week Libby telephoned to say that she was driving to New York with David. It was customary for her to go to New York several times a year to shop and to see plays. She always saw Cecily and, therefore, could tell Beatrice about her mother since rarely did Cecily visit Beatrice and her family. It was obvious that Beatrice's conventional suburban life, and Marianne's healthy noises, were not to Cecily's taste. Moreover, in New York it was relatively simple for Cecily to ignore the fact that she was a grandmother. In Beatrice's house where Marianne teasingly called Cecily "Granny," Cecily could smile only a pale ghost of a smile.

Would Beatrice keep in touch with Jane, Libby asked?

"Jane could come and stay with us," Beatrice told her.

"Oh, no," Libby assured her. "She's perfectly happy here with Bessie when I'm away."

Is she, Beatrice wondered?

Beatrice said, "You sound happy yourself, Libby."

There was a pregnant silence before Libby said, "I'm trying to be. Oh, Bee, you don't know how I'm trying to believe."

When Beatrice replaced the telephone to its cradle on the bedside table, she was aware of an immediate and immense relief. Were it not for Jane, she would have wished that Libby had said she and David were going to South Africa, oceans away and out of the periphery of her life. Were it not for Jane. But there was Jane, looking from the summit of her young idealism at their mistakes, judging them. Did Jane ask herself, "Where do I belong? I am the residue of a marriage that failed, the by-product of a love that was severed by the law. Where is my place in your adult world messy with broken dreams and vows? But I am alive. I am almost a woman. You can't ignore me much longer. I have a voice and I will speak, and then you will see the release of the ever-burdened heart of a child of divorce."

Kiwanis Night Ticket Chairman Is Appointed

J. Max McConagha, president of the Northern Kiwanis Club, has been appointed ticket chairman for the Kiwanis Night baseball game to be held at the Red Bird Stadium June 14, when the Red Birds play Indianapolis. The appointment was announced by James R. Riley, chairman of the committee in charge of Kiwanis Night and president of the Downtown Kiwanis Club.

Kiwanis night, sponsored by the United Kiwanis Clubs of Greater Columbus, is being staged to raise funds to send 140 underprivileged boys, age 7 to 16, to camp this summer. The camp sessions will last two weeks each, and will be held at Big Brother Camp near Logan.

Tickets are available from any member of the five Kiwanis Clubs in Columbus — Downtown Northwest, Linden Heights, Northern and Hilltop; and clubs in Circleville, Newark and Lancaster. Ticket reservations can also be made by calling FR. 2-5353. They will go on sale at the Red Bird Stadium box office about May 10. The location of a downtown Columbus ticket booth will be announced later.

A special program, in addition to the ball game, is being planned to make the evening top-notch in entertainment.

Mr. McConagha said today that both individuals and organizations interested in sending one or several boys to the ball game would be furnished bleacher tickets at 50 cents each.

West Side Residents to Continue Fight Against Dump Fire Odors

Harry Andrews, 61 S. Cypress-av, and Bertha Gifford, 83 S. Cypress-av, will continue their fight against the nauseous odors emanating from two private McKinley-av dumps, Mr. Andrews reported early today.

As a result of complaints filed by West Side residents, Common Pleas Judge Myron B. Gessaman has issued temporary restraining orders calling a halt to the dumping of refuse at the two spots and any further fires there.

A $100 bond was the stumbling block for the two West Side residents, who protest that they should not be held liable if the case against Charles E. Henry, 1944 McKinley-av, and George T. Adams, 178 Schultz-av, operators of the dump, should be decided in favor of the operators.

Andrews has not stated definitely what action will be taken. He indicated that he would attempt to get a number of co-signers to the bond to reduce the liability of individuals.

Court action against the two operators was filed by County Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett for the County Board of Health. The health board had acted because of a written protest from 150 West Side residents, some living south of Broad-st, more than two miles from the dumps, against "noxious and nauseating fumes and smoke".

There also had been about 50 telephone complaints, the Health Department said. The $100 was required by Judge Gessaman to cover court costs in case the decision is in favor of Henry and Adams.

Coburn, Paul V. Crosier, William E. Davis, Mrs. Edith McMullin Dines, Robert G. Earl, Virgil L. Furry, Carl F. Glade, Jr., Mrs. Mary Carter Glascor, John B. In Franklin County, more than 400 workers are seeking to raise the county's goal of $30,000. In a similar campaign last year, 3,170 alumni and friends of the university residing in the county contributed $87,744 to the national total of $311,641 from 13,420 individual contributions.

The fund's national goal for 1949 is $300,000. This year as in previous years, the gifts will be allocated to scholarship funds, student aids, research in many fields and projects not normally financed through appropriations of the Ohio General Assembly. In 10 previous years, $1,930,600 has been contributed to the university. One of the general projects of the fund for 1949 is $18,000 for the War Memorial Scholarship Fund, the university's memorial to its 691 World War II dead. In four previous years, $72,000 has been raised toward an eventual permanent endowment of $100,000 for this special fund.

Former pastorates of Rev. Shellhaas include St. John's, 1922; Elida, 1924; Carey, 1926, Wapakoneta, 1929; Bellefontaine, 1935, and Glenwood, 1939 to present.

He and Mrs. Shellhaas reside in the parsonage, 74 Highland-av, south of the church; they have one son, Glen, an attorney in Bellefontaine, and a granddaughter and grandson, of whom they are very proud.

For diversion — whenever he has leisure—he does on routine chores about a farm. Like the souls he mends, he, for example, enjoys mending the fences on his farm, near Bellefontaine, which he sold recently.

Odd Fact

Free "For Rent" classified advertisements were offered recently by "The Olean (N. Y.) Times-Herald" to any landlord who would specify "Children are welcome."
